The Rajah of Puspulla has had the administration of his raj placed under Government control as a punishment for neglecting the proper relief operations, which caused 148 deaths from starvation.

Tantia Bheel has been taken to Jubbulpore to await his trial there.

The Ameer is expected to return to Cabul in the autumn.

The Gaikwar has offered military assistance for the protection of the North-West Frontier. He will probably be required to supply a cavalry regiment.

The Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal is visiting Shillong to confer with the Chief Commissioner of Assam on the regulation of coolie emigration traffic.

The Viceroy commences his north-west tour on October 22nd.

A meeting of planters has been held at Muzuffarpur to adopt measures in support of the Government relief works. The indigo factory has been for a considerable time giving gratuitous relief to 800 souls, and further relief is required to enable the ryots to tide over the next few months.

It is proposed that the Bengal Chamber of Commerce should memorialise the Secretary of State by telegram requesting fuller consideration for the Bengal Railway scheme. Public feeling is greatly opposed to furthering any scheme calculated to increase the existing overgrown monopoly of the East Indian Railway. A competing line is essential to open out trade, which is already greatly hampered and obstructed.

BURMA.

RANGOON, AUG. 31.

A letter from the Viceroy has been published expressing regret that Prince Albert Victor is unable to accept the invitation recently sent to him to visit Burma. Much disappointment is felt at this decision. If his Royal Highness visited Burma he would have a brilliant reception.

Sir Charles Crosthwaite has issued a circular inviting subscriptions from members of the Civil Service in Burma to a memorial to commemorate the services and preserve the names of their comrades in all branches of the civil administration of Burma who, since the annexation of Upper Burma, have lost their lives in the field, or by wounds or by sickness contracted in service. It is to be regretted that the general public have not been also invited to join in the movement. It would certainly have been cordially and generously supported by all classes in the province where those officers met their death in discharging their duty, in many cases under circumstances of great heroism.

A large dacoit band has appeared in the south-east Allanmyo district near the old frontier. It is reported variously to be from 150 to 300 strong. They assembled about 20 miles north of Allanmyo, and burned the police guard-house. A force, consisting of 300 British mounted infantry, sepoys, and police, has been despatched to attack the dacoits. Major Grey, Deputy Commissioner, is in charge of the operations. It is believed that this band consists of dacoits driven from Magwe during the recent operations in the Magwe and Taungdwingyee districts. The dacoits are being vigorously attacked. Since the 17th of June seventeen dacoit Bohs have been killed or have surrendered, 198 dacoits have been captured or have surrendered, and 120 guns have since been taken or given up. Two somewhat serious attacks on villages by dacoits are reported from the Bhamo districts. In one case the sound of firing during the attack could be distinctly heard at Bhamo. The Kachyens are again troublesome. A reinforcement of 100 Goorkhas have been sent to Sikaw from Magoung.

It is reported that a Government steam launch has reached Endawgye to take from the Irrawaddy the Commission appointed to delimitate the Siamese frontier. It is presided over by Mr. Ney Elias, of the Consular Service, and includes Mr. Scott, Assistant Superintendent of the Shan States, and Mr. Archer, Vice-Consul at Zimme. The Commission meets in November on the Salwen frontier.

The local government have issued a circular stating that certain specimen stones found at the jasper mines in the Shan State of Momeik, and supposed to be and resembling rubies, are proved on examination by experts at Calcutta to be tourmaline of an opaque kind, and of no commercial value. It is stated that a considerable number of persons are engaged at the Momeik mines in extracting these stones, a duty being levied by the Tsawbwa.

BURMA AND SIAM.

A FRONTIER COMMISSION.

CALCUTTA, AUG. 30.

The questions concerning the boundary between Burma and Siam are to be settled by a Commission, which is to meet on the frontier in December. The Siamese Government claims suzerainty in Eastern Karenni and over some small trans-Salween States. There are also to be settled some boundary disputes between Siam and Kianghung, and some claims against Siam for its interference in the Karoni forests.

Mr. Elias, C.I.E., Political Agent for Beluchistan, is to be the chief of the Commission, and he is to be accompanied by Mr. J. G. Scott, Assistant-Superintendent of the Shan States, a survey party, and an escort under Major Barlow.

INDIAN FRONTIER DEFENCE.

CONTRIBUTIONS OF THE NATIVE STATES.

CALCUTTA, SEPT. 1.

The offers of the Native States to assist in providing frontier defence will place at the disposal of the Government some 27,000 infantry and cavalry, one battery of 16 guns, two Maxim guns, a transport corps of 1,000 ponies fully equipped, and a camel corps 500 strong. The work of organising these various contingents is being rapidly carried out.

THE AMEER'S RETURN.

The Ameer of Afghanistan will return to Cabul in the autumn. The precise date of his arrival is not yet known.

THE BOMBAY MAILS.

A strong protest is being made by all sections of the Bombay community against the propcsal of the Home Government to fix Sunday for the departure of the homeward mails. The Bishop has drawn up a memorial for signature, and the Government of India supports his objections.

THE CRAWFORD CASE.

(REUTER'S TELEGRAMS.)

SIMLA, SEPT. 6.

The Secretary of State's despatch on the subject of the measures to be taken in regard to the mamlutdars, or native officials, shown to have been guilty of corruption in connection with the Crawford case, has now been considered by the Government, and the question will shortly be settled. The worst offenders will be placed on the retired list, receiving compensation, and a special Act will be passed by the Legislative Council guaranteering them against further prosecution.

A Reuter's telegram from Simla says that the Viceroy will leave on October 22. His Excellency will visit the Kohet Pass, Peshawur, the Gomul Pass, and other frontier stations, subsequently returning to Lahore, whence, after a short halt, the Viceregal party will proceed for Calcutta, arriving there on Nov. 30. General Sir Frederick Roberts, the Commander-in-Chief, will accompany the Viceroy along the frontier.

ANGLO-INDIAN PRESS.

THE "UNCOVENANTED" PENSIONER.

(Bombay Gazette.)

To make the position of the uncovenanted pensioner who resides in England or the colonies quite clear to the general public, it is necessary to consider the pensions of other branches of the Indian Services. The "Covenanted Civil Servant" was originally restricted to a pension of £500 a year if paid in Europe, or Rs. 5,000 a year if paid in India, and there can be no doubt that this is why the Uncovenanted Servant's pension was limited to the same amount; the Covenanted Civil Servant, however, had also an annuity fund, to which he was compelled to contribute four per cent. of his official salary from the beginning to the end of his service, and from this fund he also received an annuity of £500 or Rs. 5,000 a year, according to the place of payment, and he thus received in all an annuity of £1,000 a year. This annuity fund has for many years ceased to be a fund, the four per cent. deduction still continues, and the Covenanted Civil Servant's annuity continues to be £1,000 a year if paid in Europe. If paid in India, the rate of exchange for the Bengal Service is Rs. 10⅔ for each pound sterling, and for the Bombay and Madras Service Rs. 10·65 for each pound sterling, but as these rates, though legally binding on Government in accordance with the agreements under which the annuity funds were taken over, are impracticable ones, an annuitant who is permanently resident in India is allowed to draw his annuity in this country at the official rate of exchange which at present is one shilling and fourpence halfpenny per rupee. The Covenanted Civil Servant, although he pays for half of his annuity in the depreciated rupee, is thus still allowed his £1,000 a-year, while the Uncovenanted Officer, no matter how high his salary, is restricted not to £5,000 a-year (the portion of the Covenanted Civil Servant's pension originally provided by State funds), but to Rs. 5,000 a-year, payable at the official rate of exchange. Judges of the High Court are, while on duty, all paid alike in rupees whether they are Barristers, Covenanted Civil Servants, or Native Judges, but when they go on leave or retire a distinction is made between the "Judge" and the "Native Judge." A "Judge" other than a "Native Judge" receives a furlough allowance of £1,000 a-year if paid in Europe, and Rs. 10,000 a-year if paid in India, while a "Native Judge," whether he is paid his leave allowance in or out of India is restricted to Rs. 700 a month or Rs. 8,400 a-year. Similarly, on retirement a "Judge" other than a "Native Judge" receives a pension of £1,200, while the Native Judge is restricted to Rs. 9,000 a-year; and the European Uncovenanted Civil Servant of a standing equal to, or almost equal to, a Judge of the High Court may, we think, be excused if he fails to see the equity of the rule which gives him a rupee pension while the European High Court Judge is granted one in sterling, which, even at the conventional rate of two shillings per rupee, is one fourth higher than that of his Native colleague.

Barristers holding a few specified offices have rules which entitle them to sterling pensions on most favourable terms; an invalid pension of £300 a-year after six years and nine months' service in one or other of the favoured appointments; an invalid pension of £500 a-year after active service of eight years and eight months, and a retiring pension of £750 a-year after eleven years' active service. No doubt Barristers of experience who join the Government service at a mature age require somewhat different pension rules to officers whose whole career, from their schooldays to their retirement, is spent in the service of Government; but such officers are all, or nearly all, recruited from the Indian Bar, and we can see no legitimate reason why their pensions should be in sterling while those of their fellow-Uncovenanted Servants are in rupees. Nor can we see any reason for restricting these special rules to "Barristers" holding about six offices in all India, that is to say, to the Chief Judges of the three Presidency Small Cause Courts, the Recorder of Rangoon, the Barrister Judge of the Lahore Chief Court, and the Secretary to the Supreme Legislative Council. Other high officers of the Uncovenanted Service (we are obliged over and over again to use the objectionable term to make ourselves clear) have reason to complain if they are restricted to a pension of Rs. 5,000 a-year after twenty-five years' services, when officers of no higher standard and much less service are granted nearly double the sum, and are secured their pensions in sterling. Why should the Comptroller-General, for example, the Chief Magistrate of Presidency Towns, or the Coroner of a non-regulation province, receive, after twenty-five years' service, a rupee pension which yields only £343 15s., with no guarantee that the amount will not be still further reduced by the vagaries of the rupee, and the favoured barrister, who performs duties of no greater importance, be granted £750 a year for eleven years' work. The same analogy is to be found in the case of the chaplains and others, to which we will not now refer. The Under-Secretary of State recently admitted the good service rendered by the Uncovenanted Service of the State, but declined to increase the burden of the Indian tax-payer by giving the service sterling pensions. We are inclined to agree with him that the sterling pensions cannot in the present state of the finances be given in every case, but we think that the restoration of the £500 limit of the Uncovenanted pension is incumbent on Government by a well-understood moral contract, which should be as binding on an upright Government as the more strictly legal contracts which secure to the Covenanted Civil Service, chaplains, and others, their sterling pensions.

THE SAME.

(Bombay Gazette.)

We referred the other day to the fact that not Covenanted Civilians only but military men and barristers receive their pensions in sterling, while the Uncovenanted alone, who originally were paid on the same scale, are now the victims of an unforeseen depreciation of the silver currency, and are paid really one-third less than they have fairly earned. In addition to those more fortunate, whom we have already specified, we come to the chaplains, whose pension for the full period of his service is fixed at £365 a year. This pension may be earned by only seventeen years' active service, while in the Covenanted Civil Service twenty-one years are required, and in the Uncovenanted twenty-five years. On these and other considerations it was evidently intended to give the chaplain something less than the "half-average emoluments" for the last five years of his service, the amount which would (subject to a maximum of Rs. 5,000 a year) be granted to an Uncovenanted officer. The emoluments of a chaplain during the last five years of his active service are always Rs. 800 a month, unless he attains to the dignity of Archdeacon, when it is above that figure. Half of Rs. 800 a month, calculated at two shillings per rupee, equal £480 a year, and as this was deemed too much for seventeen years' Indian work to an officer who would probably succeed to a benefice at home, the Archdeacon and chaplain was restricted to £365, or to £135 less than the maximum pension of an Uncovenanted officer; but, fortunately for the chaplain, who nearly always retires to Europe, nothing was said of the rupee equivalent of £365, and in the current official year the retired chaplain draws £365 a year, while a retired Uncovenanted officer, say, for example, a Director of Public Instruction, who drew three times the chaplain's Indian salary, draws £343 15s. instead of the £500 originally promised to him. It is sinning against nature to expect a retired Director to consider himself without a grievance. "Civil Engineers and Telegraph Officers" are amongst those now agitating for the sterling pension, and this, notwithstanding the fact that of late years they have been more successful in obtaining redress of some of their grievances than any of the Branch of the so-called Uncovenanted Service. They are allowed to count a certain portion of their leave as service qualifying for pension—a concession which the main body of the Uncovenanted Service has contended for in vain—they have a special set of pension rules, more favourable than others, and "special additional pensions" for serving as Chief Engineers or Superintending Engineers in the Public Works Department or Directors in the Telegraph Department, and many other concessions embodied in a special chapter of the Civil Service Regulations. A Chief Engineer of twenty-five years' service, of which three years may have been spent on leave, is entitled, not only to the ordinary Civil Engineer's pension of Rs. 5,000 a year, but to an additional pension of Rs. 2,000 a year as well, making up Rs. 7,000 in all, and this seems, when expressed in rupees, a most liberal concession; but when it is remembered that this officer probably originally entered the service when the rules expressed the maximum of the ordinary pension as Rs. 5,000 or £500 a year, he does not probably think the special addition of Rs. 2,000 to his pension a very liberal concession, seeing that in 1889-90 he is paid in England, not £700 for his Rs. 7,000, but only £481-5. The grievance of the Uncovenanted European Officer in this matter of pension is a most real one, but at the same time it is admittedly one most difficult to deal with. It is not to the advantage of India that officers who have retired from her service and who think proper to leave India and draw their pensions in England or the colonies should be allowed a bounty of from forty to fifty per cent., nor is it, on the other hand, desirable that the European Services in India should be in a chronic state of discontent. Probably the only way to remove all cause of discontent from the Services in the matter of exchange is to assimilate currencies of England and India; but this cannot be done in a hurry. Something should be done to remove the causes of discontent. The fall in the value of the rupee from two shillings to sixteen pence is, no doubt, a misfortune to the Government European Services; it is scarcely one that Government can compensate in every case; but that it might well restore to the Uncovenanted Service the limit of £500 to pensions paid in England, which was so summarily removed some years ago. We have already shown that a sterling maximum is still applicable to all furlough allowances paid in England. Nominally an officer on furlough is allowed "half his average salary" whilst on furlough, but to this half-salary certain maxima are applied, and the sterling maximum is not now attained by so many officers as in the good old two-shilling days, but it still applies to those whose salaries in rupees, calculated at the official rate of exchange, yield a sterling sum equal to or exceeding it. Nominally an officer retires on "half his average emoluments" (the term emoluments not including some important items deemed to be "salary" for leave allowance purposes), but to these half emoluments a maximum of Rs. 5,000 was applied only if the pension was paid in India, while if paid in England the maximum was £500. The £500 maximum was, as we have said, arbitrarily removed some years ago, and we think that it is not too much to expect that Government will restore it. The restoration would not apply to very many officers, but it would apply to some. The anomaly regarding the chaplain's sterling pension compared with that of the retired Director of Public Instruction, to which we referred above, would disappear, and so would many others, and there would be a symmetry between the leave and pension rules, which is now wanting.

HOW THINGS (LEGAL) ARE MANAGED IN CEYLON

(Ceylon Observer.)

The devices of dishonest debtors are said to be great, but sometimes they are circumvented by the acts of honest creditors in a way that is very peculiar to Ceylon. 'Tis said that where a man is summoned on a forged deed or a pro-note he generally, finding the facts too strong for him admits the note, says it bears his signature, and produces a forged receipt of payment. It is so much easier and simpler. So if a man has a fight with his neighbour and gets worsted he invariably charges the aforesaid neighbour with highway robbery, and swears by the tooth of Buddah that he was waylaid, assaulted and robbed of his comb, umbrella, and handkerchief, with a couple of rupees tied on to a corner for safety. The man charged, however, never admits the fight. He denies he was present there, and has recourse to an alibi. The native wedarala is immediately requisitioned, and he is prepared to swear that at the particular moment he, the accused was sick unto death at his house, and he, the wedarala, spent the day and night with him ministering to his wants. Sometimes the village lawyer, too, is equal to whatever occasion may arise Lawyer Blank, 'tis said, on one occasion quoted an authority to a new-fledged magistrate, a decision of Mr. Justice Dash, quite to the point, but unfortunately he didn't remember the number of the case nor the Court. His opponent was equal to the occasion. "I remember the case perfectly well," said he, "but that decision has been overruled." Lawyer Blank was hoist with his own petard. There never was such a case in existence! But to return to this particular case. It would seem that no fiscal's officer would or could get at the debtor, who carefully kept within locked, bolted, and barred doors. For months he thus eluded the fiscal's peon and the irate creditor. At last even the creditor's patience was exhausted. He took counsel with an outdoor proctor and laid his plan.

On a certain day an old woman might be seen, as the novelists phrase it, wending her way to the Courts. She is old, very old. Her looks are haggard, and she totters in her gait. Her head is bandaged, and drops of blood might be seen on her raiments. She complains that on a particular day the aforesaid dishonest debtor beat her with clubs and sticks. The magistrate issues his warrant forthwith for the arrest of the scoundrel. No bolted door can save any man from a criminal warrant. He may be arrested anywhere on any day. And he is arrested, is brought to court, but the complaining old woman is not present. She cannot be found; and accordingly the accused is discharged. But by a very strange coincidence may be seen the erewhile befooled creditor on the outer verandah of the Court, wearing a grim smile, and the fiscal's peon with his warrant behind him. The man is arrested, lodged in Her Majesty's jail, specially built for those who pay not their debts. The creditor has scored at last, and he gravely advises his debtor not to assault old women in the future—not unless he has paid all his debts!

THE INSPECTOR OF LABOURERS' SHORTER CATHECISM.

(Indian Planters' Gazette.)

What is a Tea Garden?—An estate cultivated with tea with a view to making a profit, but it should really be looked upon as a means by which Government may indulge in a vicarious benevolence with much kudos to itself and at no expense.

What is a Tea-Planter?—He is, as a rule, an English gentleman of good education, who, by coming to Assam and taking charge of a tea garden, is immediately transformed into a brutal and unscrupulous planter.

What is the Chief use of a Planter?—To distribute to his coolies at his own or his employer's expense the comforts generously ordered by our benevolent Government; and to pay Income Tax.

Are there any other uses to which a planter can be put?—Yes. He can be made a Registrar of Vital Statistics without remuneration, he can be summoned on the jury in native cases, and owing to his helplessness he is a good subject for experimental criminal jurisprudence.

In what legal aspect does a Planter generally appear!—As a finee.

For what can he be fined?—There are many things for which he can be fined; for instance: for not sending in his returns the day before they are due, for allowing his coolies to assault him, for not allowing a coolie to absent himself from his work and thus reducing the average pay for the month, for compelling a coolie to go to his work against his will, because Boodoo's pig has broken down the wall of Seeboo's house, because Lutchminia has stolen the thatch from Rupni's house, and the roof is therefore not water-tight, &c., &c

What is a Coolie?—A coolie on his native heath is scarcely changed from the semi-apes who ranged prehistoric India; he is known as the working man of India; because he does so little work he is recognised by the good people of Exeter Hall as a man and a brother, because he is as ignorant as they, but by becoming a labourer under Act I. he is suddenly transformed into a gentle, inoffensive, hard working being, and is deservedly an object of the tenderest care and solicitude on the part of the Government to protect him from his brutal, unscrupulous employer.

What is the chiefuse of a Coolie?—To be inspected.

What is the chief duty of a Coolie?—To encourage inspecting by false complaints, by refusal to work, by stirring up mutiny and by utter disregard and neglect of all the sanitary regulations made in his behalf; and to assist the revenue by his liberal patronage of the out-still system.

SIND RETAINED BY BOMBAY.

(Times of India.)

There could be no more welcome announcement to those who take an interest in the growth and prosperity of the Presidency of Bombay than the one that the question of stealing Bombay of Sind and annexing it to the Punjab has been finally abandoned. Now that Sind has been preserved to us, every effort must be made to make the people of Sind anxious that the union between us and them should continue. The gravest argument for the annexation of Sind to the Punjab will be the expressed wishes of the people. But this wish can only be created by the stupidity or indifference of the Local Government. No doubt, in the past the Bombay Government may have been guilty of sins of commission and omission, for even the Bombay Government is fallible and peccable. But that Bombay has striven to do her duty towards Sind, and that her administration of the province has been a marked success, are facts beyond the region of doubt and argument. Bombay has given to Sind its ablest men to administer the province, and has left them practically unhampered. To these men Sind owes a debt of gratitude for the care with which her interests have been protected and advanced. But in the future it will be difficult to get men like Bartle Frere, Mansfield, Erskine, and Pritchard to go to Sind as Chief Commissioners, because the emoluments of the office have been reduced. This reduction is a very grave blunder, but it has been done at the recommendation of the Finance Committee. The political importance of Sind cannot be exaggerated, and we should have supposed the work and responsibility of governing it as great as the administration of Assam. The Chief Commissioner of Sind is in his own province a Governor, and he has to keep up the state of a Governor. This costs money, and so do the entertainments which he is bound to give. The Finance Committee forgot that Kurrachee is more important than the capital of Assam, and situated nearer to the civilised world. Viceroys and Governors pay frequent visits to Kurrachee, and their presence means considerable expenditure to the Chief Commissioner. Nobles, lords, and globe-trotters of all degrees now flock to Sind to see the frontier, and have to be entertained. If the emoluments be reduced to the level of the other Commissionerships, no sane man will accept the office in preference to them, and Sind will not, as in the past, get the very best men from Bombay to govern the province. At present it is not Bombay which is governing Sind, but Sind is governing Bombay. Sir Raymond West is a Sind man, having held for some time the post of Judicial Commissioner, and Mr. Pritchard is the Chief Commissioner of the province. There is no danger of the interests of the province being neglected by the present régime. The Bombay Presidency owes a debt of gratitude to Lord Cross for his decision not to deprive Bombay of a province united to us by so many ties, and it is to be hoped that the future development and prosperity of Sind will prove that his decision was that of a wise and far-seeing statesman. The history of Sind since the annexation is the history of commercial progress, and there is every reason to hope that the progress will continue with rapid strides. A few foolish people have propagated the idea that Bombay is jealous of Kurrachee. But the leading firms at Bombay have branches at Kurrachee, and are as interested in the prosperity of the port as those who reside there. It only requires the completion of a short line of railway, or the establishment of a daily mail service to make Sind in every sense a part and parcel of the Bombay Presidency.

THE EDUCATION OF ENGLISH OPINION ON INDIAN SUBJECTS.

(Bombay Gazette.)

What is the East India Association doing to allow the Royal Colonial Institute to secure the most interesting speakers on Indian subjects? The principal effort made last year to enlighten the public on a topic relating to the Eastern dependencies of the British Crown was a paper read, not before the East India Association, but the Royal Colonial Institute, by Sir W. W. Hunter, entitled "The New Industrial Era in India." Similarly this year we owe the chief contribution, not to the Indian, but the Colonial organisation. The fact that the authorities of the Institute in Northumberland Avenue have, as it were, taken India under their wing, as evidenced by their invitation, first to Sir William Hunter, and next to Sir Lepel Griffin, to address the members of this extensive and influential society, ought to put the Council of the East India Association on their mettle. Every year the latter body seems to grow more feeble, and unless something is done to prevent its decay, it must cease to exist. We should be very sorry, indeed, if this should ultimately be the fate of the Association, which gave promise on its formation of being of real value to India and to England. Now that an agency has been established, apparently on a firm footing, to put before the British public one side of Indian polemics, the importance of having some neutral body like the Association is greater than ever. The East India Association ought to be to this country what the Royal Colonial Institute is to our other distant possessions. How very far from being an ideal association it is at present! Into the causes of the paucity of notable papers lately read to the Association, we need not now particularly inquire, but if gentlemen of distinction from India or those who have made a special study of Indian problems should prefer to make known their views through the Society of Arts or the Colonial Institute, no one need be surprised. If the average attendance at the meetings of the East India Association is compared with that of some of the more vigorous bodies of a kindred nature it will be seen that the difference in favour of the latter is very considerable. Now, there is no reason why the gatherings of the East India Association should not be equally popular, but that result will not be attained, as we have heard it suggested, merely by holding the meeting in the evening instead of the afternoon. If the East India Association is to occupy its proper position, and be the common platform for men of different races as well as of diverse opinions, it will be necessary to infuse more energy into the management. A splendid opportunity for giving the Association a fresh start presented itself the other day when the question of the Congress versus the Patriotic League was raised in a moderate and somewhat sensible address by a young Bengal civilian. The adjourned discussion took place in a tiny apartment of the Westminster Town Hall, and the audience, to make a liberal estimate, probably consisted of thirty persons, including chairman, lecturer, officials, reporters, and door-keeper? Considering the nature of the subject and the interest it has excited among, to say the least, a large portion of the people of the United Kingdom, the smallness of the attendance would have been remarkable if it had been in any way unusual. With a little trouble the largest room in the building might have been filled, and we do not hesitate to say that if the same discussion had been organised by any other society but the East India Association the meeting would have been as crowded as it was meagre, and the discussion as valuable as it was, comparatively speaking, useless. We have ventured to offer these few words of criticism in our desire to make it worthy of the rôle it is supposed to fill.

EXPULSION OF BRITISH INDIANS FROM THE TRANSVAAL.

(Madras Mail.)

It was stated some time ago from Calcutta, that Haji Noor Mahomed Zakaria, the Secretary to the local Mahomedan merchant community, had received a telegram from Johannesberg stating that the Transvaal Government had decided to class British Indian merchants with Turks and Chinese as aliens, and had peremptorily ordered them to leave the towns within its territory. This information was not believed to be accurate at the time, but now that the Government of India has received independent confirmation of the truth of the rumour, it can no longer be doubted. It appears that a number of Indians have settled in the Transvaal, as under the terms of the London Convention they have a right to do, and their investments in goods and buildings represent a capital of some £300,000. At Johannesberg, the centre of the well-known gold fields of that name, and about thirty miles from Pretoria, these Indian settlers form a very important and influential part of the population, with a large share of the trade. As expulsion would mean ruin to most of them, the necessity of immediate action for the purpose of securing them in the enjoyment of their rights as British subjects is sufficiently apparent. As they have a perfect right under the terms of the above Convention to settle in the country, it is to be hoped that the Secretary of State will immediately set to work to prevent this injustice being done to them. This action on the part of the Boer Government would seem to involve a clear breach of treaty rights, and it is only fair to insist that the British Government should step in, as it did in the Delagoa Railway affair, and protect the rights of its subjects.

A POLICEMAN ON TORTURE.

(Civil and Military Gazette.)

He spoke in aggrieved and sorrowing accents. But his sense of injury was stirred by the prohibition of torture; for he was in sympathy with that institution, and a friend to it. He admitted this to me. This candour was in consequence of an indemnity which, like Lord Reay, I offered him, promising that if he spoke the truth there would be no more said about it. I would pardon all corrupt and unlawful practices. Of course I had no business to make such a promise, but I made it after considering that it was the only way to gratify my curiosity. Besides, it hurt me not.

He argued for torture on high moral grounds, and his views on the subject were not only interesting for their insight into human nature, but came, as it were, stamped with high authority. There was a professional air in his explanations and in his instructions. He had discovered that public opinion was against torture, and he was anxious to know whether it was enlightened public opinion. He could not believe it was the outcome of wisdom. He thought that people were yet ignorant and subject to prejudices. He reasoned with me about torture, confessing that the objections to it had often puzzled him, and that if anything made him marvel at our peculiarities it was in this matter. He thought we were conceding too much to public opinion at Home, which he held to be owing to our remissness in not explaining the benefits of torture. We should instruct Parliament on the subject.

"To suppose," said the policeman, "that the mere twisting of a thumb is anything objectionable, is to suppose a curious thing. We should," he said, "judge of these things sensibly. What does the mere twisting of a thumb amount to? It amounts to this," said my policeman impressively, "we sometimes discover the crime. But the sahibs," said he in a disconsolate and unhappy voice, "are becoming so hard on it, and so strange, that we are compelled to adopt many curious contrivances to evade observation. No longer can we do it openly, but we must practise it in secret," said the policeman bitterly; "we must go in out-of-the-way places and do it in darkness, as if it was a thing to be ashamed of. There is the medical officer. You will not believe it, sahib, but directly we put the thumb in any degree out of its natural course he is certain to find it out after a cursory examination, notwithstanding our endeavours to make the thumb all right as before, and then he will tell the Court all about it. He causes much trouble amongst us, and is a source of great misgivings. I don't think we should have sahib doctors who look into the state of persons' thumbs. What will the world say when a great doctor begins to feel about a man's thumb with his fingers, as if it were tusser silk, in this way?" Here the speaker tenderly caressed his thumb in a satirically ludicrous way.

"Of course," I said, "you do not intend to abandon such a wholesome practice."

"Sahib," he said, "judge of this matter calmly. We take the thumbs of a man suspected of a crime and twist them as tenderly and mercifully as the circumstances will allow. We are not destitute of humanity; we are indulgent to our prisoners, and we are compelled to resort to this painful proceeding only as a matter of argument to convince the prisoner that we are working for his good. He then sees that it is best for him to confess all about it."

"That is well said; only, I don't think he would take that view of the case."

"That is because he is ignorant," said the policeman, triumphantly; "that is because he doesn't know what is good for himself. We who know what is good for him should not consult his ignorance. He will say not to torture, of course."

"But what if he confesses to some crime which he never committed, only to escape torture?"

"Your honour," said the policeman, "that will never be. He is certain to speak up before the court; for, however you may frighten accused persons, the wretches hold you in no respect when before the Judge. You cannot imagine what different persons they become."

"But supposing a man has no knowledge of the crime and is innocent; then your torturing is undeserved? Say we merely suppose such a thing for the sake of argument."

"Suppose it," said the policeman, quickly meeting this weak objection; "then he can never confess anything, and we are satisfied that he is the wrong man. Is not this better than that we should go on suspecting an innocent man and keeping malice in our hearts because he does not come forward and tell us all about what he has done? Then we release him, and we part mutually satisfied with each other and good friends."

I was rather doubtful about this, and said nothing.

OFFICERING OF THE MADRAS ARMY.

(Pioneer.)

If the condition of the Madras Army can be judged from its Army List, some of the regiments must present a curious appearance. Complaints have been heard before of the superfluity of colonels and absence of majors which has resulted in the Southern Presidency from the working of the Staff Corps system, but they scarcely measured the real facts. As to majors the grade is practically extinct: there are only five on regimental duty among all the Madras regiments. But this is nothing to the union of youth and age, June and December, which furnishes the officering of some of the corps. In one, for instance, the colonel is a grey-haired warrior dating from 1859, while his next subordinate, who is both adjutant and officiating second-in-command, received his commission in 1884. The case of another regiment, the 17th Madras Infantry, is still more singular: for six months it has had no wing commanders at all, and the next senior officer after the colonel has six years' service. Why this should be, why some regiments should have no commandants, and why others—30 per cent of the whole number—should have only one wing commander, is a mystery. Doubtless there is a reason, or Sir Charles Arbuthnot, who has a well deserved reputation for common sense, would see to it. But even more mischievous than these half-filled ranks must be the constant transfer of officers from regiment to regiment. One corps (it is true it has lost men on active service) has eight officers with it, of whom five do not belong to it. The proportion of officers in Madras who have been over ten years with a single regiment is exceedingly small. No wonder that with such a system the Madrassi sepoy should fail to do himself justice.

PUNJAB CUSTOMS.

(Civil and Military Gazette.)

There are some Punjab customs regarding which the Government can very advantageously interfere, with the undoubted result of purifying Native society and suppressing litigation. I shall enumerate a few of them in the columns of your esteemed journal.

I. A great deal of the time of our courts is at present wasted at trying suits known as betrothal suits. These are actions frequently brought by the parents of minor children for damages for breach of contract of marriage. In addition to the return of presents made to the father of the intended bride, a heavy item of damages is claimed in the shape of hattak izzat (defamation), and our courts, bound by a uniform course of practice, do generally decree not only a return of the presents, often exaggerated, but allow a substantial item as damages for non-performance of the marriage contract. The selection or choice of a better match after the betrothal does not avail as a defence, nor is the rejection of the contracted marriage on grounds of sentiment or expediency a sufficient answer; and what is more objectionable is that bodily infirmity short of total incapacity to perform marital functions is also no valid plea. The result is that under such circumstances the parents of such minor children who unfortunately happen to be the victims of such betrothals are obliged to perform the contract nolens volens, sometimes forgetful and sometimes conscious of the evil consequences of such marriages to their children. Few prefer to submit to a decree for breach of contract.

Infant marriages are in themselves curses to the country, what more with a penalty in case of non-performance. In cases where adults agree to marry a breach of promise of marriage is intelligible, but where the parents of minor children blindly contract such marriages through go-betweens, our courts ought not to decree even nominal damages for breach, except as to return of presents proved to have been made to the father of the bride.

II. A large number of land cases arise out of the uncertainty of a Punjabi's power of alienation by gift or sale. The case-law on the subject is in a hopeless state of confusion. The custom is so widely different and contradictory in various tribes and various localities that no general rule is yet laid down. The recent Full Bench case regarding childless proprietors was supposed to clear the point, but later cases limiting the scope of the ruling show that it only covers a narrow ground. A Panjab Hindu or Muhammadan, whether in a town or a village, educated or uneducated, is wholly unaware of his power of dealing with his property, and he has nothing to refer to to find out his power. Nothing short of a ruinous and protracted litigation can solve the matter, the tendency of our judges being to go back to primitive notion of property, forgetting the influence of the spirit of modern times in undermining old institutions. Whatever the Government thinks a townsman or an agriculturist can do with his property, it is submitted, must be at once definitively settled by codification. In this connection may be mentioned how one custom clashing with another is able to counteract the other. For instance, where the powers of alienation are fettered otherwise a person resorts to the ridiculous institution of a Panjab adoption. A proprietor Jat can well accomplish his object of transfer, where he cannot alienate otherwise, by writing a deed of adoption for which no ceremonies and no formalities are needed, no limit of age of the adopted and no selection is necessary. A stamped paper, if registered, is practically unimpeachable evidence of adoption, while a statement in a civil or criminal proceeding is adoption, and among such other minor incidents a betrothal of a boy makes the adoption unassailable. The adopted son incurs no risk whatever, as he succeeds to his natural father's estate as well.

III. Another most immoral and pernicious custom is countenanced by our courts. Unchastity of a widow in whom her husband's estate has vested does not entail a forfeiture of her life's tenure, except when a special custom may be definitively proved to that effect, while re-marriage, a lawful connection legally and an honourable and moral connection socially, at once deprives the widow of her estate. Whether such really is the general custom we need not concern ourselves with, as the Chief Court has in several cases ruled to that effect. The Privy Council also, in opposition to the opinion of an eminent Hindu Judge of the Calcutta High Court, construed the Hindu law to that effect. The question, therefore, is not open on that subject, but what is the result of such an interpretation of Hindu law and such a finding of custom? It is obviously the encouragement of adultery and suppression of widow re-marriage. The question is, whether such a state of law affecting society so injuriously should be permitted to continue. I would suggest, as everybody would, that an immediate change is needed on this subject. The law of a civilised and moral Government must be that a widow should not forfeit her husband's estate by re-marriage, and that unchastity should deprive her of the inheritance, whether vested in her or not. Natives may have as many social gatherings to improve their society, but till the law is changed the morality of widows cannot be improved nor re-marriage of widows encouraged.

BENGAL.

(August 18.)

THE Viceroy has given a gold medal to be competed for by the Art Society of Calcutta at their forthcoming Exhibition.

THE Government of Bengal has rewarded Babu Preo Nath Mukerji, Sub-Inspector of Police, Calcutta, attached to the Detective Department, with a silver watch and gold chain of the value of Rs. 250, in recognition of the praiseworthy performance of his duty in arresting the escaped prisoners Warner and Healey.

THE Chief Justice of Bengal will, a Calcutta paper understands, take advantage of the long vacation to proceed on a voyage home for the purpose of recruiting his health. His lordship, who has booked his passage by the P. and O. steamer leaving about the 3rd or 5th September, will return to India early in November.

MR. PALIT, who some time ago published from the selections, speeches, and minutes of the late Kristo Das Pal, is now making arrangements to bring out in England an enlarged edition of the work in two volumes, with an introduction by Mr. Digby, C.I.E. The Maharaja of Travancore has granted Rs. 200 and the editor of the Indian Spectator Rs. 100 to assist in bringing out this book. The Englishman observes that that the Bengali community, which owes so much to Kristo Das, has not as yet subscribed anything towards this attempt to honour his memory.

REPORTING the particulars of a sale of State jewellery in Calcutta, a local paper states:—"The most remarkable item in the sale is lot No. 209, which is a wonderful seed called 'Ekumkhi Rudrakshi,' regarded with veneration by the followers of Shiva, and of such uncommon rarity as to be practically unobtainable. Most marvellous stories in regard to the origin of this seed are current. It is said to be produced in Nepal, and according to the laws there, if anyone, excepting a priest, is found in possession of the seed, he will be beheaded. The tree on which this seed is said to grow is the only one in the territory of Nepal, and is guarded by soldiery whose heads pay the penalty of the slightest indiscretion. It is said that many years elapse before any seed of the kind is produced by this tree, and out of a million of the seeds produced it is very rarely that three of the genuine ones, recognised as sacred, are found. The one on sale is said to be a genuine one, and we understand that a Hindu gentleman has made an offer of a lakh of rupees if Messrs. Hamilton and Co would certify it to be genuine. We learn that Messrs. Hamilton and Co. would not take upon themselves the responsibility of guaranteeing the genuineness of this marvellous seed, as it has been entrusted to them for sale. All they can say is that the seed has been sent to them as genuine."

MR. G. C. SCONCE, acting First Judge, Calcutta Small Cause Court, gave judgment on Tuesday in the case of the Reuter Telegraph Company v. the Statesman, awarding the plaintiff Rs. 1,200 and costs, being the full rate for the telegrams to the date when they were discontinued.

MADRAS.

CHOLERA and enteric fever are on the increase at Bangalore. Several men of the 21st Hussars are ailing with the latter complaint. Surgeon Flanagan of the North Station Hospital, in which these cases are being treated, caught the infection and died yesterday.

THE Roman Catholics at Madras have held a meeting under the presidency of the Archbishop to express sympathy with the Pope in his present trying position.

The Archbishop opened the meeting with a long address, and several animated speeches were made. The following resolutions were carried by acclamation:—(1) That the Catholics of the Archdiocese of Madras view with intense horror and dismay the desecration of the Holy City of Rome, the capital of the Christian world and the home of the Sovereign Pontiffs, by the erection of a statue to the impious memory of the revolutionary Giordano Bruno, and that his Holiness deserves the hearty sympathy of all true Catholics. (2) That they view with pain and sorrow the Penal Code, whereby it is made a crime for the clergy in Italy to criticise any act, law, or institution of the Italian Government, and that they warmly sympathise with the Holy Father in the present difficult position he has been placed in by the iniquitous laws of an invader.

A Committee was then formed for drawing up an address to the Pope, expressing the above sentiments.

The Chairman, referring to the second resolution, said liberty in Italy was a byword and a mockery. The revolutionists have robbed the Pope of his patrimony, despoiled him of his temporal power, and would now rob him of his spiritual authority. This they can never effect. The Pope, if driven from Rome, will still be the head of the Church. The Archbishop expressed a confident hope that the Pope will yet recover his temporal power and Rome become the capital and centre of the Christian world.

BOMBAY.

(Aug. 20.)

SURGEON H. P. DIMMOCK has been appointed Superintendent of Mahableshwur.

THE Venerable Archdeacon C. F. H. Johnston, M.A., has been granted furlough to Europe for one year, on medical certificate.

THE Rev. W. B. Preston, B.A., Junior Chaplain, Bombay Ecclesiastical Establishment, has passed an examination in the Hindustani language according to the Lower Standard.

LIEUTENANT F. WADESON, Station Staff Officer, Jacobabad, has been appointed to be Cantonment Magistrate of Jacobabad.

MR. J. W. WALKER, acting Judge and Sessions Judge of Ahmednugger, has been allowed privilege leave for three months.

DR. MRS. E. B. RYDER has been invited by Lord and Lady Reay to lay her plans for helping the women of India before them at Ganesh Khind. The Literary Society which Mrs. Ryder has started bids fair to become a success.

GENERAL J. H. WHITE, R.E., Senior Mint Master Bombay, retired from service on the 12th inst. On the retirement of General Ballard, General White was, about thirteen years ago, transferred from the Public Works Department to the Mint as Junior Mint Master, and was about five years ago promoted to the post of Senior Mint Master. During his tenure of office he brought the working of the Mint to such a state of perfection that he was able to effect a saving to Government of several lakhs of rupees, which was paid before as extra wages to the employés of the Mint for working overtime. General White was a very popular officer of Government, and won the respect and esteem of all those who came in contact with him. To show their appreciation of his kindness, courtesy, and good feeling, all the Mint employés turned out on the 12th inst. into the spacious compound of the Mint to bid good-bye to their popular chief. The officers of the Bullion Office decorated General White on his leaving the premises with garlands of flowers, and sprinkled rose-water upon him. As the General drove out of the compound, the employés showered flowers upon him, and greeted him with loud and prolonged cheers. Colonel Riddel, Mint Master of Calcutta, succeeds General White. It may be mentioned that the latter was present at the siege and capture of Nurgoond at the time of the Mutiny in 1857.

NOTICES OF BOOKS.

WOLLASTON'S COMPLETE ENGLISH-PERSIAN DICTIONARY.*

The able and assiduous compiler of this large and important volume has reversed the seemingly natural order of things by the method he has adopted in ushering it into the world. Had its preparation been announced by a newspaper paragraph or advertisement only, or even by a separate leaflet explaining its plan and character, there would have been nothing for the reviewer to do but to examine and report upon the book with regard to its general utility, and the fulfilment of promises held out. As the matter now stands, the publication invites consideration as the amplification or completion of a smaller volume which heralded its coming some seven years ago, and the question arises whether it would not have been a more practical and useful procedure to have turned out first the complete dictionary, and afterwards by weeding it of superfluous words, to have effected its compression into a portable volume for the benefit of travelling as well as sedentary students. Be this as it may, however, there is no need of dwelling upon the point as one for cavil or objection. Mr. Wollaston may be credited with having had his own reasons for the course pursued; and as it is not our business to enter into the propriety or validity of these, the Dictionary before us will now be regarded in the light of a separate and an independent work.

It is shown in the Preface that Walker's and Webster's Dictionary has been taken as the basis of the English of the text. The writer has reasonably concluded that there was no necessity for increasing the bulk of the book by adding all synonyms. As it is, there is more than enough of meanings, which, although variously expressed in our own language, have but one rendering in Persian. A reference to Archbishop Trench's small but eminently practical volume on "The Study of Words" might have supplied some useful hints for guidance in this respect; but it is only justice to Mr. Wollaston to say that he has dealt fully and fairly with the greater number of verbal examples given in the Sixth Lecture of the learned prelate. Instances chosen from among these would possibly lead to as trustworthy an appreciation of results as any process which could be adopted in default of time and opportunity to test the value of the dictionary to students. But criticism hastily started on the proposed lines must be offered, more or less, at random, and the following very few cursory notes may be viewed rather in the light of seeking, than of glossing over apparent flaws or defects. To begin with two words of common use, we find "Vengeance" and "Revenge" rendered by twenty simple and compound expressions, mostly Arabic, of which eight belong to the first, five to the second, and six are common to both. If Dr. Trench's suggested distinction were admitted, and the moral act separated from human retaliation, it would become imperative to modify the distribution; but English writers have hardly in practice admitted such interpretation as compulsory. One coupling of words omitted—badla giriftan—is to be found in Wilkins' edition of Richardson (A.D. 1810), and expresses in idiomatic language the legal or judicial qisás. Again, "Palliate" and "Cloak" are here so thoroughly divided that not one of the thirteen Persian translations of the first appears in the three renderings of the second. This arrangement, while justifiable and judicious, is perhaps open to criticism on the ground that some of the words used for "palliate" imply "pardon" rather than "palliation." Richardson has given the meaning more literally than idiomatically in ba ûzar khafif kardan. That "Astrology" and "Astronomy" are rendered by the same Persian or Perso-Arabic words—if considered faulty in reference to conventional acceptation—is perhaps borne out by regard to the original objects of the nomenclature. In making "authentic" a special meaning of "genuine," Wollaston has reconciled the elements of confusion presented in two words of similar import. We observe that the second of the two words in the Archbishop's coupling of "illegible" and "unreadable" is not included in the "English-Persian Dictionary" at all; moreover, that the translation of the word "Deist" (coupled with "Theist") is hardly one that would satisfy the missionary or the religious controversialist. Its Western-world definition is assuredly not expressed in the Persian Khuda-parast, which is simply a "worshipper of the Almighty" in the sense of Christian orthodoxy, and applicable to the "God-fearing" among Englishmen. Richardson has translated it ahil-i-tassawuf, which imparts to the term the character of heresy in relation to orthodox Muhammadanism, and is partly warranted by the practical tenets of Súfi-ism. But, upon the whole, the difficulties of our language of mixed derivations have been met with skill and success in the Orientalisation accomplished in Mr. Wollaston's pages, even when subjected to so severe an ordeal as that suggested by the "Study of Words."

Apart from Archbishop Trench's chapter on Synonyms we may leave the question of details—remarking, however, en passant, that wafadár, though laid down by precedent in Richardson, is a weak rendering of the adjective "grateful"—and pass on to more general observations. There was no doubt much need of an English-Persian dictionary, and Mr. Wollaston merits the thanks of students and the acknowledgment of his superiors in office for the services he has rendered in supplying one. Richardson's, however useful in its way, is growing scarce, and is insufficient for reproduction in its present form. The establishment of a school for modern Oriental studies under the direction of the Imperial Institute, and in conjunction with University and King's College, London, will possibly give great impetus to the desire for acquiring a knowledge of Eastern tongues; and a volume such as this will be a welcome accession to the library available to its teachers and pupils.

"Many persons," writes the author in his brief Preface, "may be disposed to fancy that a dictionary is merely a work of research, but this notion is far from accurate. Of course careful collation is an all-important desideratum; but much more than this is needed, especially as regards the correction of the proofs; and I contend that practically a lexicographer's scholarship must be sufficiently profound to enable him to detect at a glance any error which may happen to make its appearance." Not only may the truth of this dictum be affirmed by experience, but the writer's qualifications for his self-imposed task may at the same time be held amply proven, and the conscientiousness with which Mr. Wollaston has done his very difficult work cannot fail to be recognised.

THE INDIAN BUDGET.—II.

"To me personally," said Mr. Gladstone, replying on Friday last, to an address presented to him at the Indian section of the Paris Exhibition, "India is deeply interesting, as it is to a large and daily increasing section of the British public. In the House that nation has now an established position, a position that it never previously held. It stands outside the pale of party politics, and is fortunate in that respect, as its wants are discerned solely on their merits, and receive the earnest and thoughtful attention of most powerful supporters on both sides of the House."

It is difficult after reading this assurance of the interest taken by the House of Commons in Indian affairs to believe that the Press reporters can have been correct in stating that on the night of the Indian Budget debate the House was almost empty of hon. members, and that the "powerful supporters" he refers to were conspicuous by their absence. Mr. Gladstone possesses gifts of imagination which might be the envy of any poet, and we are satisfied that he fully believes in his own utterances whilst making them. On this occasion he wished to say something complimentary in reply to Mr. Bhungara who, on behalf of the Indian Exhibitors, had presented him with an address and some carved silver work, and Mrs. Gladstone with an embroidered quilt—gifts which "will ever be cherished by Mrs. Gladstone and myself as some of our most valued memorials." It was therefore pleasant to speak of India as "a nation," and to assure the Native gentlemen present that her interests were being very carefully attended to in the House of Commons. This is not, however, the general opinion even of those organs of the press which are supposed to faithfully re-echo Mr. Gladstone's opinions. Here is what one of those organs thinks of the way in which the House interests itself on Indian questions :—

"The story of Indian Government, read in the lights and shadows of its variegated administrative history, is one of the strangest on earth. The House of Commons ever and anon is convulsed with "panics" about the safety of the Empire, armies are got in readiness to advance anywhere and do anything, fleets are mobilised, there is great consternation, and the tight fisted Parliament votes millions to defend our magnificent treasure; yet when it is called upon to consider its affairs, to hear the story of its financial struggles during the year, hon. Members discover they have business in the Lobbies, in the tea-room, or upon the terrace. The Under-Secretary unfolds his Budget to the distant echo of soda-water corks, and the discussion of that serious account is confined to half-a-dozen hon. gentlemen who have either served in our Eastern dominions or have taken up the subject of Indian finance or Native grievances as amateur students, or because they hold retainers from this and that Indian organisation, or because they have written the proverbial "Book.'"

Another journal informs its readers that "relegated in accordance with custom to the fag end of the session, the Indian Budget has been received with the calm indifference which commonly attends all attempts to discuss India in Parliament. Possibly a score of members were present to listen to the details of Sir John Gorst's statement, in which little items, such as sixty millions of rupees spent and to be spent on defence works, provoked far less comment than does the remotest allusion to Irish prison rules, or even to the Maybrick case." The Times agrees with Mr. Bradlaugh in thinking that the Indian Financial Statement should not habitually be discussed so late in the year. It considers that "the moral effect of putting off the principal Indian debate of the Session"—a debate on matters which directly affect a population ten times as great as that of England—"is to make the people of India believe that the Imperial Parliament does not care much about them." This is a truth in which, however, Sir Richard Temple sees some consolation. He would have Parliament leave India very much alone, and to a certain extent he is right, for India can only be hampered in every way by the meddling and muddling of vain and ignorant members, who alone now pretend to interest themselves in her affairs. Nor is the House itself or the English Press to be blamed for not comprehending a complex statement of intricate calculations which go to make up what is called the Indian Budget. That Budget is "a thing which no fella' out of India"—and a good number in India—may be supposed to understand. But there are means of learning the truth about the moral and material progress of India at the disposal of honourable members in the shape of an annual Blue-book published by order of the House itself, which might be studied with much profit by those who pretend to care for India at all. It will be found neither dull nor uninteresting reading to any Englishman proud of his country, and of the work she is doing in the mighty Empire she rules in the East. If the English Press would condescend to allow itself to be enlightened a little from those pages, its writers would not pen the nonsense which so many of them do about Indian grievances and the decadence of the country under British sway. But we must do justice where we find exceptions to this general rule. Wading through weary articles on this question of India's financial condition we were surprised and gratified to find that at least one London newspaper had taken the trouble and shown the intelligence to thoroughly grasp the situation. The Financial News, commenting on the whole question, writes thus :—

"To insist that India is not in a flourishing condition is to make a rationally untenable proposition. The proof to the contrary is very simple. Within a few years back the currency of India has lost one-third of its exchange value, which means that for every pound sterling received it has to send abroad one-third more produce than before to obtain the same return, and that the sum necessary to pay its interest and other gold obligations has been increased also by one-third. Yet, with this double drain, India has progressed steadily ; its exports grow rapidly, and its Budget shows a surplus. Had there been no loss on exchange to reckon with, the expansion of the value of the exports would have been enormously greater, and the drafts on the public revenue of the Eastern Empire would have been much less. No error is more easily fallen into than to underrate the vitality and the resources of India. In some senses it is a poor country, but it has huge potentialities of growing rich. This age seems unable to appreciate the capabilities which lie in the older civilisations of adapting themselves to modern conditions of life and trade. It may be a bold thing to say that there lurk in Asia as many latent sources of wealth as there are in the two continents of America. The latter stride forward more rapidly because the civilisation which is spreading there displaces nothing. In Asia, on the other hand, modern ideas have to be slowly and judiciously grafted on ancient stocks, and the process is very gradual. In India, several great industries have been established within recent years. It is young as a corn-exporting country, yet already it is an important factor in the world's supplies ; India tea is a comparative novelty, yet it is fast elbowing the Chinese leaf out of our market; the Indian cotton manufacture is an industry of yesterday, yet already it has caused Lancashire to shake in its shoes ; Indian gold mining is fast assuming substantial proportions, and we expect shortly to see India entering the lists in the petroleum trade. Here are five new industries set on foot within half a generation in this poor, old, slow-going, overtaxed, ill-governed, half-dead dependency, and all proving that such adjectives cannot be applied with justice to our Indian Empire."

We need add nothing to the above beyond expressing a hope that our able City contemporary will continue to show the same enlightened and hopeful views of India's progress under British rule.

SIR CHARLES CROSTHWAITE has left Rangoon for Calcutta, and Mr. A. P. MacDonnell has assumed the administration.

THIRTEEN regiments will attend the cavalry camp at Muridhi during the visit of Prince Albert Victor. The intention to hold a camp of exercise at Meanmeer has been abandoned for financial considerations.

THE administration report of the Bombay Port Trust shows that all branches of trade have increased. The expenditure has been Rs. 40,50,000, and the income Rs. 43,00,000. With regard to the graving dock, the extreme length for docking is 530 feet. In order to meet possible requirements of Government in docking armoured cruisers the bottom of the dock will be excavated to 58 feet, much lower than will be necessary for any merchant vessel. The available depth for docking is 27 feet 3 inches at high water. The width of the entrance is the same as that of the north-east entrance to Prince's Dock, so that the largest vessel that can enter the latter will also be able to enter the graving dock.

MILITARY INTELLIGENCE.

APPOINTMENTS, &c., by H. E. the Commander-in-Chief.

Major-General Sir John Hudson has taken sixty days' leave and left Allahabad on Aug. 14. Lieutenant-Colonel Salkeld, 2nd Bengal Cavalry, has assumed command of the station in Sir John Hudson's absence, the command of the District devolving on Lieutenant-Colonel S. B. Home, 40th Bengal Infantry, Cawnpore.

Sir Hugh Gough, Commanding Lahore District, has taken sixty days' privilege leave from Aug. 16.

Colonel Kemble, 2nd Bengal Cavalry, and Lieutenant-Colonel Ramsden, 2nd Punjab Infantry, retire from the service shortly.

The following appointments have been made:—

Lieutenant Thompson, 43rd Gurkha Light Infantry, to the 1st Battalion 2nd Gurkhas as officiating Wing Officer.

Lieutenant Maxwell, 7th Bengal Cavalry, to be permanent Squadron Officer in the regiment.

Surgeon Henderson, 1st Bengal Infantry, to Shillong for temporary employment in Assam.

Lieutenant Foster, 2nd Battalion South Wales Borderers, resigns the service.

Lieutenant Weldon, 19th Madras Infantry, resigns his probationary appointment, and is posted to the Royal Dublin Fusiliers.

Captain Maisey, 2nd Battalion Liverpool Regiment, and Lieutenant Wintle, 15th Bengal Cavalry, have been appointed to the Intelligence Branch as unpaid attachés.

Captain Mackintosh proceeds home to join the 1st Battalion Seaforth Highlanders on promotion.

Captain P. H. Eyre, Bengal Staff Corps, Military Accounts Department, has returned from leave, and been posted to Calcutta for duty.

Captain Nixon, 18th Bengal Lancers, will be Assistant Adjutant-General to General Luck at the Muridki Cavalry Camp.

THE 2nd Battalion 1st Gurkhas and the 32nd Pioneers are to be withdrawn forthwith from Sikkim. This involves the practical break up of the field force.

THE troops in moving away from Sikkim will march to Goom, below Darjeeling, whence they will be railed to their stations. The malarious tract of country between the Teesta Bridge and Siliguri will thus be avoided.

THE proposals of the Madras military authorities in connection with the Chin-Lushai Expedition have reached Army Head-quarters at Simla, and are now under consideration.

A COOLIE corps of one thousand men has been formed in the Punjab for the Chin expedition, and will be despatched in batches to Rangoon immediately. Lieutenant Johnson, Liverpool Regiment, and Lieutenant Smyth, Royal Irish Regiment, will be in command of these coolies on service.

TYPHOID fever prevails among the 5th Lancers at Mhow in a very bad form. Five deaths occurred within twenty-four hours, one of the victims being a non-commissioned officer. The outbreak is attributed in some quarters to the impure milk supplied to the men.

SOME changes have been made in the regiments told off for the Cavalry Camp at Muridki in January. The 3rd Punjab Cavalry from Dera Ghazi Khan will take the place of the 1st from Rajanpur; while the 17th Bengal Cavalry will not share in the final manœuvres as was intended.

THE reservists of the 3rd Biluch Battalion who reside north of the River Jhelum will be trained in Rawalpindi, and those who reside south of that river at Sialkot.

ALL public followers, whether regimental or departmental, in receipt of Government pay, serving with the Sikkim Force, will be granted 50 per cent. batta on their pay from the date of their leaving either of the bases of the expedition, i.e., Siliguri or Goom.

A CHANGE has been made in the hutting allowances to Native troops. Under the old rules a fixed rate per Native officer, non-commissioned officer and man was allowed on every change of station. Now a fixed allowance per mensem of Rs. 100 per Native infantry regiment is given, any balance at credit of fund saved from this fixed allowance being handed over to the officer commanding the station, or the officer commanding the relieving corps, as the case may be, on a regiment leaving a station in course of relief.

THE military officers employed in reorganising the armies of the Native States are to be styled inspecting officers simply, their position in relation to the Chiefs and Durbars being thus clearly defined. They will be appointed on probation in the same way as officers of the Political service.

IT has been announced that in future military officers are not to be obliged to keep up more than the Cabul scale of tent equipment. This is a step in the right direction. There is no reason whatever why the present scale of tent equipment, as laid down in the Transport Regulations, should not be altogether struck out. Very few regimental officers are in possession of the maunds of tentage which they are permitted by regulation to carry about the country at the expense of the State when they are proceeding on any duty for which tent equipment is considered necessary.

ONLY 15,000 instead of 35,000 of the magazine rifles will be available for the British Army in India during this year. It is proposed to arm the whole of the Frontier Force with Martinis. The 1st and 3rd Punjab Cavalry, the Corps of Guides, the 3rd and 4th Sikhs, the 4th Punjab Infantry, and the 5th Gurkhas, received the new rifle some time ago, as they are included in the 1st or 2nd Army Corps under the mobilisation scheme. The 32nd Pioneers on return from Sikkim will also be armed with Martinis.

IN regard to Mr. Stanhope's scheme for the reduction of Generals, it is believed the requirements of India could be met by fixing the establishment at 1 General, 2 Lieutenant-Generals, and 11 Major-Generals, instead of 3, 8, and 22 as at present. The rank of General will only be required in the case of an Indian officer being Commander-in-Chief; but the matter has not yet come before the military authorities in India.

A LETTER FROM LORD DUFFERIN.

The Marquis of Dufferin and Ava has sent the following autograph letter of condolence to ex-Queen Myouk Shway Yay of Burma, now living in Calcutta, in reply to a communication from her, anncuncing the recent sudden death of her only daughter, Princess Kayouk Sook Thake:—

"London, July 9th.

"My dear friend,—I cannot tell you with what extreme sorrow and regret I received your letter, and read of the terrible calamity which has overtaken you. You are well aware that I was very fond of your dear little Princess and greatly admired her modesty and gentleness and sweet manner. When I last saw her she looked so well and bright that neither Lady Dufferin nor I were prepared for the sad intelligence, and we both understand only too well the deep measure of your grief. It will now be incumbent on your son to be all the more careful to comfort you and to alleviate your redoubled sorrows. My wife desires to be most kindly remembered to you. Believe me always to be.—Your Majesty's affectionate friend, (Sd.) DUFFERIN AND AVA.'

PARSEE DEMONSTRATION AT POONA.

(From the New York Herald's Correspondent.)

BOMBAY, Sept. 3.—The Bombay newspapers to-day publish full reports of Sunday's demonstration of Natives at Poona. The meeting, it seems, emphatically expressed approbation and appreciation of the courageous efforts made by the Government of Bombay, amidst unusual difficulties, to eradicate the widespread corruption traceable directly to the evil genius of a single English officer enjoying a high position and the confidence of the Government, and which remained unheeded for many years. The demonstrators further declared that unless the idemnity solemnly guaranteed to witnesses in the Crawford case were respected and fulfilled in integrity the result would be that public faith in the British Government would be lost. Experience, it was argued, would render it absolutely impossible to bring to light any delinquencies and misconduct of public functionaries—an evil fraught with danger to the future good government of India. The meeting recorded a strong protest against the persistent and factious misrepresentations and perversion of facts by interested writers, whereby public opinion in England was misled.

The speakers dwelt on the facts that, without an indemnity, no evidence was procurable, as was shown by the fruitless result of the inquiries under Mr. Fergusson, that if the witnesses had insisted upon an act of indemnity before testifying they would have obtained it, but that, trusting to pledges, they were now sacrificed, and the Government discredited. The first disclosures to the Government were made by the Native officers and Press urging action, but former Governments ignored the warning.

THE MADRAS ARMY AT EBB.

A Madras paper urges the faulty system under which the Madras Native Army labours and calls for reform. After showing how badly the Madras sepoy is treated or regards his income our contemporary says:—

Is it, then, any wonder that the Madras sepoy, subjected as he is to these drains upon his pocket, owing to the presence of his family with him, is ill-nourished, of indifferent physique, and undesirous of risking a life on which so much depends? But there is another effect of the family system, which is attended by the gravest consequences as regards the discipline of a regiment, and the importance of this can only properly be estimated when it is borne in mind that the Madras sepoy inherits none of those martial instincts which make the Sikh, the Punjabi, or the Ghoorka magnificent fighting material. The only way this deficiency can be compensated is by the enforcement of the strictest discipline. By discipline we mean the habit of obeying promptly and unhesitatingly the order of a superior, no matter what the degree of his superiority. In this respect the Madras sepoy is greatly deficient, and this is in a large degree due to the family system. Every regiment in Madras may be classified in two large divisions, those who are Muhammadans and those who are Hindoos. Of caste, except to a very small extent, there is none, at least not as it is understood in Bengal. Amongst those of the same religion, owing to continual inter-marryings, the relationship that exists is so great as almost to penetrate the whole. Thus, in a company a Native officer may have one son a private, another a non-commissioned officer, and be related in a more or less degree to half-a-dozen others. As with him so with the remainder of the company and as with them so with the remainder of their religion in the regiment. It is not an uncommon sight to see Sepoys on orders being conveyed to them, arguing as to their propriety and justice, and it is seldom that any notice is taken of it. They are in all probability connected either by blood or marriage with some Native officer, who, in the event, of their being punished for an infraction of discipline would make his resentment felt both by accusers and witnesses. As a matter of fact, there is no real discipline in a Madras Native Regiment. What passes as such is generally exercised only in the presence of a European officer. If a Native officer is sent out on detachment, the authority he exercises is merely nominal. Instead of occupying himself in smartening up his men, in maintaining order, and in punishing crime, his great object is to do as little work as possible, and to prevent any crime that may occur from coming to the ears of his commanding officer. The example set by the Native officers is naturally followed by the non-commissioned officers, and the whole regiment is ruled on a diluted mixture of 'merbhani' and 'ma bap.'

During the recent operations in Burma the evils accruing from the family system were brought vividly into view. The hospitals were overflowing with men, whose physique in the first instance had been such as was bound to break down under hardship and fatigue. We were constantly hearing of cases of flagrant insubordination and cowardice. We heard of British officers being left time after time in the lurch in the presence of the enemy, and of having to drive their men forward with a threat of death in the event of refusal. And one regiment in particular behaved so badly that the authorities at Ootacamund seriously contemplated its disbandment as a warning to the others. What is the ultimate effect of all this? It is that the Madras Army has fallen into such ill-repute that its name has become a byword amongst military men out here and at home. Its reputation is such that the Government of India finds the greatest difficulty in obtaining a supply of European officers for it. And recently at the India Office the question was seriously mooted whether a large saving to the Indian Exchequer without a corresponding danger to the Indian Empire might not be effected by extensively reducing the Madras Army, and it is said that it was only political, not military, considerations that prevented the adoption of this proposal.

THE SINGARENI COALFIELDS.

A correspondent writes to a Bombay paper:—"If ever a valuable enterprise or property suffered from varied vicissitudes the "Deccan Company's" coal mines have. It was well-known that a somewhat extensive field of coal lay in the jungles of the Nizam's dominions. But only three years ago were mining operations begun, and then for nearly two years only so much was done as the late Agent of the N.G.S. Railway, Mr. W. I. Furnivall, and the District Engineer, Mr. H. B. Molesworth, could push forward, while their hands were already overburdened with railway construction. It almost appeared that the Coal Company, if there was any, could not afford to risk the expense of sending out machinery and proper mining engineers and other needed help. That almost two years were frittered away, while the public, reading the glow ing reports of men inexperienced in mining, mines, or their inevitable difficulties, demanded much from the mouth of a single shaft beneath which were to be found but few "headlings." Altough the first two years were frittered away doing little, and learning almost nothing about the extent, lays, nature, or real value of the coal fields, the already overburdened railway engineers making no pretentions to mining experience, could not have done more than was done. In December, 1887, mining officers and experts arrived upon the ground, and then it may be said real and progressive operations began, machinery came, and some knowledge of the lay of the coal began to be arrived at. Then came the "Scandal," and progress was paralysed, inasmuch as the General Superintendent did not, under the existing circumstances, feel justified in making any very heavy outlay. In this way the mining officers on the ground were very much handicapped. Cholera caused a couple of months' delay in 1878; and then falling foul of a "fault" so startled the officers presiding over the exchequer, that for nearly a year the mining engineer's entreaties to be permitted to pierce the "fault" could not get a hearing. Thus things went on till early in the present year the Consulting Engineer from England, Mr. Morgan, and the new Agent, Mr. T. H. Lowensky arrived. Since they appeared on the ground and granted permission to their staff to go ahead, most commendable progress has been made. One new shaft and three new "inclines" have been put down; a vast amount of valuable machinery has been put in; a narrow-gauge railway is under construction by which all coal, from whatever pit or incline, is to be brought to the magnificent "Heapstead," constructed at a cost of Rs. 20,000 for screening and loading. Borings and surveys have added vastly to the knowledge of the value of the coal find. The more that is known of the coal field, the more valuable it proves itself to be—coal has been reached in every pit and incline. Just now only inclines No. 1 and 2 are working coal for the market, and these two could easily yield 200 tons per day if pushed; and with the completion of the narrow-gauge line to the other inclines, the other inclines may be expected to yield by December 31st 100 tons per day. January 1890 should find this coal company putting out 300 tons per day. If there be no unforeseen obstacle this may be expected.

But about the market a word should be said. The coal is good. If bad coal be sent out, it is through the carelessness of those on the ground. As the mines are now they can go on working on revenue. Given the capital expenditure of opening the mines and planting the machinery, and a market for the coal, the coal will work the coal, or the enterprise may be then considered self-supporting. It is a pity the coal did not stand by itself, instead of being pitched between the gold and diamond mines. What will be the fate of the Mining Company no one knows? But this much is certain; that the Singareni Coal Fields are valuable; and if they survive the present incubus and have half a chance, they will pay and yield the Nizam's Government a handsome revenue. His Highness may not know it, but he owns fully 100 square miles of coal—enough for all South India for the next 500 years.

CASHMERE.

(Evening Standard, August 28.)

Unfortunately for the people of Cashmere, it seems, by the answer given by Lord Cross to Lord Herschell, that the report that the Government had annexed that State is without foundation. For years the inhabitants of Cashmere have groaned under an oppressive Government, and there could be little doubt that our annexation of the country would be hailed by them with delight. Lord Cross submitted that the Viceroy had felt himself bound to accept the resignation of the ruler of Cashmere and to place the country under a Native Council. He added that any one who was acquainted with the way in which the State had been governed of late could have no doubt whatever that this was a wise step to take. That the late state of things could not be allowed any longer to exist is a point upon which all who know anything of the circumstances will heartily agree; but most people will be of opinion that it would have been a very much wiser step, both in the interests of India and the people of Cashmere, to take the bolder step of annexing the country. The position of Cashmere is a most important one, and in the event of possible eventualities it might be of almost vital consequence to us for it to be held by our troops. The Ruler of Cashmere stands to us in an altogether different relation to that occupied by the Native chiefs of India, and they have felt no uneasiness at our doing what, in the opinion of most Indian authorities, should have been done long ago.

AT a meeting of the Bombay Cotton Trade Association it was resolved to memorialise Government to legislate for the purpose of assisting trade, by rendering railway receipts negotiable instruments, and by giving title to consignments similar to bills of lading.

OBITUARY.

COLONEL R. LAW.—Colonel Robert Law, late 31st (East Surrey Regiment), and Staff Officer of Pensioners, Plymouth, eldest son of the late Lieut.-General Robert Law, K.H., 71st Highland Light Infantry, died on the 23rd ult. at Chorley Rectory, Lancashire, at the age of 66. The deceased joined the Army in February, 1840, obtaining his promotion to lieutenant in July, 1842, captain in May, 1854, major in March, 1868, lieut.-colonel in March, 1877, and to colonel in October, 1881. He served with the 31st Regiment throughout the campaign of 1842 in Afghanistan under General Pollock (medal), including the actions of Mazeena, Tezeen, and Jugdulluck, occupation of Cabul and the different minor engagements leading to and from it. He also served the Sutlej campaign of 1845-46, including the battles of Moodkee, Ferozeshah, Buddiwal, Aliwal, and Sobraon, in all of which he commanded a Company (medal and three clasps). He was severely wounded at the battle of Sobraon, and was mentioned in despatch, being second in command of the regiment during the action.

SIR COMER PETHERAM has been reappointed Vice-Chancellor of the Calcutta University.

AT the last meeting of the general committee of the Calcutta Municipality the leper question was discussed, with regard to advising Government as to the necessity for compulsory legislation. It was resolved that lepers should be prohibited from selling food or making or working clothes.

AT the last meeting of the Legislative Council the Bill to amend the Administrator-General's and other Acts was referred to a select committee. The Merchandise Marks Amendment Bill passed reference. By the latter Bill, the Legal Member stated, local Governments were empowered to delegate the power conferred on them to the chief Customs authority, or other competent officer, so that no unnecessary delay might take place in dealing with shipments. Mr. Hutchins introduced a Bill to amend the India and Burma Forests Acts, the object being to make the intention of the law plain and to define the limit and control the powers of the forest officers. Sanction was given to the proposed construction of the Rutlam-Godra Railway.

THE SPORTS' AND ARTS' EXHIBITION.—An exhibition of works of art, illustrative of and connected with sport, will be held in the Grosvenor Gallery during the winter months of 1889-1890, and will comprise pictures by well-known masters of hawking, hunting, shooting, fishing, coursing, &c. Scarce prints, gold and silver plate, arms, implements, trophies, and reliques of artistic value and historic interest. His Royal Highness the Duke of Edinburgh has graciously accepted the chairmanship of the Executive Committee, and Mr. Archibald Stuart-Wortley has consented to act as vice-chairman, while the following gentlemen form the committee itself:—The Marquis of Granby, William Agnew, Esq., Lord Walsingham, J. E. Harting, Esq., Sir E. Boehm, R.A., Walter Gilbey, Esq., General Ellis, John Pettie, Esq., R.A., Captain E. Shelley, Sir Coutts Lindsay, and F. G. Prang, Esq., the manager of the Gallery. All possessors of works of art bearing on the subject will doubtless be delighted to avail themselves of this opportunity for showing their treasures under such auspices.

THE Indian Daily News writes:—The Government of Bombay, under Lord Reay, seems to have a happy faculty for making mistakes. We should not venture to suspect the solemn ruler of the Kingdom of wilful levity; but a recent official act of his Government, vouched for by the Pioneer, is really very amusing. It seems a youthful Bombay civilian, being entitled to short leave, decided, for the sake of his health or for some other reason that seemed good to him, to take a run home; and he further decided, also no doubt for reasons that seemed good to him, to travel second class—as many other people, of quite as good social status as the average Indian Civil Servant, do in these days of improved second-class arrangements and debilitated rupees. He went home and returned, we hope with the object of his trip, whether concerning urgent private affairs or the rehabilitation of his health, satisfactorily accomplished; and, at any rate, with the consciousness of having, by the self-denial involved in travelling second-class, done something towards avoiding those pitfalls of debt into which it is to be feared too many Indian officials plunge. But Lord Reay's Government was not content to let him remain happy in the thought that he had done his duty. He was met on his return to duty with a reprimand for—as the Pioneer puts it—"lowering the dignity and status of the Civil Service by his unseemly action." It is all very silly; and it is pitiful, too, that the mean spirit of snobbery, which is too frequently met with, should thus be given high official encouragement. As for the P. and O. Company, they have almost as good ground as the Parsees to complain of Lord Reay's Government.

BROAD ARROW AND NAVAL AND MILITARY GAZETTE

HE

EVERY SATURDAY. PRICE SIXPENCE.

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" has acquired a reputation for early and exclusive intelligence as to Appointments and other service News, for the high character of its articles, the independent courseof its staff of writers, and for its earnest support of all measures for the good of the Services. Articles on specially interesting subjects appear from week to week written for the most part by officers of rank and experience, or by men of note in literature who have made the Naval and Military affairs of the country their special study. A series of Illustrated Articles is appearing weekly on Regimental Badges and History. Illustrations with descriptions are also given of new Service Inventions.

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" freely opens its correspondence columns to all grades in the Services. By this means an opportunity for interchange of opinion is afforded, such as is offered by no other Service Journal. Its ordinary weekly issue contains fully one-fourth more matter than the other Service Journals, even with their frequent "supplements."

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" circulates largely throughout India and the Colonies. It is supplied direct to the Army and Marine bureaux of the French, Russian, and other Governments, and it is read extensively by Officers of Foreign Services, especially of the German, French, and American Armie, who desire to acquire a true impression of facts and public opinion in England regarding Military affairs.

DR. SPENCER'S ASTHMA CURE.

MR. D. FITZPATRICK, of Drumcree, Killucan, Westmeath, Ireland, writes:—"Thank God the two bottles of Dr. Spencer's Asthma Cure got from you cured me of the Asthma. I am over sixty years of age, and for the last twenty-five years I have suffered as much from Asthma (I believe) as any other Asthmatic could suffer, often for nights without ever lying on a bed, but I thank the good God I can now sleep as comfortable as I could wish for. I only wish every poor Asthmatic sufferer would give your cure a trial, for it is a great boon."

The public are hereby notified that the above remedy is prepared from a recently improved formula of Dr. Spencer (which has nothing to do with any other formula) and is sold, under his name, by us, who are the sole proprietors, and in no way connected with any other person or firm. We will send our Pamphlet "Asthma, its Treatment and Cure" (Third edition) by E. Edwin Spencer, M.A., M.D., &c., post free, on application

COORG SAUCE.

The Universal Appetiser,
PRICE ONE SHILLING.

This delicious Sauce is prepared from the receipt of a Nobleman, whose perfect knowledge of the culinary art has obtained for him the nom de plume of the "Modern Lucullus."

The name of this celebrated Sauce—

THE UNIVERSAL APPETISER

Has been given to it because, in addition to its remarkable flavouring qualities, it possesses the singular property of

CREATING OR RESTORING THE APPETITE,

In fact, it practically realises the French saying—"L'appétit vient en mangeant."

Since the introduction of THE UNIVERSAL APPETISER it has been said, both in Society and at the Clubs, how rarely is the mauvais quart d'heure noticed, every one being so much interested in discussing and enquiring about the new Sauce—

THE UNIVERSAL APPETISER.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE

ONLY GENUINE

COUGHS, COLDS, ASTHMA, BRONCHITIS.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE.—Dr. J. C. BROWNE (late Army Medical Staff) DISCOVERED a REMEDY to denote which he coined the word CHLORODYNE. Dr. Browne is the SOLE INVENTOR, and, as the composition of Chlorodyne cannot possibly be discovered by Analysis (organic substances defying elimination), and since the formula has never been published, it is evident that any statement to the effect that a compound is identical with Dr. Browne's Chlorodyne must be false.

This Caution is necessary, as many persons deceive purchasers by false representations.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE.—Vice Chancellor Sir W. PAGE WOOD stated publicly in Court that Dr. J. COLLIS BROWNE was UNDOUBTEDLY the INVENTOR of CHLORODYNE, that the whole story of the defendant Freeman was deliberately untrue, and he expected to say it had been sworn to.—The Times, July 13th, 1864.

IS THE GREAT SPECIFIC FOR CHOLERA, DIARRHŒA, DYSENTERY.

GENERAL BOARD of HEALTH, London, REPORT that it ACTS as a CHARM, one dose generally sufficient.

Dr. GIBBON, Army Medical Staff, Calcutta, states: "2 DOSES COMPLETELY CURED ME of DIARRHŒA."

To J. T. DAVENPORT, London.

DEAR SIR,—We congratulate you upon the widespread reputation this justly-esteemed medicine has earned for itself all over the East. As a remedy of general utility, we much question whether a better is imported, and we shall be glad to hear of its finding a place in every Anglo-Indian home. The other brands, we are happy to say, are now relegated to the native bazaars, and, judging from their sale, we fancy their sojourn there will be but evanescent. We could multiply instances ad infinitum of the extraordinary efficacy of DR. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE in Diarrhœa and Dysentery, Spasms, Cramps, Neuralgia, the Vomiting of Pregnancy, and as a general sedative, that have occurred under our personal observation during many years. In Choleraic Diarrhœa, and even in the more terrible forms of Cholera itself, we have witnessed its surprisingly controlling power. We have never used any other form of this medicine than Collis Browne's, from a firm conviction that it is decidedly the best, and also from a sense of duty we owe to the profession and the public, as we are of opinion that the substitution of any other than Collis Browne's is a deliberate breach of faith on the part of the chemist to prescriber and patient alike.—We are, Sir, faithfully yours, SYMES & CO., Members of the Pharm. Society of Great Britain, His Excellency the Viceroy's Chemists.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE is the TRUE PALLIATIVE in NEURALGIA, GOUT, CANCER, TOOTHACHE, RHEUMATISM.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE is a liquid medicine which assuages PAIN of EVERY KIND, affords a calm, refreshing sleep WITHOUT HEADACHE, and INVIGORATES the nervous system when exhausted.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE rapidly cuts short all attacks of EPILEPSY, SPASMS, COLIC, PALPITATION, HYSTERIA.

IMPORTANT CAUTION.—The IMMENSE SALE of this REMEDY has given rise to many UNSCRUPULOUS IMITATIONS. Be careful to observe Trade Mark. Of all Chemists, 1s. 1½d., 2s. 9d., and 4s. 6d.

OPINIONS.

The Calcutta Review for October reached us a day or two ago, and a glance at its contents shows that the number more than sustains the reputation which this old and favourite publication is again achieving. The Review is rapidly regaining the position which it . . . . there is no fear of the Indian Review, or the Asiatic Quarterly rivalling it in public favour.—Statesman, October 1886.

. . . . The best service which I ever rendered in India, or, indeed, for India, was the establishment, single-handed, of the Calcutta Review, which has done far more for Indian literature than anything I have written under my own name.—J. W. KAYE, Athenæum Club, June 25, 1872.

The Calcutta Review has given us valuable articles on the army. Some from the pen of Sir Henry Lawrence, who wrote with the spirit of prophesy of the coming storm of which he was one of the noblest victims.—Address of the C.-in-C. at the U.S. Inst. of India.

. . . . The Calcutta Review has not only throughout its career reflected the highest honour on its public-spirited promoters and its well-known distinguished contributors, but has done much to help forward the reconstruction of our system of governing India.—Westminster Review.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 12, 1889.

General Intelligence.

[BY OVERLAND MAIL.]

THE Overland Mail brings us letters and advices from Bombay to the 27th Aug.; from Allahabad and Madras to the 25th Aug.; and from Calcutta to the 25th Aug.

THE last meeting of the Legislative Council for the Simla season will probably be as late as the 30th October, as that month will be devoted to the passing of the Central Provinces Bills introduced some weeks ago.

THE Mamlatdars' Indemnity Bill will probably be introduced into the Legislative Council at Simla early in September. The final decision in cases where bribery and corruption have been established will devolve upon the Government of India.

THE Government of India are disposed to suspend the operation of the prohibitive clauses of the Merchandise Act for three months, always provided that good evidence is given that this step is really necessary in the interests of the mercantile community.

NO information has reached the Government of India as to the debate on the Indian Budget in the House of Commons. What are known as the final July figures for the Budget of the past year are now available. They show better results than were anticipated.

SIR CHARLES CROSTHWAITE will shortly submit a report to Government showing in detail the progress made in the settlement of Upper Burma. This will set the public at home right on a subject on which their telegraphic information has been misleading.

REVENUE survey operations on an extended scale are to be carried out in Assam, commencing next cold weather and be carried on for some years to come.

AS a result of Sir Edward Buck's visit to Burma a large survey force will be sent for employment in both the Upper and the Lower Provinces. The Central Provinces will for the most part be drawn upon for the necessary parties.

THE returns of traffic on the Tounghoo-Mandalay Railway grow more and more satisfactory week by week. The earnings of the whole line from Rangoon to Mandalay show already as high a percentage of profit as that gained by the Rangoon-Tounghoo line before the extension was carried out.

THE Viceroy's tour along the North-West Frontier this autumn will be an extensive one, as he will visit not only the Khyber, but Kohat, Bannu, and Dera Ismail Khan, from which last place he will ride to the mouth of the Gomal Pass. His Excellency will afterwards go on to Quetta and Peshin. As one good result of the visit, the question of the unsatisfactory state of the Kohat Pass will be taken up with a view to causing the local tribesmen to fulfil their obligations to maintain the road in a thoroughly good state. No great difficulty is likely to be experienced in securing this. Lady Lansdowne will accompany the Viceroy to the Khyber and Quetta, but not the small frontier stations.

THE Viceroy will probably reach Calcutta in the ensuing cold season as early as Saturday, November 30th, or only a few days later at the outside.

LORD LANSDOWNE was to open the Simla Fine Arts Exhibition on the 29th August.

MR. WESTLAND'S successor in the Chief Commissionership of Assam is the Hon. Mr. J. W. Quinton, of the North-West Provinces Board of Revenue, who is now at home on three months' leave. Mr. Quinton, on his return in October, will go at once to Assam, leaving Mr. Westland free to carry out his intention of retiring from the service.

MR. C. J. LYALL took over the duties of Secretary to the Home Department from Mr. A. P. Macdonnell at Simla on Aug. 21st. Mr. Macdonnell left for Rangoon the next day. He was entertained by Sir Charles and Lady Elliott at a farewell dinner the previous evening, Lord and Lady Lansdowne being among those present on the occasion.

LORD WILLIAM BERESFORD will be deputed as the representative of the Viceroy to meet Prince Albert Victor on his arrival at Bombay.

MR. A. MCHINCH, of Karachi, has been appointed a Member of the Bombay Legislative Council.

MR. A. SMITH, Commissioner of the Presidency Division, Bengal, is taking privilege leave for two months, and Mr. Westmacott, Commissioner of Excise, will take charge of the division during his absence.

MR. W. H. JOHNSON, Executive Engineer, has been selected by the Punjab Government to carry out a new road from Bandipur, at the northern end of the Wular Lake, to Gilgit. The present track for baggage animals will be converted into a good military road.

CAPTAIN DURAND left Gilgit on Aug. 14th for Chaprot, en route to Hanza and Nagar.

THE Badakshan rebellion has collapsed utterly. The Amir has now six regiments of infantry and two of cavalry, with a battery of artillery, in the country, a force which is more than ample to keep it quiet. The rising was never a general one, and the people in some instances turned against their own Mirs.

RAJA RAM SINGH, who has not been removed from the Kashmir Council, though he has lost the Presidentship, has now renounced his opposition, and is working cordially with Raja Amar Singh.

MAJOR HARVEY, of the Commissariat Department, died at Myingyan on the 17th.

THE death at Mandalay on Monday is announced of Mr. G. G. Campbell, District Superintendent of Police, Katha.

IT is finally arranged that the Government offices will close at Simla on Oct. 31st, and reopen at Calcutta on Nov. 1st.

HORSE-BREEDING IN INDIA.

SIMLA, AUG. 20.

This afternoon Mr. Cox, Army Veterinary Department, delivered a lecture at the United Service Institution, Simla, on "Horse-Breeding Operations in India." General Luck presided, and Sir Frederick Roberts was present.

Mr. Cox entered into a detailed examination of the question how best to secure good country-bred stock for the Army. He advocated the extensive employment of thoroughbred sires from Australia and Norfolk trotters; the improvement of the breed of mares in this country; the greater encouragement of private enterprise; and the purchase of young stock by Government.

A discussion followed in the course of which Colonel Lance drew attention to the possibility of breeding from three or four-year-old fillies in India as in England, and suggested each Bengal Cavalry regiment having its own rearing-farm for young stock.

Mr. Hallen had a good word to say for Arab sires under certain conditions, but opposed the idea of breeding from young fillies.

General Luck spoke in high terms of the power and endurance of Arabs in Afghanistan, and said the demand for racing and polo ponies had seriously interfered with the breeding of country-bred horses fitted for Army purposes.

NOTES.

THE fast steamers of the P. and O. are bringing India nearer to England with amazing rapidity. To-day we have the mails which left Bombay August 27. But there are people who will be dissatisfied and who will hold that it is possible to have too much of a good thing—as for instance, two Indian mails in the one week.

THE protestation against Sunday being made mail day in Bombay continues. A respected contemporary here joins in the protestation not only because the change of the mail day would interfere with social and commercial arrangements, but because it would also be a "gratuitous flouting" of the religious feelings of "every man of business and every journalist." The piety of these two classes and their strict observance of the Sabbath cannot be questioned; but we imagine that there are other reasons why a Sunday mail day would be unpopular at Bombay. It would necessitate the presence of workers who would otherwise be taking holiday away from that moist hot city. We certainly hope that the change will not be made, for an outgoing mail from India on Sunday would mean probably a delivery in London on Friday when we have quite enough to do in writing for India.

THE Times of India is enabled to state that affairs in Sikkim are finally settled. There is no doubt whatever that there is no wish on the part of the Tibetans to renew hostilities. Sikkim is entirely freed from Tibetan influence, and will have no connection whatever with her, and she will be altogether under English rule. For obvious reasons European troops will have to be kept at Gnatong. The Rajah of Sikkim is at Guntok, and is a grass-widower, his wife having left him somewhat suddenly a fortnight ago for Chambi, where her two children and brother-in-law are. There is no great probability of the Ranee returning.

THE Pioneer states that General Graham on his return from Sikkim will revert temporarily to the command of the Artillery at Jutogh, proceeding shortly on three months' leave to England.

IT has been definitely settled that the Transport and Commissariat Departments shall become imperial departments. Senior officers now serving in these departments in the three Presidencies will not be affected in any way, but necessary changes will come about by time.

IF the Legislative programme of Session has not been quite disposed of before the Viceroy starts on his tour, a President in Council will be appointed for the last meeting of the Council.

THE Mamlutdars' Indemnity Bill, being purely of a technical character, is not likely to give rise to any discussion if introduced into the Legislative Counil, and can therefore be passed at once. Powers will probably be taken under it by the Government of India to deal with the various cases in which corruption has been established.

THE Government of Madras has taken one step in the right direction in regard to leprosy. A recent Resolution orders that all convicts certified by the medical officer of the jail to which they are committed to be lepers, and sentenced to imprisonment for periods exceeding three months, or sentenced to be transported and pronounced unfit for transportation, shall be confined in a specially constituted criminal ward in a leper hospital.

THE following from the Pioneer will not be pleasing intelligence to Sir George Birdwood:—"Unfortunately for the good repute of Indian manufactures and art fabrics the imports of aniline and alizarine dyes are steadily on the increase. They have risen from 13 1-3 million ounces in 1886-87 to 40½ million in 1888-89, and in value from Rs. 10 to 23 lakhs; and judging from the quantity imported during the three months ending the 30th June last, which was more than three times as much as arrived in the corresponding period of 1887, and amounted to over 11,000,000 ounces, the increase is likely to be maintained. The matter is one on which legislation is difficult; but there can be no question that the general use of these dyes is disastrous both to the Native vegetable dyes and to the reputation of Indian fabrics."

THE Bombay Press gives the following as the official programme of Prince Edward's tour in India:—His Royal Highness will be accompanied by Sir E. Bradford and Captains Holford and Harvey, and will arrive in Bombay by the s.s. Arcadia about the 9th of November. Here he will make no stay, but will proceed straight to Poona. Hyderabad is next on the list, whence the tour through the Madras Presidency will be commenced. Travancore, Mysore, and Bangalore will be visited, the party remaining in the Presidency until such time as will enable them to leave Madras by steamer and arrive in Calcutta for the Christmas festivities. After a limited stay in Calcutta, the northern journey will be undertaken, and Benares, Agra, and Cawnpore visited in succession, after which the Prince and party will join Sir F. Roberts at the Cavalry Camp near Murikhi. There his Royal Highness will be the guest of the Commander-in-Chief in the Camp. After the termination of the manœuvres, which will probably last one week, his Royal Highness may proceed still further north to Rawul Pindi and Peshawur, returning to Lahore and resting there a couple of days. The party will pass down Rajpootana, visiting some of the Native States, winding up with visits to Baroda and Bombay. His Royal Highness takes his departure for England about the middle of March. From this it will be noted that all thoughts of visiting Burma have been abandoned.

THE trade in India shows a very satisfactory increase during the first quarter of the present official year. Both the imports and exports have increased, and, what is more encouraging, the exports have increased more in proportion than the imports. The largest increase in the imports has been in yarns and textile fabrics from Europe; while the export of raw materials have gone up two and a-half crores.

EMIGRATION TO BURMA.

The terms are published under which grants of land in Burma will be made to applicants willing to undertake the introduction of cultivators from Chota Nagpore and Behar. No grant is to exceed 10,000 acres without the previous consent of the Chief Commissioner, and 90 per cent. of the emigrants must be from the districts specified. Free tenure will be granted for three years on grass-lands, and eighteen years on forest-jungle on the hills. After thirty-three years two-thirds of the rates assessed on similar land in the neighbourhood will be charged for sixty-six years. Ten per cent. of the area must be brought under cultivation in the first five years, and an additional 5 per cent. each succeeding seven years up to the end of thirty-three years. The right of transfer with the consent of the Local Government will be granted during the first thirty-three years; thenceforward the grantee will have perpetual and transferable title. The right to all mines and mineral products is reserved to the Government. Timber will be allowed to be felled, except teak, for which a special license must be taken out.

THE latest news from Cashmere reports a reconciliation between the Maharajah and his brother Amar Singh. Out of deference to the Maharajah's wishes the Council have dismissed the Chief Justice. Diwan Man Nath has been appointed. Rajah Ram Singh, commanding the Cashmere forces, has consented to resume his duties in Council. Gilgit will be for the present garrisoned by 200 Goorkhas, selected from Cashmere troops to be armed with Sniders later. The road between Gilgit and Chaprote will be improved, and Chaprote will be garrisoned. This will overawe neighbouring Khanates.

DOCTORS' WORK IN INDIA.

(Englishman.)

Not only do doctors differ; they are the cause of a good deal of disputation among their patients. We are familiar in India with the controversy as to the right of official doctors to carry on private practice. As a rule, the official doctor is a busy man, but it is urged that he is generally busy simply because of his private practice, which does not always allow of his attending properly to the work for which he receives an adequate salary from Government. Those who take this view of the question complain that the official doctor is hasty and perfunctory in the performance of his duties, and argue that the system is entirely wrong by which official doctors are placed by Government in a position giving them an actual monopoly of the field, to the exclusion of private practitioners. "They have got good salaries (we are quoting from a published letter), and opportunities innumerable for money-making from other sources, and that during the time while they are being paid by Government for doing Government work. It is the only profession, I believe, in whose case Government does not object to its servants competing with the outside public." There can be no question of the enormous advantage which the official doctor has in any competition with his non-official brethren, for his position is assured, and he enjoys the prestige of his service. Nor, as far as the public is concerned, would there be anything to complain of in this if the official doctor were able to attend properly to his patients. But that is the rub. It is no reflection upon an able class of official servants to suggest that they may be over-burdened with their various and responsible duties—a certain proportion of which are self-imposed.

Complaints of negligence may often be unjust, but it is difficult to believe that there is not at least some ground for dissatisfaction. The correspondent we have quoted above says:—"At the hills especially, the doctor comes as though it were a great condescension on his part. Mothers alone at the hills with their children naturally feel particularly anxious, and it is not pleasant to them to be obliged to call in some surgeon who does not disguise his impatience to be off when he has hardly examined the case, because he is overworked." It is easy to say that the remedy is in the patient's own hands. But it is not by any means easy at times to get a non-official doctor, even in a big hill station or a large town in the plains. The correspondent contends that they are kept out of the country by the present system, and we know that those who are established in practice make it a standing grievance that they are unfairly handicapped by Government. But would matters be greatly improved were Government to put down its foot, and stop or restrict the private practice of its officers? Would there be a rush of non-official doctors to India? The probability is that in the large centres at least we should see a considerable influx of private doctors, and, with competition, matters would doubtless improve for the public. Of course, it would be bad for the official doctors, or rather for a certain number of them, and it is quite possible that their view of the question has not been fully represented. They undergo a very thorough training, and pass severe examinations. On entering the service they do not pass at once to remunerative posts; indeed, for many years they have to toil in obscurity and amid hardships on comparatively small pay. The whole question, however, is one which we should like to see discussed in a fair and impartial spirit, if only as a means of testing the sporadic and discursive attacks which are so often made on the present system, and which in many cases, we fear, emanate from dyspeptic patients whom nothing will satisfy.

If any good result is to come of considering this question it is necessary to avoid the irrelevant issues into which such a controversy is only too apt to wander. There is no necessity to discuss the personal aspects of the question. Nothing is to be gained by doing so, and it is not to be denied that the broad issues are not thereby affected. The service doctors, as a class, are a credit to the country, and will compare favourably with any body of practitioners in the world. Here and there we may find exceptions, but in what body of professional men are exceptions not to be found? Again, it is not denied that official doctors have plenty of work assigned to them in the ordinary course of their service, although occasionally attention is directed to cases where they may seem to enjoy a comparatively easy lot. In answer to a lightly-framed charge of this nature a correspondent under the signature of "Bengal Medical Service" gives a list of the duties of a Civil Surgeon, which seems more than sufficiently arduous. "Besides attending to private patients the Civil Surgeon has to act as officer of health for the place where he is stationed, and is expected to attend the meetings of the District Board; then there is vaccination to be seen to, and the jail, should it not be under a separate medical officer, as large prisons are. These duties take up his time, and usually leave little to spare for that otium cum dignitate which many delight in after a heavy day's work Medicine and surgery are sciences and arts that advance day by day, and to keep in touch with the latest ideas it is necessary to be continually reading up, be it the latest British Medical Journal, Lancet, or the newest books by recognised authorities. All this will be readily granted, but does it not prove too much for the defence? Would it not seem a natural and proper inference that a doctor with so many demands upon his time would do well to devote less of his time to private patients? No doubt the question is one which depends in a great measure upon special circumstances, but there is also a broad general aspect of the matter, and one which touches at once the self-respect of the medical services and the well-being of the European community.

EXCHANGE AND INCOME-TAX.

(Civil and Military Gazette.)

When a responsible official can solemnly state that the gold equivalent to five hundred rupees at the present rate of exchange is equal in purchasing power to its par value a certain number of years ago, and thereby satisfy the majority of English legislators, it is indeed time for the Indian Government—which yearly complains of its own "loss by exchange"—to point out to the responsible official that what he states is—to put it mildly—untrue. Government will, no doubt, excuse themselves as before on the ground that they equally with their servants, are sufferers from the rate of exchange. This, however, is not exactly the case. The Indian Government certainly has to meet its engagements at home in gold, just as one of its servants may have to meet school charges and so forth, but there the parallel ceases. The Government finding its available balance for expenditure out here too small for its requirements, looks rounds for a remedy and finds the income-tax amongst others, whereby it recoups itself for the deficit but still further reduces the income of its unfortunate servant. Nor does the evil stop here, for the man with the fixed income has also to recoup the losses in exchange and income-tax of the European tradesman and on all articles of European goods which to him are necessaries of life. Take the case of a married man with a wife and three children at home, the latter being educated at some one of the public schools, his income being, say, 1,000 rupees per month. Now the very least he must send home to meet these charges is £500 a year, which will cost him at the present rate of exchange Rs. 7,500 or 625 per month, leaving him a gross balance of Rs. 375 for his own support. From this he has to pay income-tax, funds and most probably life insurance charges, and if he is a military man, mess and band subscriptions, &c. If the rupee were at par, he would have an available balance of about 600 a month, and would be in comparative affluence. He cannot tax anybody to recoup himself for the loss as Government can do, and he lives in constant dread of three things: a further fall in exchange, an increased income tax, or a reduced salary, any one of which he is absolutely powerless to prevent and all of which would practically burn the already diminished candle at both ends. Now, can this man's case be said to be on the same footing as that of Government? To our mind there is a vast difference and in equity the Government itself should provide a partial remedy. Government might say in effect:—"We are both sufferers by the loss in exchange, you to a far greater extent than I am. I cannot afford to raise your income, but neither do I think it fair that the whole burden should fall upon you as at present. Your chief losses are caused by your home remittances. The present rate of exchange is 1s. 4d., the par value of the rupee is two shillings. The mean between these is 1s. 8d. I am willing, therefore, to allow you to remit bona fide family remittances for the support of your family and the education of your children at the mean of 1s. 8d. We shall thus each be losers on that portion of your income to the extent of 4d. in the rupee. I will further remit income tax in the case of Government servants, as they practically have to pay the losses by change and income-tax of the European traders in this country." Now this seems to be a really fair and practical partial solution of the great difficulties many of us are at present experiencing. To prevent advantage being taken of the concession, the amount of the family remittance might be fixed at one half of the gross income up to a maximum of say £1,000 and certificates should be given that the remittance is for the bona fide support of wife and children and not for investment or payment of debts.

THE UNIFICATION OF THE PRESIDENTIAL ARMIES.

(Madras Mail.)

The Secretary of State has thought it prudent to postpone for a more convenient season an application to Parliament for the amendment of the Acts which govern the organisation of the Presidential Armies of India. Were this most important branch of the Government of India submitted for discussion, in view to reform, there is no knowing where the demand for change would end. Thirty-one years have passed since the Government was transferred from the Company to the Crown, and the period has been more fruitful of change and development than any corresponding period in the annals of India. "Something must be done;" that is admitted at the India Office as elsewhere; but, with the Irish question on its hands, Her Majesty's Government desires to put off as long as it can decently do so the solution of Indian problems. As to the Indian Army unification question, there is a great divergence of opinion among the experts, and as many officers of distinction are opposed as there are officers of high merit who advocate it. When the time comes for the opinions of opponents and advocates to be quoted in Parliament, there may be found a consensus of opinion at Westminster that in the face of such diversity of views the wisest course will be not to be in a hurry to make any radical change.

The Madras and Bombay armies must be admitted to fall short of what those forces should be. They are not thoroughly reliable, and year by year the difficulty of finding suitable recruits for them increases. But their defects will not be remedied by the proposed amalgamation with the army of Bengal. It would be better, one would think, to see whether the defects are not capable of removal by paying the sepoys more liberally, and otherwise making the military profession more attractive than it now is. The question is a large, and may any day become a vitally important one; and the India Office postpones its formal consideration. But the Pioneer states that such measures in the direction of unification as can be carried out without Parliamentary legislation, are to be carried out forthwith. "These are, briefly, the transfer of those administrative departments which have not already been brought under the Government of India to that authority; the introduction of more immediate communication between the Commanders-in-Chief of Madras and Bombay, and Army-Head quarters in matters relating to discipline, equipment, and the like; and the delegation to those authorities of considerable powers in dealing with military expenditure." The Military Accounts and Ordnance Departments have already been unified, and the Clothing Department is in process of unification. Consequently Madras goes to Poona for her gunpowder, and Bombay comes to Madras for her military clothing —examples of the unbusiness-like arrangements which commend themselves to Bengal. The Commissariat Department is also on the point of being unified; and an officer of the type of Colonel Gunning, who knows everything about Madras, but little about Punjab products, manners and customs, will be liable to be sent to the Punjab; and an officer at Lahore who knows all about the Punjab, and little about Madras, will be liable to be posted to Madras—arrangements that none but a Bengal man could admit to be calculated to promote Departmental efficiency.

Our Allahabad contemporary is further led to understand that while the administration of the unified Department is to be brought under the Government of India—one of the most over-burdened Governments in existence—or while less and less confidence is to be reprosed in, and less and less responsibility is to be put upon, Local Governments, the local heads of the Departments "will be placed much more directly in communication with the local Commander-in-Chief, so that the measure, embracing as it will the delegation of financial powers, should involve a considerable degree of decentralisation in regard to details, while securing that unification of control the want of which has hitherto been such a prominent defect of Indian army administration." In plain English the Departmental officers will have to serve two masters—the local Commander-in-Chief, and the Commander-in-Chief at Simla. The local Chief is to be only partially effaced; some obedience and respect will still be due to him; but the Chief at Simla is the "boss" of the show, and it will go hard with the Departmental officers if they ever forget the fact. Centralisation tempered by decentralisation is to be tried, and this is to secure what is called "unification of control." All this is eminently unbusiness-like, but it is also eminently à la Bengal. The Government of India, it is said, "is now in communication with the Governments of Madras and Bombay regarding the mode of giving effect of the new proposals, and the date to be fixed for them." The correspondence is unnecessary. The Government of India is covetous of more power, and wishes to gain it by reducing the authority of the Local Governments. If the Government of India were habitually composed of men of very great ability, who are impervious to selfish considerations, and capable of taking broad and generous views of Madras and Bombay, the proposals referred to might be regarded as the outcome of a far-seeing statesmanship. But the craze for centralisation, the greed for holding all the reins, is not statesmanship; and we hope that when the question is threshed out in Parliament, the proposed aggrandisement of Bengal at the expense of Madras and Bombay will meet with a suitable check.

THE HISTORY OF THE SALT TAX.

(Statesman.)

It has been frequently remarked that there is much to interest the economic student in the early history of the Indian impost upon salt. It dates from the period of plunder that followed the destruction of the old régime in Bengal. Our acquisition of the Dewanni, the right to levy taxes throughout the period, was secured in August, 1765, and in the following year Lord Clive, as President of the Calcutta Council, assumed the functions of Dewan, or Collector of Revenue under the Great Moghul. One of his first acts was to form a society for the benefit of the Company's European servants vested with a monopoly of the sale of salt, betel nuts, and tobacco. He fixed the wholesale price of the first-named commodity at Rs. 200 per 100 maunds, the value of money being probably four times its present standard. Fifty per cent. of the cost of the manufactured article was supposed to find its way into the coffer of the State; and, including an impost of fifteen per cent. on betel, the revenue never exceeded thirteen lakhs. The profits cannot be stated accurately. They were many times greater than this comparatively insignificant sum, and enabled these receivers to return to England rich beyond the dreams of avarice, after leading a life of riotous luxury in the country. Such was the origin of the fortunes of the Nabobs who play so conspicuous a part in the light literature of the last century, and whose vulgar extravagance and love of display cast a glamour over Anglo-Indian life which has not yet wholly disappeared.

Lord Clive hoped to recommend this organised robbery to his Honourable masters by an appeal to their book-keeping instincts. He gilded the pill by representing that the profits of the monopoly were to serve instead of all remuneration by way of salary. But the Court of Directors was not to be hoodwinked, and to their great credit they sent out peremptory orders that this systematic interference with their dewanni rights was not to be tolerated. In vain did the society protest. The utmost they could effect was a postponement of their downfall till October, 1768, on the plea that the contracts entered into for the provision of salt had still some months to run. During the next few years the trade in salt was open to the people except in cases where zemindars possessed an exclusive right of manufacture by sunnud. This happy period of free-trade was, however, of short duration. On Warren Hastings' arrival as Governor-General in 1772, he cast about him for means to increase the dwindling revenues of Bengal; and so valuable an object of taxation as salt did not long escape his notice. In declaring that its manufacture was, in future, to be exclusively carried on for the benefit of the Company, he proceeded to grant farms in each district possessing saliferous tracts, for a period of five years. Under this system the farmers, who were mostly creatures of the Honourable Council, bound themselves to furnish the salt at a fixed price; and it was then sold to the wholesale dealers at a higher rate, also fixed; the margin constituting the Company's profit. The wholesale smuggling to which this very defective method gave scope suggested another reform in 1780, when, in spite of the opposition of the Francis gang, the monopoly was placed on a more stringent footing. A special department was formed, the European officers of which were bound by oath to be content with their recognised allowances. There was little temptation afforded to perjury, for in addition to their fixed salaries on a liberal scale, they drew a commission of ten per cent. of the profits from sales. The Salt agents, as they were turned, dealt directly with the manufacturers, and sold the product to Native merchants at rates fixed yearly by the Governor-General and Council. The result, from a fiscal point of view, was highly favourable. The revenue between 1780 and 1785 averaged forty lakhs a year, and at the close of Warren Hastings' term of office it had risen to forty-five. Twenty-five years later it stood at 172 lakhs, which is very little below the present average, though the population has doubled and wealth increased tenfold since 1812. In 1786 Lord Cornwallis introduced certain modifications, intended to protect the salt-makers from the exaction of the middlemen between the Company's covenanted servants and themselves. But the condition of the molunqis, as the salt labourers were called, continued to be miserable in the extreme. Adscripti glebæ, bound to the soil by ties as close as those of mediæval villeins, they were hopelessly in debt to their employers, and toiled in malarious swamps for a pittance that rarely kept body and soul together. The liberation of Indian seaborne trade which was made a condition of the renewal of the Company's charter in 1832, worked a revolution which had the indirect result of freeing these unhappy beings from their bonds. Followed as it was by an immense fall in freight, it gradually transferred the source of supply from the shores of the Bay of Bengal to Great Britain and Red Sea ports. The Salt department became a vast anachronism, and in 1863 it was swept into the limbo of effete organisations by a stroke of Sir Charles Trevelyan's pen. The Government monopoly in salt then ceased and determined. Imports by sea were fixed at rates which till lately varied in each Presidency, and local manufacturers were subjected to a corresponding excise duty. The latter, in so far as Bengal is concerned, is now confined to the Orissa districts, and in 1887-88 yielded barely two per per cent. on a years' revenue from salt of Rx. 1,900,000.

A NEW FRONTIER POLICY.

(Civil and Military Gazette.)

The recent Lushai Expedition represents, and the projected expedition on a larger scale emphasises, the new departure in our Eastern frontier policy, which is but the logical result of annexation of Burma. The former policy has always been not to interfere with the tribes beyond our border and to attempt, by a cordon of police posts and patrols, to prevent them from interfering with us. When this non-interference policy was first inaugurated, the argument used in its favour was that, if we brought the tribes on our border into subjection, it would only bring us into contact with tribes of a more savage and warlike nature, and that this process—a very difficult and costly one for us—would continue until we reached territory, nominally but not practically, under the rule of the king of Burma who, though he would oppose any interference with his subjects, however much they might have merited chastisement at our hands, would be quite unable and perhaps unwilling to control them himself. It was, therefore, evidently wiser to abstain from entering upon an undertaking in which each forward step would bring us into greater difficulties. The annexation of Burma has altered the whole aspect of affairs. Now every forward move brings our own forces closer together; and it would be manifestly absurd to allow the inhabitants of a small tract of country completely surrounded by British territory to issue forth at their pleasure to murder and carry off British subjects. The cordon system has been tried long enough and its futility proved over and over again. Imagine a tract of country consisting of range upon range of steep hills, completely covered with jungle so dense that you can march for days without seeing anything but the ground beneath your feet, the trunks of the trees around you, and the foliage over head. Through this jungle there are no roads, only here and there a track which is scarcely passable for civilized troops, with no villages by the way and no supplies obtainable. Having pictured such a country, let us ask ourselves how we would like to have to guard 120 miles of such a frontier from the attacks of savages, who may come from almost any direction, who can live for days on the produce of the jungles through which they move, to whom every stream bed is a highway, and every hill and hollow well known. A more hopeless task cannot well be conceived, and yet this is what five hundred men of the Frontier police have been attempting ever since the withdrawal of the first Lushai Expeditionary Force in 1872. What wonder if they have failed, though it has certainly been through no lack of zeal.

MAGAZINE RIFLES FOR INDIA.

(Pioneer.)

Yet another instance has occurred in which the notorious incapacity of the Ordnance Department in England has been manifested to the detriment of the army in India. The indent sent from this country for 35,000 magazine rifles to be delivered this year was at first accepted in the War Office, and there seemed every chance of the British troops in our first two Army Corps being armed with the improved weapon before next April; but now an intimation has been received that only 15,000 rifles can be sent out. The reason for this reduction is, we believe, due to the desire of the Ordnance Department to have a large reserve of rifles in England. This is no doubt advisable, but surely the requirements of the home army might have been more accurately calculated when the orders were placed for the magazine rifle. There are numbers of private firms who would willingly have put down machinery equal to turning out in a limited time the full number of rifles required both in England and India, for Government contracts for arms are eagerly sought after. As the case now stands the 15,000 rifles might just as well not be sent at all, for such a number will not be sufficient to arm our two Army Corps, and it would be unwise to run the risk of British troops having two different rifles on active service. The non-arrival of the full number indented for will check for a time the further issue of Martinis to the Native Army, though an effort will be made to complete the re-armament of the Punjab Frontier Force. Up to the present time the whole of the Native troops in the two Army Corps first for service under the mobilisation scheme have received Martinis. They include fifteen regiments of cavalry, thirty-seven regiments of infantry, and six companies of Bengal Sappers. All these belong to the Bengal Army with the exception of three Bombay regiments serving in the Quetta Command. A few battalions in Bombay and Madras have also exchanged the Snider for the Martini. The improvement in shooting in such Native regiments as have been re-armed has already been noticed, and there will be universal regret in the army that the scheme of re-armament has been arrested just as its good results were becoming apparent.

CHINESE SUZERAINTY IN SIKKIM.

(Indian Daily News.)

It appears that the Amban declines to withdraw the pretension of China to exercise suzerainty over Sikkim, though he is willing, and even suggests, that it should be of a merely nominal character. It is, of course, never likely to be anything else, as the Government of India would object to Chinese interference in Sikkim equally as to Thibetan interference. The claim was probably put forward, not because the Chinese Government wished to take any active part in Sikkim affairs, or even because they had any deep-seated feeling of sentiment, such as apprehension of loss of prestige in their Himalayan States, against formally recognising that British influence is paramount in Sikkim, but because it could be worked as an obstacle to the Government of India's desire to bring pressure to bear through China upon Thibet. Whether or no China's authority over the Lamas is much more real and active than over the Nepaulese rulers at Khatmandu, where it is merely a name, there can be no doubt that she is as anxious to see British influence excluded from these territories as the Thibetans and Nepaulese themselves; and the latter, for their part, cling to the pretence of a Chinese suzerainty, because it secures them a greater measure of independence than they conceive they would be permitted to enjoy under British protection. It is difficult to reconcile the display of Chinese obstinacy and obstructiveness over these prolonged Sikkim-Thibet negotiations, with the feelings of extreme friendliness towards, and confidence in, the British Government for which credit is given in London to Peking. By coercing the Lamas into a formal submission to the terms proposed by the Government of India, China would have lost nothing; but it suits the Chinese statesmen, as it does the Lamas, to aim at the exclusion of English influence, even to excluding English trade. Whether the Government proposes to continue the expense of maintaining a garrison at Gnatong is not known; but there appears to be a belief that the troops may be withdrawn without apprehension of the Thibetans attempting to re-occupy the positions from which they were driven. If the Government has learned anything from the experience of the past few months, it should be that India has no interest in Sikkim to justify the continuance of heavy military expense in this direction. Should it be considered necessary to have a force within reach to repel any attempt at reprisals upon Sikkim that the Thibetans might venture upon after our withdrawal, the troops at Darjeeling might be strengthened; but in the interest of both the troops and the tax-payers we hope there is no intention of continuing to garrison Sikkim with British regiments.

THE CHOLERA GOD.

(Civil and Military Gazette.)

Hardu Lall, the cholera god, is an incarnation of Siva and has, since the advent of Purusha and Parakti, the Hindu Adam and Eve, roamed about the world seeking victims. Hardu, parasitical as he is, dearly loves unclean diggings. Strong smells, even of the proverbial strength which knocks down elephants, are as the scent of ambrosia in his nostrils. No wonder, then, that he has taken up his abode in Indian cities and villages where lax sanitation fosters dirt and nastiness after the god's own heart. And Hardu Lall is a god worshipped as fervently as Mahadeo himself. Sivaji, say the Hindus, is the great high potentate, the presiding magnate of Swarga; but Hardu Lall is the agent—the most patent agent—of Siva in his capacity of Destroyer. And Hardu Lall insinuates himself in mysterious ways, and one knows not where his pestilential breath may fall. In the Rajah's palace or the ryot's hut it matters not, for he knows no human distinctions. All that he craves for is a dirty spot to squat upon, and then, woe betide those mortals upon whom his wrath falls. Day by day his votaries offer up sacrifice. "Spare us," say they, "just a little while longer, dear Harduji! Don't be so importunate. Have you not enough fat goats, kids and cocks, and are not the deaths from fever, ague, wind-stroke, and such like, enough for you? Can't you make your meal off them? Spare us, O Hardu! and you shall have fresh goats daily, and tender kids too for your soft gums." In such fashion is Hardu Lall appealed to by the Hindus. It may be interesting to Europeans in India to know that Hardu Lall has no designs on them—they are outside his pale. "It is only on us poor Hindus that his wrath is centred," says the Munshi. We are inclined to think, however, that clean water, carbolic acid, Condy's Fluid, chloride of lime, and such like disinfectants have something to do with Hardu's dislike of Europeans.

MOORE'S UTOPIA.

(Bombay Gazette.)

In spite of its jerkiness of style, Sir William Moore's Paper on the "Falling Rupee" in the current number of the Asiatic Quarterly will probably attract a number of readers from that large and growing class which eagerly jumps at any proposal to restore the fortunes of silver. They will be disappointed, for the paper does not contain the faintest hint of any proposal to make one rupee do the duty of two shillings, and they will be tempted to throw down the Review with a groan when they discover that the learned doctor suggests that marriage will be a probable solution of the difficulty. And the doctor is in earnest; marry, he says, a Eurasian girl or an educated Native lady, and the chances are that you will be tied down to India for life with a family who will not need the bracing air of England, and who will be at home in the bazaars of India. Such women would be economical and such families cheap. True it is that the Eurasian and better class of Native ladies have been neglected of yore, but the greater attention now given to education and morals will soon put them more on a footing of equality with Englishmen, and make them perfectly fitted to be obedient and satisfactory wives. It is his opinion that such marriages are daily becoming more common, and that the children will be absorbed very largely into the Indian army, so that when the time comes for the English to retire from the country the Eurasian will rule in his stead.

We trust we have not overstated the doctor's case, but in our opinion the whole article is a laboured joke. After a considerable experience of Englishmen of all classes in India, and a knowledge of their sentiments regarding marriage in general, and Eurasians and Natives in particular, we cannot discover the slightest indication of any approach towards this matrimonial millennium. One swallow does not make a summer, and although individual marriages may prove happy for the individuals, there is not the slightest fear, or, may we say, hope, that marriage is the goal to which young men are tending. This is essentially an age of luxury obtained by association, and young men fresh from our schools aim at continuing the outdoor games and manly sports which they have perfected at school. Their healthy and practically moral lives are usefully spent almost apart from the influence of women. They rarely seek and do not often make the acquaintance of married ladies and still less of unmarried girls. These fine young fellows are often constitutionally shy, and keep aloof from a sex which they do not understand, and as age increases and younger men press into their places they gradually subside into a regular club life with its comparative luxury and its selfish independence. It is in this transitional state that they are most susceptible, when they find the evenings long and violent exertion impossible, and sitting still equally so without a companion. It is then, perhaps, that they feel a misgiving that life is not all cricket and lawn-tennis or snipe-shooting, and if in this state of despondency they meet with a fair sympathiser, why then "exchange be blowed!" It is not the Eurasian or the educated Native girl that will captivate his fancy, but some creature not too bright or good, who is somehow associated with a dim memory of a forgotten boyish dream. And when the inevitable money troubles come he will face it as his fathers have faced it before him, manfully and honourably, and will make those sacrifices for his children which all English parents are known to make, to the astonishment of France and other nations. But if in the dangerous time of transition debt is pressing and the jingling of the dollar is a hurt to his feelings, why then the club opens its arms and welcomes him and holds him fast, and he passes into a life of gentle or cynical indifference. For him is neither English nor Eurasian, educated nor uneducated, and so the individual withers and the club is more and more.

Marriage, therefore, is not the solution of the problem. The tendency unquestionably is to postpone all thought of it until the forties, and then to postpone it altogether. Club life, the mess, and other cenobitic institutions make up the sum of human existence for the ordinary and average man. But if the wife comes on the scene the children follow and must in time be sent home; there are economies possible now which were not possible before. The passage to England is half as cheap as it used to be. The stores have brought down prices to a reasonable level. Rents are cheaper, and the higher grade schools on the lines of the board schools have reduced the cost of education to a very moderate sum. The costly, useless, and inefficient private venture schools are being swept away by the competition of these large schools worked by powerful associations which have started into life to check the encroachments of the Board schools. There is a feeling that it is infra dig. to send young gentlemen to schools chiefly frequented by the better class of tradesmen's sons, but it will not last, for men now see that boys must be sent where they can be best educated at a reasonable rate. The problem of secondary education in England is being forced upon public attention, and the religious associations are rapidly occupying the ground in anticipation of State action. If, therefore, there is no political remedy for the falling rupee, the natural remedy of a fall in prices with cheaper living and cheap education are consolations to the paterfamilias, and to the man who would like to marry. Such economies do not make up the whole loss, but they are on the right side, and they are a gain as far as they go. While, therefore, we do not deny that a brilliant brunette might captivate a young man's fancy, and that the prospect of some thousands of rupees might not incline the balance of decision, yet we do not share the fears of the learned author of "Family Medicine" that marriage with the daughters of India is a probable, or even a remote, consequence of the falling rupee. The sweet-scented English Lily need not fear the fragrance of the Indian Violet.

BENGAL.

THERE have been some serious disturbances lately on the Bengal portion of the B. and N. W. Railway. The embankment between Banwarchok and Pahlezoghaut railway stations was cut through at a point about a mile and a-quarter off the former station on the night of the 8th inst., refilled on the morning of the 9th, and recut by the ryots on the evening of the same date between five and eight P.M., and refilled two hours later, again cut by the ryots between six and twelve midnight, and refilled for the third time. There is a span bridge about a quarter of a mile further up, in which the spans had been filled in with earth in consequence of the pillars not being able to stand the rush of water. This, we are informed, was done at the suggestion of the Consulting Engineer to the Government. The earthwork of two of these spans was dug out by the ryots on the evening of the 9th inst. between four P.M. and midnight. The railway and district police tried to stop the villagers (who numbered about 500), but were defied and beaten off in both places; and two head constables, two constables, one permanent way sub-inspector, and four trolly men were slightly injured.

THE case of Andrew Hearsey versus the editor of the Pioneer for libel came before the Calcutta High Court on Friday. The Judge directed the jury to acquit on the technical ground that there was no evidence to connect the defendant as editor with the publication in Calcutta.

IN regard to complaints from Calcutta regarding the operation of the Merchandise Marks' Act, the Government of India are quite disposed to suspend the operation of the prohibitive clauses of the Act for three months, always provided that good evidence is given that this step is really necessary in the interests of the mercantile community.

IT is fever, not cholera, the Sanitary Commissioner of Bengal tells us, the native ought to dread; yet no one gives a thought to the enormous mortality and sickness from fever, while half a dozen cases of cholera will excite attention, and may arouse a panic. In Bengal last year, out of a population of sixty-six millions, nearly twenty-two millions suffered from fever; and of the total death-rate of the province over 72 per cent. was due to the same cause.

MADRAS.

THE history of joint stock enterprise in Madras during the past few years ought, thinks a contemporary, to be a warning to the would-be investor. If we take the figures for the four years ending 31st March, 1888, we find that of 613 companies constituted, only 173, or 28 per cent., have survived. Fortunately there is some reason to believe that the lesson has not been lost on the public, as there were only thirty two companies registered last year—the lowest figure for the past eight years.

COLONEL MOORE, President of the Madras Municipal Commission, has filed a suit in the High Court against Mr. Eardley Norton, a barrister-at-law and a Municipal Commissioner, for defamation. The damages are put down at fifty thousand rupees. The defamation is alleged to be in connection with a remark which Mr. Norton is said to have made with reference to the relations between the contractor for the Municipal sewage farms and Colonel Moore. The Hon. the Advocate-General, Mr. Gantz, Mr. Johnstone, and Mr. Robert Grant have been retained by Mr. Norton, and Mr. Willie Grant for the plaintiff.

MR. E. V. MACKAY, Superintendent of Police in Kathiawar, has been allowed privilege leave for three months.

DURING Dr. Arnott's absence Surgeon R. J. Baker will act as Obstetric Physician at the J. J. Hospital, and Surgeon Collie will act as Resident Surgeon of the European General Hospital.

SURGEON W. H. BURKE, M.B., has been appointed Assistant Surgeon in the Sassoon Hospital at Poona, and teacher of surgery and midwifery at the Poona Medical School, vice Surgeon-Major Eaton. Surgeon G. H. Bull, M.D., will continue to act in Dr. Burke's absence.

MR. JUSTICE SCOTT delivered judgment in the High Court on Thursday on the appeal of Mr. Ardaseer Merwanjee, Municipal Chairman of Lanowlee, who was sentenced to fine and imprisonment on the 10th of May last for criminal breach of trust. He was of opinion there had been an error of law on the part of the Sessions Judge in directing the jury. He thought if the facts of the case were laid before the jury the accused would no doubt be acquitted. While reserving conviction and sentence, he ordered the fine to be returned to the accused.

ON August 25th an influential body of gentlemen from Bombay and the Resident inspected the new electric light installation at the Gaekwar's Makurpura palace, at Baroda. The experiments in transmission power and electric energy were shown by Messrs. Long and Taylor, Messrs Siemens Brothers' engineers. Afterwards the party, who were guests of H.H. the Gaekwar, dined in the palace illuminated by the electric light, which was a great success.

A VERY well attended meeting of the Parsee community was held at Kurrachee on August 25th, for the purpose of protesting against Mr. Ommanney's Note. Every available seat was occupied. Within the memory of the oldest Parsee never was a meeting so well attended. Four resolutions were laid and unanimously adopted. The Sind and Baluchistan Parsees will join. A special committee has been appointed to draw up a protest. A telegram of sympathy with the Bombay movement was resolved upon. The greatest sympathy was expressed for Lord Reay's position. The object will be only to record a painful regret against the aspersions. Special thanks are due to Messrs. Mody (the president), Gadiali (Kotwal), and Rajkotwala for the moderation and success of the meeting. The unthinking editorial of a Bengalee writer here has unnecessarily pained the assembled Parsees, whom he in a parable styled fools.

BURMA.

THE Chief Commissioner of Burma has decided to abolish the detective establishment which was entertained some months ago for the prevention of smuggling in the Ruby Mines district.

As a result of Sir Edward Buck's visit to Burma a large survey force will be sent for employment in both the Upper and the Lower Provinces. The Central Provinces will for the most part be drawn upon for the necessary parties.

THE non-commissioned officers and men of the D, E, F and G Batteries, A Brigade, R.H.A., entitled to return to England, but delirous of extending their service in this country, will be allowed to volunteer without bounty for the Royal Artillery serving in either of the three Presidencies, but will not be allowed to select any particular battery. The non-commissioned officers remaining under this order will take rank in the battery to which posted according to the date of their promotion.

LAHORE has lost one of its old Native residents in Lala Durga Pershad, known popularly by the name of Chota Lal, shawl merchant and general contractor. He was ill for only a short time. He was very popular among all classes, particularly the poor, to whom he was always kind.

THE Punjab Excise Administration Report will, the Lahore paper understands, be issued in a few days, and will show, among other things, the number of distilleries in the Province has been considerably reduced in the last year and very extraordinarily reduced since this time three years. The excise revenue (about £60,000) is for a Province containing, roughly speaking, a population of eighteen millions, almost insignificant.

THE Civil and Military Gazette's correspondent in Kulu writes:—"To judge by the noise, there was a regular stand-up fight between a leopard and a lot of owls in the cliff near my house the other night. First, there was much screeching from the owls; and then there was a sound from the leopard, who was not exactly grunting but snarling as if attacked. Shortly the noise of the owls was redoubled, as if they had received a strong reinforcement; and the leopard was heard spitting like a cat, and going on as if he were both insulted and greatly aggrieved. Next, there was another yell, like that of a cat when a bucket of water is thrown over it, and much hooting of owls—a pæan of victory, for the leopard had bolted. I remember seeing a combat like this at early dawn some years ago. The leopard has no chance at all, as those big owls swoop at his head and eyes, whilst others pitch into him behind. He strikes wildly and ineffectually, and at last runs for it."

THE Kashmir Durbar have asked the Punjab educational authorities for the services of two Native inspectors of schools. Originally the request was for a Native graduate qualified to act as Director of Public Instruction, but it is now thought that an inspector at Jammu and Srinagar will suffice.

THE Indian States under Native Administration comprise an area of 610,000 square miles, with a population of about 61 millions of people. They yield to their Chiefs revenues aggregating about Rx. 18,000,000, and the pay to the Indian Treasury tributes amounting to Rx. 743,000.

JAIPUR spent in 1887-88 on public works Rx. 105,000 out of a total expenditure of Rx. 557,000. Baroda had 32,452 children at its schools, and spent Rx. 366,000 on railways and public works, or about 34 per cent. of the year's revenue, and in several of the larger States colleges, schools, and hospitals are being steadily increased.

UPPER BURMA MILITARY GARRISON has been reduced from 26,000 to 12,000 men. Most of the districts are quiet, and the people settling down to peaceful pursuits. The revenue has risen during the three years since annexation from 22 lakhs to 65. A railway 220 miles long has been made and is already getting a large traffic, 144 miles of bridged and metalled roads have been made, and 452 more under construction.

THE DEPRECIATED RUPEE AT BAGHDAD.—The men of the detachment of the Bombay Marine Battalion stationed at Baghdad have, for the past two years, complained of the heavy loss they suffer owing to the current value of the rupee at that place being only ten annas. Their case was recently represented to the Government of India by the military authorities at Bombay, and the Political Resident, Turkish Arabia, who both recommended that compensation should be awarded to the men of the detachment, stating, at the same time, that the Indian rupee had been depreciated by order of the Turkish Government. The Government of India, however, according to the Civil and Military Gazette, refused to admit the claim to compensation, and replied that "no order of a Government touching the exchange value between its own and a foreign currency can possibly have any effect on the actual purchasing-power of the foreign currency if it retains its intrinsic value as does the rupee."

ONCE again the old complaint comes from the Burdwan division, writes the Englishman, that the number of Mahomedans employed in the public offices is altogether disproportionate to the number of Mahomedans in the population. This cannot be attributed in any way to the indisposition of the district authorities to give them employment when suitable candidates can be found. The difficulty, however, seems to be to find suitable candidates, notwithstanding the progress that is now being generally made with Mahomedan education, for the Collector of Burdwan applied to one of the Mahomedan societies in Calcutta for suitable candidates for employment, but without success. Some progress was, however, made last year, for two Mahomedans were appointed to the initial grades of the superior service in the Burdwan district, and two in the Bankura district, while seven apprentices were admitted in the Birbhum offices. Still the total number of those employed is far below what might be expected, as out of 2,721 officers in the superior service in the division, only 297 are Mahomedans, and in the superior service only 1,603 out of 7,367. The question of the further employment of Mahomedans is one deserving of close attention, especially in Upper India.

RANGOON.

AUG. 31.

"A Barrister" in a local paper points out that an official who has served seventeen years in the Punjab, who has just been appointed to officiate for Colonel Spearman as Commissioner of the Irrawaddy Division, is so ignorant of law as to have recently in Upper Burma upheld an illegal sentence of imprisonment in default of fine inflicted by the Deputy Commissioner of Myingyan. He doubts if there is any intelligent Burman magistrate in Lower Burma who would have made such a blunder, and asks if such an official has shown himself qualified by his attainments to be entrusted with appellate duties in an important commercial town like Bassein. The Local Government is not always happy in its selection for promotion, and in the present instance the appointment is all the more curious inasmuch as there was already in Bassein a highly experienced Deputy Commissioner of some sixteen years' service, a barrister-at-law, against whose selection for an officiating Commissionership not one word could have been said.

The Judicial Commissioner, Mr. Ward, has just released on appeal a phoongyie and two others sentenced by Colonel Plant, Sessions Judge of Tenasserim, to transportation for life for aiding and abetting the late Tavoy rebellion. He finds they have been convicted on insufficient evidence, that of approvers uncorroborated; and though he has no doubt they sympathised with the rebel movement he thinks there is nothing more than suspicion against them. I have no doubt that, now the Province is quiet, if the convictions of all those who have been transported in the last three years could be similarly reviewed by a lawyer of Mr. Ward's attainments, it would be found that only suspicion attached to a good many; and I hope the Government will be advised at an early date to see if the promises of mercy in the future held out by Lord Dufferin on his visit to Burma could not be extended to many youths of sixteen and eighteen years of age transported to India and Port Blair in the past three years. Many of them were led away by their elders, who ought to have known better, and restoring them to their friends, where no other crime than attempted rebellion, and no dacoities or murders were proved against them, would have a good effect. They must have learnt in their forced expatriation of two or three years a good deal of the might and power of the Government they so foolishly tried to defy, and keeping them in life-long exile for foolish actions they did as boys was, I believe, never intended at the time they were sentenced. The approaching visit of his Royal Highness Prince Albert Victor might be made the medium for a politic display of mercy to a large proportion of the misguided men and boys so liberally transported from Burma in the past three years, against whom no killing, wounding, or robbing had been proved.

It is said the appointment of an additional Sessions Judge for the Pegu and Irrawaddy Divisions has been recommended by the Local Government. It is to be hoped if such an appointment is sanctioned it may be given to an officer of experience. In the person of Mr. D. G. Macleod, Barrister-at-Law, Judge of Moulmein, we have a gentleman of some sixteen years' experience on the Bench, well deserving of promotion, and whose claims hitherto have been curiously overlooked.

An interesting case against the Flotilla Company to recover damages for some goods burnt in the Yoma at Myingyan, some months ago, has been postponed to November to enable a Commission which has been sent to Scotland to be returned. The Yoma's burning was, I believe, purely accidental, and the present suit will decide whether owners of inland steamers are ensurers of goods entrusted to them as well as carriers. Several lakhs of rupees are virtually involved in the decision which I suppose will go to the Privy Council, however it is decided here and in Calcutta. The Flotilla Company have since rebuilt the Yoma, which started last week on her first run up-country since her reconstruction.

THE report on the salt market for the second quarter of the current year shows the quantity of salt of every description cleared was 2,403,784 maunds, as against 2,771,718 maunds in the corresponding quarter of last year. The net amount of duty levied was Rs. 56,36,201, as against Rs. 60,81,419 in the corresponding quarter of the previous year.

HEAD-TAKING is the latest phase of the Achin war. As was to be expected, the recent capture of the Achinese fort did little to stop the attacks on the Dutch positions. On the contrary, the Achinese have since become bolder, and almost nightly the telegraph wires are cut and the bridges on the lines of communication are destroyed. The Dutch, at their wits' end, are now, it is said, about to adopt a somewhat savage plan of action. A corps of armed convicts has been organised, with instructions to lie in wait at night for the marauders, and for every Achinese head they bring in they are to receive a reward of twenty five guilders.

THE GOVERNMENT'S ACTION IN KASHMIR.

A Bengali newspaper has got hold of and publishes the Government of India's despatch of the 3rd April to the Secretary of State detailing the reasons which had led to interposition in the affairs of Kashmir. The interest of this document has been altogether discounted by the Viceroy's letter to the Maharaja which goes over the same ground at much greater length and in less formal language: its text, however, is as follows:—

My Lord,—With our despatch No. 142 of the 18th of August, 1888, we forwarded for your lordship's information certain papers regarding the Kashmir State.

The condition of Kashmir was then by no means satisfactory, and the Resident, Mr. Plowden, had come to the conclusion that so long as the present Maharaja was maintained in power there could be no hope of better things. He therefore urged the Government of India to interfere, and exclude H.H. from all concerns with the administration. There was much to support Mr. Plowden's view, and we were by no means confident as to the result of any further abstention from interference, but on the whole we decided that the Maharaja should have another opportunity of showing, under favourable circumstances, whether he was capable of ruling the State. He was accordingly continued in power, and Mr. Plowden, who soon after left Kashmir on promotion, was succeeded by Colonel R. P. Nisbet, C.I.E., a personal friend of the Maharajah, and an officer of large administrative experience. It was hoped that Colonel Nisbet might succeed in establishing a strong influence over his Highness' mind, in freeing him from the domination of certain unprincipled persons about him, who took advantage of his timidity and superstition, and in gradually bringing him to a proper sense of his position and responsibility.

The papers now enclosed will show your Lordship that this hope was disappointed, and that after four months in the Kashmir Residency, Colonel Nisbet has come to the same conclusion as his predecessor. The immediate cause which led him to resubmit the matter for our orders was the discovery of some letters, said to have been written by the Maharaja, which were of such a nature as to present his character and conduct in a very unfavourable light. We were not disposed to attach any excessive importance to those letters, because we had received a number of very similar documents a year before, and were not ignorant of the Maharaja's failings. But in this instance the discovery of the letters was immediately followed by voluntary resignation of power on the part of the Maharaja; and taking into consideration this and all the other circumstances of the case, we felt that the time had come when some measure of interference could be no longer deferred. We have therefore determined that the Maharaja's resignation should be accepted, and that we should avail ourselves of the opportunity in order to effect a thorough reorganisation of the Kashmir Government.

The form in which our interference is to be exercised will be seen from the terms of our instructions to Colonel Nisbet. To sum these up in a few words, the administration of the State will be handed over to the Council, consisting of the Maharaja's brother and certain selected officials in the British service. This Council will have full powers, subject to the condition that they will take no important step without consulting the Resident, and that they will act upon the Resident's advice whenever it may be offered. This is the arrangement established in Gwalior, where it is working well. The Maharaja will be excluded from all interference with public affairs, but will retain his rank and dignity as chief of the State, and will receive from the State revenues an adequate but not extravagant allowance for the maintenance of his household and other necessary expenditure.

These arrangements will not be exclusively based upon the Maharaja's edict of resignation, which was an attempt to save his dignity, and secure better terms than he could otherwise expect. This edict contains some inconvenient stipulations, and it would be embarrassing to agree to it as it stands. We prefer to treat it as a confession of incapacity for the rule of the State, and to base our further proceedings upon general grounds.

Your Lordship will observe that our instructions to Colonel Nisbet deprecate any interference at all. But we are now convinced that in the interests of the people of Kashmir, and the ruling family itself, it is no longer right or possible to leave the control of affairs in the hands of the Maharaja; and we trust that Her Majesty's Government will concur in this opinion.

The Times of India, in alluding to the Viceroy's letter to the Maharaja of Kashmir published by us recently, remarks:—

"Apart from its political significance the letter has another interest to us in India, for it explains in the fullest and most satisfactory manner the first act of any real importance that our new Viceroy has yet achieved; and it shows that Lord Lansdowne, like all the truly great men among his predecessors, has the iron-hand as well as the velvet glove.

Mr. Malabari thus alludes in the Indian Spectator to Lord Lansdowne's letter :—

"The document breathes a spirit of magnanimity, at the same time that it displays a firmness and rectitude of purpose from which the writer is not easily to be deviated. As a proof of his goodwill we have only to point to his refusal to accede to the Durbar's sinister or suicidal request for the nomination of Englishmen as members of the Council of Regency. It is not easy for us outsiders fully to appreciate the moral courage of a ruler who has to befriend such a prince as Pratab Singh in spite of himself, and in spite, perhaps, of official advisers whose Indian experience not unoften blunts the sense of disinterested justice. The Viceroy's letter to the Maharaja is calculated to restore confidence amongst the princes of India, and to afford some encouragement to their subjects. All honour to the statesman, who has already been misjudged, for putting the public in possession of the facts and circumstances of the case. We wish it had been possible earlier to announce this policy of benevolent intervention and the causes that rendered it necessary, if only to avert the froth and fury of irresponsible criticism."

The criticism of the Hindu Patriot is singularly unreasonable, if not something much worse :—

"What we deplore is that the Viceroy had to take such a roundabout way to annex Kashmir. Let the paraphernalia of a Resident and a Council be done away with at once, and Kashmir be declared British territory. That would be more straightforward. Instead of that the Viceroy holds out a miserable hope to the unfortunate Prince that, in case of good behaviour, 'a large share in the control of the public affairs of Kashmir' may be granted to him. This is adding insult to injury. According to the first article of the Treaty concluded between the British Government and Maharaja Golab Sing, the grandfather of the present Maharaja, Kashmir was transferred and made over for ever in independent possession to Maharaja Golab Sing, and the heirs male of his body. In consideration of the transfer made to Maharaja Golab Sing, 'and his heirs,' the Maharaja paid to British Government the sum of seventy-five lakhs of rupees. He acknowledged the supremacy of the British Government, and in token of such supremacy presented annually to the British Government one horse, twelve perfect shawl goats of approved breed, and three pairs of Kashmir shawls. The words 'for ever' and 'in independent possession' were used in the Treaty. Did the Maharaja imagine that 'for ever' in diplomatic phraseology meant 43 years only, and that the 'independent possession' by his heirs simply signified that within the space of 43 years Kashmir would be wrested from them, and British supremacy be completely established within it?

THE INDIAN BREWERIES.

Messrs. Meakin and Co., the eminent brewers of Kirkee, Simla, and Kasuli, have replied in a telling and striking way to the recent attacks of the local importers of English beer. In their reply they say nothing whatever about the attacks, and content themselves with reprinting the official opinions of some thirty commanding officers of the English troops in this Presidency. These reports are singularly unanimous as to the quality of the ale and porter. All the opinions are good, but, perhaps, the most valuable of the lot is that by Colonel Burnett, of the East Yorkshire Regiment. He writes :—"I have the greatest pleasure in testifying to the excellent quality of the malt liquor supplied to the 2nd Battalion East Yorkshire Regiment by your firm, whilst I was in command of it last year, for a period of seven months. I visited the canteen almost daily, and tasted the ale and porter frequently, and always found it of the best, and never heard it complained of by the men; on the contrary, the men have always spoken of it with the highest approval. I very much prefer it to the malt liquor which used to be supplied by the Commissariat Department. Your firm have never once failed to consult the interests of the men and the convenience of the Battalion, and I take this opportunity of thanking you for the courteous way in which you always met my wishes." It would be hard to find a better authority on this subject in the whole British army than Colonel Burnett, who, since his return to England, has, it will be remembered, initiated a strong agitation for improving the soldiers' rations at home and abroad. We have also been favoured with a very large number of equally favourable reports from officers commanding European troops in the Bengal Presidency.

TONK.—His Highness the Nawab Firoze Jung Bahadur, C.S.I., Prime Minister of the State, has visited the Central High School at the capital and examined all the classes in English, Arithmetic, Arabic, Persian, Urdu, History and Geography, and was much pleased with the result. He gave an excellent address to the teachers and taught assembled in the Central Hall on the benefits of English education.

CONVERTED TO BUDDHISM.

A remarkable ceremony took place the other day at Colombo. It was no less than the admission of a Christian gentleman from America, who recently arrived in Ceylon, into the Buddhist creed. The proceedings took place in the Theosophist Hall, under the guidance of the Buddhist High Priest, assisted by eleven yellow-robed monks. The convert, who was apparently prepared for the function, knelt before the assembled priests, and intimated his desire to be admitted as a member of the Buddhist Church. The High Priest then catechised him, and the assembled monks having satisfied themselves that the gentleman was fitted to be a follower of their noble teacher, assisted in admitting him as one. The gentleman, whose name was Powell, then begged of the High Priest "to give him the Pansil," which the latter did, the candidate repeating it after him with the palms of his hands brought together uplifted. Having explained to the convert the responsible duties of a Buddhist, the High Priest gave him his blessing. A meeting was afterwards held, at which Mr. Powell explained his reasons for having embraced Buddhism and described the mental process which he had gone through before he had arrived at the conviction of the truth of Buddhism. It appears that nearly forty years ago, when he was a child, he came across a book in his father's library, in which was a picture; it was that of a figure "seated cross-legged on something like a flower." Impressed by the expression of peace and love on that face Mr. Powell got into the habit of going every evening to a room to sit in a position as nearly like it as he possibly could. "On asking who or what picture it was," Mr. Powell says, "I was told that it was the picture of a heathen god, but its memory clung to me, and when I heard its name I never forgot it, but learned later what the symbol was and its meaning." Being, as he says, naturally of a religious turn of mind, and being intended by his father to be a clergyman, Mr. Powell was well educated in the Church of England doctrines. "But," Mr. Powell continues, "I recognised and felt that there must be some law that I could work out myself, and that if I controlled my thoughts my life manifested an obedience to that power, but it was long before I recognised that this was the 'Law of Right Thought.'" After some time spent in cogitation on the vanity of human affairs, and the inexplicability of mundane problems, Mr. Powell appears to have sought a refuge in agnosticism, as many men have before him, but the comfortlessness, and the apparent cowardice of a doctrine that says, "I cannot know, so I will leave the matter alone," seemed to have disgusted him. At last a deus ex machina was found in Sir Edwin Arnold, whose poem "The Light of Asia" aroused in Mr. Powell the desire to take refuge in the Law of Lord Buddha. Karna, which, as we understand it, is the Buddhist conception of the way in which the equality of actions, whether of merit or demerit, determines the future condition of all sentient beings, cleared away his doubts, and showed him what he thought was the true light. At the same meeting a Miss Flynn and a Rev. Mr. Leadbitter (a gentleman well-known to Theosophists in Madras) were also alluded to as recent converts.

ACCORDING to a Secunderabad paper Lieutenant Newmarch, the cantonment magistrate there, had a marvellous escape. One night a continuous hissing sound, close to his bedstead, disturbed him. Partially arousing himself he jumped out of bed to ascertain the cause, when to his utter amazement he saw a huge full-grown cobra. It was of course soon despatched.

THE Englishman says :—"A Parsee who is born in England, and who resides there for eight years, may surely call himself an Anglo-Parsee or an Indo-Anglican, if he so desires. This, it appears, is the ambition of "Mr. H. Borzorjee Cooper," a resident of Bombay, who writes to us in some perplexity of mind as to his status in Eastern society. He claims the rank and rights of a European British subject, and a citizen of London, whatever 'rights' may attach to Cockney citizenship. But his difficulty, if we understand him aright, is with the Bombay Eurasian Association, which he is anxious to join. He can easily ascertain, however, if he is eligible according to the rules."

ALLIANCE BANK OF SIMLA, LIMITED.—The report for the half-year ended 30th June shows a gross profit, including Rs. 9,861, the balance from former account, amounting to Rs. 3,99,093. From this sum a dividend at the rate of twelve per cent. per annum, free of income tax, has been declared amounting to Rs. 30,000. The Reserve Fund has been added to by Rs. 20,000 (raising it to Rs. 3,10,000), and the usual addition to Bad and Doubtful Debt Fund has been made of Rs. 10,000, leaving to be carried forward Rs. 15,528. CASHMERE.

NOTWITHSTANDING the official assurance of the Secretary of State for India given in the House of Commons, and in spite of the official publication of the Viceroy of India's letter to the Maharaja of Cashmere, the Radical Press in England continue to assert that the British Government has deposed the Maharaja and annexed his territory. According to these veracious prints, this is how the matter was brought about :—

"A sort of Pigott plot, implicating him in correspondence with Russia and Dhuleep Singh, was concocted by one of his brothers, and, with the forged documents in his possession, Colonel Nisbet, the Resident, bullied the Prince into resigning. The resignation was, we believe, afterwards withdrawn, but the Maharaja was deposed by order of the Viceroy in Council. Not a word about the misgovernment of his kingdom was ever heard of till after that had been done. Since then Pratap Sing has appealed to the Viceroy, asking to be allowed a three years' trial as an independent ruler, and offering to leave himself in the hands of Government at the end of that period if he fails. If this request is refused, he asks to be shot at once. What chance he has of getting justice in any shape may be judged from Lord Cross's remarks about him, and from the news which came to hand last week that military roads are already being constructed through his country. We are sorry enough for him, but what is to be done? Parliament is denied all chance of discussing Indian affairs, and nobody over here troubles over one more Indian prince cheated and ruined—one more Native State swallowed up. As for Lord Cross, he only feels a sublime rapture at the contemplation of our noble conduct in the business."

Of course, writing of this kind can do little harm in England; but, unfortunately, it finds its way to India, is reproduced by the Native Press, and is put forward as the independent opinion of the English people in contradistinction to the opinion of the English officials, which is always represented as being hostile to the people of India. The newspaper from which we have culled the impudent falsehoods which we have quoted has quite enough intelligence upon its staff to know where the truth about Cashmere misgovernment can be found, but it prefers to make the audacious statement that there has never been any complaint of such misgovernment until now. It is to be regretted that the India Office does not make public a few of the Reports which for years past have reached it upon this subject. We still hope that such a Blue-book may be permitted to appear; but for the benefit of our radical sentimentalists here, we give some extracts from an English radical paper in India—a paper which thoroughly sympathises with the Home Rule tendencies of the wild Irish party and which is supposed to be under native influence in India and therefore entitled to a respectful hearing on questions affecting Native interests, whether of prince or peasant. This paper, which still calls itself the "Friend of India." thus refers to the Native rule in Cashmere :—

"It is untrue to say that Cashmere has been annexed by the Government. As long as we ourselves can remember—and our memory goes back far beyond the years of most of our contemporaries—the misgovernment of Cashmere has been the subject of incessant comment, by every person who has resided there, whether native or European We have not published a tenth part of the private communications that we have received in the last six years, from both native and English gentlemen, as to the character of the Prince, and of his rule. And until we are ourselves convinced that these communications have been false, we shall, and must hold that the Government has acted wisely in superseding his direct administration."

And then the writer puts forward the simple question, Is it true or false that the State of Cashmere has been so miserably misgoverned as to justify the deposition of its Maharaja? This simple question he answers thus :—

"With the same frankness with which we have ever expressed ourselves upon the subject, we are bound to say, without hesitancy, that in view of the tenor of every communication received by us for years past, from European and Native correspondents alike in Cashmere, we are unable to suspect the general accuracy of their statements. Our correspondents have been men of official and non-official rank alike. Many of them have been 'outsiders,' and therefore presumably unbiassed; but they have also been men about the person of the Prince himself, European as well as Native. Up to this time they have uniformly represented the Maharaja himself to be the main cause of the misrule and misery of his subjects. If any of our Native contemporaries have received letters to a contrary effect, they would, we think, act wisely to reproduce them, to show therefrom that the misgovernment of the State has been owing, not to the Prince himself, but to those about him. For ourselves, we can only say that it was not until the Maharaja was superseded that we ever saw a suggestion that he was the able man he is now represented to be. We have suppressed, we say, volumes as to his personal habits and unfitness to rule, not from English, but from Native correspondents, some of whom have expressed surprise and resentment at our not publishing them. It is our full belief that the Viceroy in Council has sought no occasion against the Prince, but has acted under a sense of duty towards his people. No violent writing upon the subject can ever make us forget that, as the Supreme Government permits no rebellion on the part of their subjects against the Native Princes, we are bound by every principle than can bind Supreme rulers, to depose every Native Prince whose misrule brings misery upon his people. We would rather that our right hand were cut off than support any Prince, who, relying upon the British Power to quell rebellion in his State, reduced his subjects to misery by his misrule."

We would be unjust to our Indian contemporary whose opinions we are now putting forward, did we not add that we have read them with sympathy for the writer, whose personality we have little difficulty in recognising. The colleague of the late Major Evans Bell and Colonel R. D. Osborn has always, like them, wielded his pen in favour of what have been called "Native rights" as opposed to "European interests." But although ever and bitterly opposed to certain measures which we consider were measures of wise British policy, and leaning too often to the side of Native prejudices and weaknesses, we are glad in this instance to find Mr. Robert Knight holding such true English ideas concerning Native misrule, and having the courage to tell them so plainly to his Native friends.

MILITARY INTELLIGENCE.

IT has been decided that the ninety days' Burma privilege leave can be taken in instalments, provided the whole period of the leave is completed in the year in which it is granted.

IT has been notified by the military authorities that stores intended for regimental messes and coffee-shops are not Government stores, and should therefore not be exempted from octroi duty.

THE Creighton Court-Martial closed Aug. 23, the defence admitting culpable carelessness but rebutting criminal intent. The fourth, fifth and sixth charge-sheets were withdrawn, and the Court adjourned.

A MILITATY officer in military employ who may be placed in charge of a cantonment magistracy in addition to his own duties is entitled to an acting allowance of Rs. 100 a month as a charge against the Civil Department.

THE details of a scheme for employing wheeled transport in possible operations on the North-West Frontier are now being worked out by the Commissary-General-in-Chief. The calculations first made showing the advantages to be gained by curtailing the use of pack animals have been fully confirmed on closer examination.

THE expense of doing what is considered to be necessary and desirable in the way of improving the position of the rank and file of the Bengal Cavalry is estimated at about eight lakhs per annum. And the Government is now considering whether and how it can find the means for this admittedly much-needed reform.

THE non-commissioned officers and men of the D, E, F and G Batteries, A Brigade R.H.A., entitled to return to England, but desirous of extending their service in this country, will be allowed to volunteer without bounty for the Royal Artillery serving in either of the three Presidencies, but will not be allowed to select any particular battery. The non-commissioned officers remaining under this order will take rank in the battery to which posted according to the date of their promotion.

THE Government of India have sanctioned the MacIver line of steamers being placed, provisionally for one year, on the same footing as steamers of the Peninsular and Oriental and certain other companies, in respect to officers travelling by such steamers being exempted from the penalty attached to overstaying their furlough or leave out of India by reason of any delay in the arrival of the vessel in which they return to India, provided they take their passage in a steamer timed to arrive within the period of their leave.

THE Bengal regiments which have received Martini rifles are :—

Cavalry.—3rd, 4th, 6th, 9th, 11th, 12th, 13th, 14th, 15th, 16th, 18th, and 19th, 1st Punjab, 3rd Punjab, and Guides Cavalry. Total 15.

Sappers and Miners.—Nos. 1 to 6 Companies.

Infantry.—1st, 5th, 8th, 11th, 14th (Sikhs), 15th (Sikhs), 16th, 18th, 20th, 22nd, 23rd (Pioneers), 24th, 25th, 26th, 27th, 28th, 29th, 30th, 39th, 43rd (Gurkha) Light Infantry, ten battalions of Gurkhas, Guides Infantry, 3rd and 4th Sikhs, and 4th Punjab. Total 34.

LIEUT. HOLLAND, 5th Punjab Infantry, has been appointed Aide-de Camp to His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief.

THE Civil and Military Gazette states :—"We believe that the Government of India has recommended to the Secretary of State the abolition of the appointment of paymaster in regiments of British cavalry and infantry in India. We do not know what arrangements are proposed to carry on the duties ordinarily performed by the paymaster ; but if it in any way throws more financial responsibility and work on company officers, we emphatically protest against such a course. These regimental officers are already burdened with a very large amount of account work in connection with their companies—so much so, indeed, that we are almost unable to believe that their more legitimate work, in connection with the drill and military instruction of their men, is not neglected in consequence. Their duties, too, in regard to military training are not likely to become less, but rather they will increase with every change in modern tactics. It should, therefore, be out of the question that they can be saddled with the work of paymasters."

THE DISTRESS IN GANJAM.

MADRAS, AUG. 23.

As the price of rice, the common staple of food of the people of the Ganjam district, is now higher than twelve seers for the rupee, the Local Government have directed that all Government servants on the Civil establishments there whose pay does not exceed Rs.16 per mensem, or, in case of officials required to keep a horse, Rs.25 per mensem, shall temporarily be paid an extra allowance of one rupee monthly, provided the aggregate monthly pay is not less than Rs. 6. The Government has also directed the wages of all labourers employed on the task-work to be paid daily, and in the case of men employed on piece-work the deduction of ten per cent. under the provisions of the Public Works Code dispensed with temporarily.

The Local Government has been requested to give the Government of India the earliest intimation of any probability of food-stocks failing in Ganjam, so that timely measures may be adopted should necessity arise for facilitating the import of grain into the distressed tracts. The official communication further says :—

"The Government of India has no intention of suggesting immediate measures to be taken for the import of grain by the Government, but considers it extremely important that a grain supply, whether from the Central Provinces, Burma, or Bengal, by private traders should not be impeded by any obstacles which official agency can remove. It seems clear that the available food stocks cannot be replenished from local sources until the September dry crops and December rice crops are harvested. The population of the distressed districts of Ganjam and Orissa must therefore rely upon the supply now in the country and imports for the next few months. Information, both from Ganjam and Orissa indicates that the local supply may be insufficient, and sooner or later imports will be largely needed."

The letter adds :—

"The Governor-General in Council takes this opportunity of expressing his high appreciation of the importance and value of the visit of the Governor to the distressed districts, and of the useful results by which it has been followed."

In reply to the Government of India the Madras Government states that there are good grounds for acting at present on the hope that sufficient stocks will be found in the country before the next harvest without having recourse to Government importation. The Collector is requested to give constant attention to the state of the stocks and keep Government informed of indications afforded, by the course of prices or other circumstances, of any failure in the supply in particular localities. The Governor in Council also observes that there are no obstacles impeding private trade in grain which can be removed by official agency.

In its order of the 7th instant the Local Government remarks :—

"The Governor in Council is glad to learn that the prospects of the next harvest in Ganjam are favourable throughout the district. It is satisfactory also to note that through the exertions of the district officers the administration of relief is being brought more under control. The Government concurs in Mr. Horne's opinion that it is not advisable to open a large work such as a road, because sufficient people will not go to it, and the small tank works now in progress will suffice."

Extra establishments costing about Rs. 4,600 monthly, applied for by the Ganjam Collector owing to the increase of work occasioned by the famine, have been sanctioned.

A DREAM OF FAIR POPPIES.

PART I.

"I had a dream that was not all a dream," and in my dream I walked among the poppy fields. A shadowy form with careworn face and deep calm eyes walked by my side, and on her other hand there was a man who looked like other men, but for a strong white light that shone around him as he moved, and in the light the letters M. P. glistened and danced. The bright light and the letters puzzled me, but in the calm eyes of the shadowy form I read the meaning: this was the light that beats upon a member of the House, and this was Samuel Small, M.P.

"Come," said the shadowy form, "and let us walk together in the poppy fields." And we went: on each side stretched great fields of fair white flowers like freshly fallen cherry blossoms or light snow. And women moved among the plants —poor meagre-looking women—gathering the petals of the flowers with careful hands, and laying them in baskets ; dull eyed and coarse and old before their time from rough work and scant food, yet their tongues wagged merrily enough, for they were telling of the fineness of the flowers and the rich crop in store.

"See," they cried joyfully, "how big the capsules are and the leaves large and good. We shall be well paid, and can eat our fill and buy new clothes."

And as we watched men joined them, some with small instruments like blades of knives set side by side and bound together, and some with iron scoops ; and with the knives they lanced the newly ripened bulbs, and with the scoops they gathered up the juice that had exuded from the already lacerated bulbs. The yield was good, and they were well content. No doubt about the payment for their crops disturbed their minds. The Sirkar bought it all, the price was sure ; a portion had already been advanced to buy the seed, to pay the rent and help them to make wells to irrigate the thirsty land. The crop would pay the debt and leave them a fair profit to buy food. Then other crops would grow upon their land until the poppy season came again. The ryot was well pleased, and all was well.

Alas ! poor ryot ! Small, M.P., had marked him for his prey.

"My good man," he explained in tones of mild reproach, "you're doing very wrong. John Chinaman—nay millions of John Chinamen are being ruined by this drug you grow. It is not right the great Indian Empire should grow rich upon the vice of others. Cease to grow opium, and John Chinaman will cease to smoke it. Listen to me."

The ryots listened, but they comprehended not : the women listened, and they whispered that this Sahib was going to give them more than the Sirkar. The khatadars drew near, scenting some trouble in the air, and warned the ryots that the opium belonged to the Sirkar and could not be resold to anyone ; but next year if the Sahib could manage it they would not mind trying to sell him some, only the Sirkar would object.

"Let them object," cried Small, M.P. "But I don't want your opium. Abomination ! Root it up, and grow good wholesome wheat instead :" and he grew eloquent and preached the sin of growing poppies, and bade them sweep the crop from off the earth and spill the opium on the ground. They thought him mad, and verily they had some reason, for he asked of them that they should sacrifice their daily food for reasons that they comprehended not.

"Your talk is foolishness," I said. "You want to starve these men—for why ? That Chinamen may grow more opium for themselves ?"

That Chinamen may be rescued from the moral degradation caused by smoking opium," he replied with dignity. And the light shone round him strong and white and the big letters danced above his head, while from afar a faint. "Hear, hear," was heard.

The shadowy form smiled slowly. "Why should India bear the blame of Chinese degradation—if it exists ?" she asked. "Is it a crime for India to grow opium for China, and not for China to grow it for herself ? Do you not know that if the trade was stopped China would grow the more ?"

"Not so," he answered hotly. "China tries to stop the evil, but India forces it upon her." In China to grow opium s punishable with death; but India supplies what Chinamen may not grow for themselves.

"I am Experience," said the shadowy form; "look in my eyes and learn the truth, for what you say is false."

But the M.P. would not.

"Acres upon acres of fair poppy fields are in full bloom in China," I modestly remarked. "Is the Chinese Government blind that they see not? Millions of pounds of opium are manufactured there. Does every cultivator die, each manufacturer forfeit his life? Oh! Small, M.P., solve me this riddle. If the penalty for growing it is death, how comes it more is grown there than here?"

But Small, M.P., glared at me silently. Then with a sudden burst of rage he struck the poppies down.

"Perish the Indian revenue," he cried, "rather than we who bear the name of Englishmen should foster this unholy trade. Forward, my men; strike and destroy."

And in my dream I saw a motley crowd rush through the poppy-fields. The fierce white light which beats upon a member of the House shone here and there and marked the M.P.'s track. Men in black coats and wide-awakes and maidens young and old, who said they came to teach the Gospel to the heathen, tore up the plants and trod upon the poor pale flowers, and laughed with joy. The poppy crop was gone! And then arose a cry, a long wild cry of sadness and despair. And women tossed their arms and wept, and men glowered fiercely round.

"Where shall we get our food?" they cried. "Are we to die? You've spoilt our opium crop. What will you give us in return?"

"You need not fear," said the M.P. "You must grow other crops; good wheat and rice."

"We always do," replied the angry men, "in proper season; but now you've ruined us, and where are we to look for help?"

"To the paternal Government that always takes such care of you in times of scarcity and famine."

I heard a laugh—a low untuneful laugh—of mild derision and surprise, and turning round beheld a row of empty coffers, and a Financial Secretary groping about with eager hands hoping to find some money, and there was none.

"You drain our coffers," he said, scornfully, "and cry 'give.' From where shall we draw revenue to satisfy these people? It makes me laugh to see how fools rush in where wise men fear to tread. You meddle with our revenue, and make the ends gape wide apart, and then leave us to make them meet again. Have we not struggled with these ends for many years, and had recourse to many curious plans—trying to bridge the gap with cheeseparings and savings wrung from each impoverished department."

"England will bridge the gap. England will make the two ends meet, and help you at the pinch—I can assure, Sir," and here Small, M.P., paused, for on the breeze was borne a sound of groans and many "Noes." And still the women cried, for all the crop was spoiled, and Small, M.P., moved on. But women fell upon the ground and clasped his feet in bitter supplication, and men crawled up to him and laid their foreheads in the dust, and he was shocked and sought to flee, but could not.

"Get up! Get up!" he cried. "This really should not be allowed: it is the fault of the administration. Why, these poor towns are sunk in moral degradation."

"Almost as bad as the Chinese," Experience suggested gravely; 'but come, there's more for you to see."

She led us through the land, and everywhere the poppy-fields had been destroyed and men were sitting idle. And Small, M.P., tried to persuade the people that they had sinned in growing opium, and that soon they would recover from their loss and prosper better than before; but no one understood him.

"The opium paid our rent and brought us money to buy food," they said. "The Sirkar advanced us money to buy our seed and to make wells."

"Eight hundred and seventy-nine wells were made in this one district of Behar alone last year," remarked Experience.

Where shall we get the money to buy food for all our families? How shall we pay back our advances," said the cultivators.

"There cannot be so many to be fed but that a little help from Government will tide you over till your harvest time," replied Small. "As for advances, they of course must be remitted."

The Financial Secretary groaned. "How many ryots would you have us feed from empty coffers? Last year 1,462,810 cultivators were employed in growing opium, 536,607 acres of land were under cultivation, and the actual expenditure of the whole Department was Rs. 27,119,370 without including——"

"I think," said Small, "that I had better make a note of that; it means a lot of opium——"

"It means a lot of money lost to Indian cultivators."

"Who will make good our loss?" shouted the men. "Why should we not grow opium if we choose? Why does the great Sirkar allow this Sahib to come and ruin us?"

Then Samuel Small grew pale, for ruined men are dangerous sometimes.

"They do not understand," he said. "Poor souls! I'm sorry for them; but still we must do right. Will they attack us?"

"No," said Experience, calmly; "you need not fear. You do not understand the Indian ryot."

"I think we'll go in here," said Small, and slipped inside a hut.

Women were seated round a little fire with baskets full of soft white petals of the poppy-flowers beside them. On heated iron plates they placed the petals carefully, and pressed them with a cloth wetted with water, and the moisture made the leaves adhere, forming thin cakes. And the M.P. asked what they were, and why they made them.

"They use them in the factory for wrapping round the opium," said an old man peevishly. "Our women take the profit for themselves; it is their share. Make haste, make haste; the factory will close; there is no opium to make, only what we have saved before our crop was spoiled. The Sirkar says because the men who buy the opium are fools we must be starved. Work! work! We shall go hungry many a day for this."

"No," said a young man scornfully, "we will not starve. Opium will always fetch its price; we'll grow it still, and sell to those who'll buy."

"No one will treat us fairly like the good Sirkar," sighed the old man. "And we are told we must not grow it any more. Wah! Wah!"

"Wah! Wah! Oh Bap-re-bap!" cried all the women clamorously. The young man gave a long sly look from out of his half-closed eyes. "As the Sirkar orders," said he humbly. And I saw visions of much smuggling in the land.

"What's in those pots?" asked Small.

"Opium," I replied. "The man is clearing off the pussewa from it, that thick, dark fluid; it spoils the opium, and so it is drained off and sold in separate jars."

"Abomination!" muttered Small. "What's that child doing here? She ought to be at school. Are there no School Boards in this sinful land that girls may learn to read and sew instead of pressing poppy leaves? Really the Government is much to blame, and I must see to this."

"Finish the poppy question first," Experience suggested. "That child would have to take another child to school with her—that is her baby lying in the sun."

"Oh! what a land!" he cried, "where women kiss one's feet, and old men crawl along the ground and lay their foreheads in the dust, and little girls who ought to be at school are mothers."

"We did not make the country or the people," I replied. "Their ways are not our ways, but by degrees we hope to teach them all things."

He snorted scornfully. "You've taught them to make opium—that's all, in all these generations."

"Come," said Experience, "there are many things to see, and these are foolish words—bubble and froth. When you have seen what I have seen, then may you judge of what's been done, and what remains to do. Come with these men."

We went and plodded on through the hot land until we reached the place where all the opium was weighed from all the villages around. And the men came in lots, each lot with one headman or khatadar. Their opium was tested, weighed, and paid for with the greatest care. And Small, M.P., watched how the khatadar took all the money and divided it amongst his men. Each man received his share, whether his crop had failed or not, because they so arrange, just like a company.

"Just like a company that's limited, I see," exclaimed our M.P. joyfully. "This is a most encouraging discovery; the only truly hopeful sign of progress that I've seen."

We smiled—the custom was so very old—and passed on to the factory, and on our way we passed the places where the earthen pots were made; and all the men and women cried and tried to kiss our feet, and pointed to the piles of earthen jars and little cups that they had made to sell to the Sirkar.

"And who will buy them now?" they cried. "The Sirkar wants no more."

"Oh! what a helpless lot you are," cried Small. "Why don't you take them to another market if you can't sell them here. Look here now! I will buy a ship-load and send home as curiosities."

Then all the people swarmed around him with their jars and pots and cups, and each talked fast, and each abused the others. He made his bargain with them carefully, and found that after all his care they'd cheated him right well and left him, when his money was all gone, with thousands upon thousands of cracked earthen jars and a most direful headache for his pains.

DR. SPENCER'S ASTHMA CURE.

MR. D. FITZPATRICK, of Drumcree, Killucan, Westmeath, Ireland, writes :—"Thank God the two bottles of Dr. Spencer's Asthma Cure got from you cured me of the Asthma. I am over sixty years of age, and for the last twenty-five years I have suffered as much from Asthma (I believe) as any other Asthmatic could suffer, often for nights without ever lying on a bed, but I thank the good God I can now sleep as comfortable as I could wish for. I only wish every poor Asthmatic sufferer would give your cure a trial, for it is a great boon."

The public are hereby notified that the above remedy is prepared from a recently improved formu'a of Dr. Spencer (which has nothing to do with any other formula) and is sold, under his name, by us, who are the sole prorietors, and in no way connected with any other person or firm. We will send our Pamphlet "Asthma, its Treatment and Cure" (Third edition) by E. Edwin Spencer, M.A., M.D., &c., post free, on application

COORG SAUCE.

The Universal Appetiser,

PRICE ONE SHILLING.

This delicious Sauce is prepared from the receipt of a Nobleman, whose perfect knowledge of the culinary art has obtained for him the nom de plume of the "Modern Lucullus."

The name of this celebrated Sauce—

THE UNIVERSAL APPETISER.

Has been given to it because, in addition to its remarkable flavouring qualities, it possesses the singular property of

CREATING OR RESTORING THE APPETITE,

In fact, it practically realises the French saying—"L'appétit vient en mangeant."

Since the introduction of THE UNIVERSAL APPETISER it has been said, both in Society and at the Clubs, how rarely is the mauvais quart d'heure noticed, every one being so much interested in discussing and enquiring about the new Sauce—

THE UNIVERSAL APPETISER.

EVERY SATURDAY. PRICE SIXPENCE.

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" has acquired a reputation for early and exclusive intelligence as to Appointments and other service News, for the high character of its articles, the independent course of its staff of writers, and for its earnest support of all measures for the good of the Services. Articles on specially interesting subjects appear from week to week written for the most part by officers of rank and experience, or by men of note in literature who have made the Naval and Military affairs of the country their special study. A series of Illustrated Articles is appearing weekly on Regimental Badges and History. Illustrations with descriptions are also given of new Service Inventions.

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" freely opens its correspondence columns to all grades in the Services. By this means an opportunity for interchange of opinion is afforded, such as is offered by no other Service Journal. Its ordinary weekly issue contains fully one-fourth more matter than the other Service Journals, even with their frequent "supplements."

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" circulates largely throughout India and the Colonies. It is supplied direct to the Army and Marine bureaux of the French, Russian, and other Governments, and it is read extensively by Officers of Foreign Services, especially of the German, French, and American Armies, who desire to acquire a true impression of facts and public opinion in England regarding Military affairs.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 20, 1889.

[BY OVERLAND MAIL.]

THE Overland Mail brings us letters and advices from Bombay to the 3rd Sept.; from Allahabad and Madras to the 1st Sept.; and from Calcutta to the 1st Sept.

AT the meeting of the Legislative Council on Aug. 28th the Hon. Mr. Scoble introduced the Bill providing for the division—upon the occurrence of a vacancy in the office of Administrator-General of Bengal—of the present unwieldy Presidency of Bengal, as defined in the Administrator-General's Act, 1874, into provinces, having Calcutta, Allahabad, Lahore, and Rangoon as their respective centres. Another object which has been approved by the Chief Justices of the Calcutta, Madras, and Bombay High Courts is to enable the Government as occasion occurs to combine the office of Official Trustee with that of Administrator-General at Calcutta, Madras, and Bombay. In the meanwhile Section 7 provides for the administration of estates in Upper Burma and British Biluchistan by an Administrator-General.

THE questian of the taxation of Indian beer is still under the consideration of the Government of India. Country beer is already taxed in Madras.

BOMBAY is likely to receive the full support of the Government of India in protesting against the proposed change of the outward mail day. The question is now under consideration at Simla.

THE report of Mr. Godley's committee on the home charges, which has reached India, contains no practical suggestions, but of course proposes further cutting down of the furlough pay and allowances generally of Indian officers when in England.

NO communication has yet reached India as to the result of the meeting on the subject of the prevention of leprosy over which the Prince of Wales presided some weeks ago.

A COMMISSION will meet on the Salween frontier about the beginning of December to investigate and decide, if possible, the several territorial questions now pending between England and Siam. These include the Siamese claim to suzerainty in Eastern Karenni and over certain small trans-Salween States to the north which are are also claimed as appanages of our Shan States. The Commission will further inquire into all boundary disputes between Siam and the State of Kiangtung, and into all claims for compensation which have arisen in consequence of the action of Siam in the timber forests of Karenni and elsewhere. Mr. Ney Elias will be the head of the Commission, accompanied by Mr. Scott, Superintendent, Shan States; Major Barrow, at present in the Military Department, as intelligence officer; Captain Pink, transport; Dr. Gimlette, Mr. Ogle of the Survey, with two subordinates, and Mr. Archer, Vice Consul of Zimme.

THE programme of H.R.H. Prince Albert Edward's tour, as now arranged, is as follows: The Prince visits Hydera, bad, Travancore, Mysore and Bangalore, sailing from Madras to Calcutta, where he will spend Christmas. He will then journey northwards, visiting Benares, Cawnpore and Agra, and arriving at the cavalry camp at Lala Musa about the third week in January, where his Royal Highness will be the guest of the Commander-in-Chief. After a few weeks' stay to witness the final manœuvres, the Prince will probably proceed to Pindi and Peshawur, returning to Lahore and remaining there a short time. After visiting some of the Rajputana States he will travel viâ Baroda to Bombay, where he will embark for England about the middle of March.

AS at present arranged the Viceroy and party will leave Simla on October 22nd, journeying by way of Lahore and Kushalgarh to Kohat, and thence to Peshawur and the Khyber.

THE autumn movements of the Lieutenant-Governor of the Punjab are not yet settled, but Sir James Lyall will be at Lahore to receive the Viceroy in November and Prince Albert Victor in January.

SIR H. M. DURAND accompanies the Viceroy on his frontier tour, afterwards leaving for England at the end of November.

SIR HARRY PRENDERGAST has been indisposed, but he is now convalescent, and, accompanied by Lady and the Misses Prendergast, left Quetta for change of air at Peshin on the 23rd ult.

GENERAL GRAHAM, on return from Sikkim, reverts temporarily to the command of the artillery at Jutogh, proceeding shortly on three months' leave to England.

AN unfortunate accident occurred to Captain Durand's party on its journey from Gilgit to Hunza and Nagar. While the Kashmiri escort were crossing the Hunza river the bridge broke, and four men, including the commandant of the escort, were drowned. The party were expected to reach Nagar on the 24th inst.; thence they will cross to Hunza.

THE Amir will return to Kabul in the autumn. His son Habibulla will consequently not proceed to Mazar as first ordered.

IT is probable that the Madras Government will shortly agree to the Assam Emigration Act being extended to Ganjam and Vizagapatam; meanwhile during the cold weather a close watch into the working of the Act will be observed. Next hot weather it will be decided whether further legislation is needed. It is hoped with careful police supervision this is unnecessary.

IT is definitely settled that the Viceroy with his suite will leave Simla on October 22, and proceed via Kohat to Peshawur.

HER Excellency Lady Lansdowne will probably pay short visits to the local hospitals and centres connected with the Countess of Dufferin Fund operations on the way down to Calcutta in the autumn.

A MOVEMENT is on foot in Kattywar to invite Prince Albert Victor to visit that province during his tour in India.

THE Gaekwar of Baroda has joined the other Chiefs in offers to aid in the defence of the North-West Frontier. Probably one cavalry regiment will be accepted as a contribution from the State.

AFTER a lapse of nearly two years the Government of Bombay has published a resolution on the report of the Forest Commission.

STEPS are now being taken at Simla to raise a Crookshank memorial. A portrait of the deceased officer will be placed in the United Service Institution.

THE Public Works member will make an extensive tour in November and December, going over the railway lines in the Southern Presidency.

THE autumn movements of the Lieutenant-Governor of the Punjab are not yet settled, but Sir James Lyall will be at Lahore to receive the Viceroy in November and Prince Albert Victor in January.

A POONA vernacular paper says that Mr. K. B. Pendse, who was Assistant to Mr. A. T. Crawford, is to be appointed Assistant Secretary to Government in place of Mr. Kohiyar.

A NEW bar of a serious character has, since the burst of the monsoon, formed outside the old harbour bar at Kurrachee.

NOTES.

THERE is little news of interest from India by the present overland mail. The Mamlutdars Indemnity Bill, about which the British public knows nothing and cares less, was the chief matter agitating public opinion in India when the mail of September 3rd left. In Bombay and here the official action has been the production of what in vulgar parlance is known as "a nice kettle of fish."

ACCORDING to the Bombay Press, "it is a subject of great concern that Lord Cross has not seen the moral obligation resting on the State to uphold in its entirety the indemnity given to those who made full disclosure. The only explanation of the manifest contradiction between his lordship's approval of the determination of the Government of Bombay to suppress bribery and corruption, with his "regret" that the one step necessary to effect that purpose was taken, is to be found in the diffidence which prevents a Secretary of State from asking the House of Commons to consider a Bill of Indemnity and run the gauntlet of the Baumanns and the Camerons and other intelligent critics.

A TELEGRAM from Simla dated Sept. 19 states that the Mamlutdars' Indemnity Act was introduced in the Council that day, and the particulars of the Bill and the gist of the Viceroy's speech will be found in another column. But the evil done still lives.

FROM Simla the only other important intelligence is that "the great event of the current week will be the opening of the Fine Arts Exhibition by the Viceroy;" but we read that, "by way of a change, a Rugby Union game was played between teams representing the Army and the World. Most of the players were ignorant of the rules, and reminiscences of the Association game gave rise to cases of illegal charging, off-side, &c But among those with previous experience there were some who were in excellent form, the Army being especially strong behind the scrimmage, and the World having several energetic forwards. The result was in favour of the World by three ties to two, the Army having very bad luck."

THE Bombay Chamber of Commerce has refused to join in the appeal to Government for the postponement of the operation of the clause in the new Merchandise Marks Act which renders it necessary to stamp the length of all piece goods imported after the 1st August, having ascertained from the Government that no concession could possibly be made in respect of the stamping. The Chamber has telegraphed to Manchester in time to prevent shipments of goods not complying with the stipulation, and has stated that the merchants here have no trouble, and see no cause for joining in an appeal for the postponement of the operation of the Act.

GOVERNMENT has issued an order to all departments in the Bombay Presidency directing that in future no head of an office who has not been specially authorised to do so should communicate officially on official matters direct with Government officers in the United Kingdom or the Colonies. Should any head of an office not so authorised desire to communicate with any Government officer in the United Kingdom or the Colonies he is to address Government in the Department in which he is employed, stating the information he requires to communicate or to obtain.

IN the Calcutta High Court on Aug. 29 Mr. Justice Norris delivered what is probably the shortest summing up made by an Indian judge. A local paper says:—It was a case in which two Native prisoners were accused of robbing the complainant on the maidan by what is known as the "bead trick." On the case for the prosecution being closed, the accused said they had nothing to say, and his lordship, in delivering the charge, said: "Gentlemen of the jury, the prisoners have nothing to say, and I have nothing to say; what have you got to say?" And the jury said they were guilty.

THE Government of India not being above taking suggestions as to additional methods of raising the wind, although it unaccountably refuses to accept the hinted tax on railway tickets, the Pioneer ventures to ask why patent medicines are allowed to be sold in India without any benefit to the Government revenues? Most of the nostrums are of American manufacture, and being imported direct escape the stamp duty which medicines made in England, like chlorodyne, have to pay, and there would not, therefore, be any howl from Manchester or Birmingham if a stamp duty were levied on these also. Nor would the American manufacture suffer in the long run, for just think of the value of the following advertisement to the proprietors of any so-called quack medicine:—

"SIR,—Having suffered for several years from a chronic deficit in the Budget, and having tried kerosine oil, salt and other remedies, I was at last persuaded by a friend to try St. Stephen's Safe Syrup, with the result that I can now show a surplus of Rs. X. You are at liberty to make any use of this communication.—Yours, &c.

Simla, May 1, 1890. D. B.—RB—R."

Our contemporary feels sure that some satisfactory arrangement might be come to between the Government and the patent medicine manufacturers.

A NATIVE newspaper, entitled the Saturday Herald, has made its appearance in Calcutta. In its introductory remarks the new-comer says:—"We feel that we have a higher mission to fulfil than to abuse the European and glorify the Indian. In a word, the most objectionable features of the majority of the Native papers will be found conspicuous by their absence in our columns."

ENTERIC FEVER is still prevalent in the extreme north of India, and the deaths therefrom of Lieutenant Slaughter, R.E., at Shalebagh, and Captain Gavin, of the 6th Bombay Cavalry, at Quetta, are reported; Mr. Walters, of the 22nd Bombay Infantry, was dangerously ill with the fever at Quetta on Aug. 15.

IN a letter to the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal, Bala Ram Singh, of Barra Bazar, calls attention to the condition of affairs in Tipperah. The Maharaja, he says, is surrounded and guarded in such a way that nobody can approach him, and advantage is taken of his simplicity to loot the State. If Bala Ram Singh is right in his facts Government will doubtless intervene and set things rights.

THD proverbial good luck of Abdur Rahman has again been apparent in the matter of the Badakshan rebellion. It is now quite certain that the Mirs who tried to gain possession of their old inheritance, have had to seek safely in flight, and Afghan authority is once more generally acknowledged. The rebels were tempted to raise the rebellion by the fact that Badakshan had been left without a regular garrison since Ishak Khan's defeat last autumn, a few posts only being held by Afghan troops. The number of the latter was very small, parties of twenty or thirty men only being stationed in some of the towns. The Mirs had no difficulty in dealing with these; but when they appealed to the Badakshis generally to join them no response was made. The people declined to rise in a body, on the ground that the Afghans were sure to beat them in open fight and that the Amir of Kabul had great resources at his command. They were well acquainted with Abdur Rahman's proceedings at Mazar-i-Sharif, where hundreds of Ishak Khan's followers had been executed, and they feared that a similar bloody assize might be held at Fyzabad, the capital of Badakshan. The prompt action of the Amir in sending troops into the Province confirmed them in their view of the situation, and the rebellion collapsed forthwith.

LATEST INTELLIGENCE.

(Times Correspondents.)

INDIA.

CALCUTTA, SEPT. 15.

The religious animosities of the Hindoo and Mahomedan communities, which are kept in suspense merely by the paramount authority of the British administration, developed into rather serious riots in connection with the recent Mohurrum celebrations at Rohtak. A strong body of armed Hindoos assembled near the Mahomedan burial-ground and intercepted the Mohurrum procession. The European Police Superintendent ordered the police to fire a volley with blank cartridge; but this proving ineffectual directed them to fire with buckshot. One rioter attacked him, but was cut down by an orderly. The rioters then temporarily dispersed, but began free fighting throughout the civil station. The authorities telegraphed to other stations for reinforcements, and ultimately reduced the rioters of both sections to submission. The religious excitement has spread to Delhi, and troops have been warned for immediate action should riots break out. Most of the shops are closed. Disturbances took place also at Shahdara and Umritsur, where 20 ring-leaders were arrested, mostly Hindoos. As the Mohurrum celebration has now closed, it is hoped that the religious factions will quiet down.

General orders have been issued regarding the formation of a Chin-Lushai field force. It consists of two divisions, one operating from Burma, and sub-divided into two columns. No. 1, moving from Fort White as its base against the Sirjens, will reduce the tribes between its base and the Manipur river. No. 2, starting from Gungaw, will advance on Haka. A Chittagong force will meet the latter at Haka about December 18, and form a flying column to proceed against the Jashans. The following is the constitution of the force:—

Chin column, General Symons commanding, with supreme political control. Troops:—Two guns of a mountain battery, one company of sappers, 1st Battalion Cheshire Regiment, 1st Battalion King's Own Scottish Borderers, 42nd and 43rd Goorkhas, 10th, 33rd, and 38th Bengal Native Infantry, and certain Madras Infantry.

Lushai column, Colonel Tregear commanding Troops:—3rd Bengal Native Infantry, 2nd Battalion 2nd Goorkhas, 28th Bombay Pioneers, and one company of sappers. Two months' supplies will be taken, but no tents.

The general objects are to punitively visit certain tribes which have raided and committed depredations on British territory; to subjugate those frontier tribes as yet neutral, but which now by force of circumstances have been brought within the sphere of British dominion; to explore and open out as much as time allows the only, as yet, partly known country lying between Burma and Chittagong; and lastly, if necessity arises, to establish semi-permanent posts in the reigons visited, so as to insure a complete pacification and recognition of British power.

The Chief Commissioner in Assam has been empowered, if necessary, to detain the 6th Bengal Infantry at Cachar on the arrival of the 40th Bengal Native Infantry in relief, as a protective measure against a Lushai attack on the frontier.

A rather serious fight took place recently at Lucknow between men of a lancer regiment and of the Horse Artillery. Several men were severely wounded and one has since died. The matter is being investigated by the military authorities.

A scheme has been sent home for sanction for the military defence of the North-Western Railway. It is proposed to form a military corps to work the railway, consisting partly of British and partly of Native troops.

Government have sanctioned the survey of an east coast railway aligned parallel with the coast and connected with the Bengal-Nagpur system, the south-eastern districts of the central provinces being linked direct with the sea at Coconada or some other port between Cuttack and Madras. This will prove an effectual means of securing Ganjam against future famines. The scheme is of infinitely more practical urgency than the somewhat fanciful and unremunerative scheme for a Chittagong-Assam line.

Proposals have been sent in to Government for a system of narrow-gauge railways from Cawnpore and Lucknow to Rae Bareili, thence by Jaunpore to Ghazipore, with intermediate branches and extension to a station opposite Buxar.

The despatch of the English mail on Sundays is causing great public dissatisfaction. At Bombay, at a preliminary meeting summoned by the Chief Justice, the Bishop, and the President of the Chamber of Commerce on Wednesday, representative of all races, creeds and communities, and of every section were present. Indignation was expressed that Indian interests should be regardlessly sacrificed by Saturday and Sunday both being converted into full working days. This would prove a serious blow to the Volunteer movement, as drill would be an impossibility. The meeting approved the suggestion of the Government of India to the Secretary of State that the mail should close all the year round on Saturday at two o'clock. A public meeting has been convened by the Sheriff for Wednesday.

The latest telegraphic report from Ganjam states that the number of persons employed on large works is 9,527, and on small 3,644. Gratuitous relief has been given during the week to 56,435 persons, consisting of 7,463 men, 13,213 women, and 35,759 children. There have been 86 deaths from cholera. The prospects are more hopeful, but the area of Government land brought under cultivation up to the end of July is far below the average for the same period of 1887. Fourteen thousand tons of seed grain were procured from the Godavery district in June, whilst in addition the Court of Wards sanctioned advances of Rs. 60,000 to the Rayats for the purchase of seed grain.

As an illustration of the difficulty of dealing with the famine-stricken people, the collector reports that he was compelled to have recourse to force to make the Bowris, Dundasis, Haddis, and other pariahs in Ganjam attended the relief kitchens, although they were sufferlng from extreme hunger. However, they now attend voluntarily, and express complete satisfaction with the cooking arrangements.

An interesting report has been published on the recent tour of Sir John Edgar in the distressed districts of Orissa. No great distress exists among the pure Hindoo cases in the districts of Cuttack and Pooree, save in one small corner. Among the aboriginal and semi-Hindooised tribes there is a certain amount of distress. In Angul, however, all classes require aid. In some estates administered by tributary chiefs there is cause for anxiety. In Paspalla Sir J. Edgar was compelled practically to depose the Rajah and administer his estate with the aid of his Minister. Three other chiefs failed at the first to realise their responsibilities, but are now doing better. Rs. 76,000 have been advanced to them. In Athmullick the Rajah, though poor, made admirable arrangements. In all the other States energetic efforts have been made to deal with the distress. The landless pariahs of Orissa number about 1,250,000, and suffer from appalling destitution. It is most important, the report says, that the Government should endeavour to remedy their condition by providing a certain portion of them with land for plough cultivation. Sir J. Edgar strongly urges that the people should be dealt with liberally in reference to the reserve forests, and proposes that the Panchpara Pooree Railway should be at once constructed, as the best practical security against famine in the central and southern districts of the province. He trusts that the Government will be able to reward the Rajah of Athmullick.

The Moorshedabad floods are diminishing. The crops are greatly injured, and the villagers have been forced to swim to the nearest markets for food. The cattle are suffering from want of pasturage. The Lieut.-Governor lately visited the district.

Lord Reay goes to Simla on the 23rd, and stays till the 1st of October.

Lord Connemara, who is now on a tour, leaves Madras for Calcutta on the 21st on a visit to the Lieut.-Governor at Darjeeling. Thence he goes to Simla, and remains as Lord Lansdowne's guest till the 6th of October.

The Native Ladies' Association of Deccan entertained the Duchess of Connaught on the 10th inst.

A case illustrating the evils of child marriage is reported from Bombay. In this instance the husband of the victim, as in Rukhmabai's case, is resolute in his refusal to acknowledge the obligation of infant marriage, and declines to receive his wife, with the result that he has been ruined by legal costs.

The Bombay High Court have reversed certain of the convictions in the recent Ahmedabad survey bribery cases. Mr. Justice Jardine, in the course of his judgment, referred to the misconception of the existing law by the magistrate, who quoted the minute of Sir Raymond West, adopted by the Bombay Government in the Crawford case, as justifying the corrupt magistrates in giving bribes on the plea of moral necessity. Mr. Justice Jardine, in a very learned and exhaustive argument, exposed the fallacy of this dangerous doctrine, and judiciously explained in a review of leading cases the accepted principles on the subject, as established by English constitutional lawyers and crystallised by authoritative decisions both of English and Indian Courts.

The next Gazette will probably contain the Indemnity Bill.

The Tripati temple excavations are still proceeding under police protection. Local Native feeling is greatly excited, and apparently views the proceeding as sacrilegious.

The Bengal Club will entertain Prince Albert Victor at a ball during his visit to Calcutta.

BURMA.

RANGOON, SEPT. 15TH.

The Local Government have suspended until October 31, 1889, the provision in the Indian Merchandise Marks Act, requiring all piece goods imported to have stamped on them the number of yards contained in the piece.

The following troops will constitute the force for operations from Burma against the Chins:—1st Battalions Cheshire Regiment and King's Own Scottish Borderers, 42nd and 43rd Goorkhas, 10th, 33rd, and 38th Bengal Infantry, one Bengal Mountain Battery, and a company of Sappers. Brigadier Symons, who commands, will have full political as well as military control. The Myintha river has been ascertained to be navigable for boats, and stores for the expedition will be conveyed by water as far as Kalemyo. This will save much expense and labour. A large body of Punjabee coolies for the Chin expedition arrived in Rangoon to-day.

The rainfall in the Lower Province during the week has been heavier, and crop prospects have improved. In some districts, however, of Lower Burma, such as Thayetmyo and Thongwa, the crops have suffered severely from want of rain. It is officially announced that in Upper Burma rain is much wanted in the Shwebo, Saging, Lower Chindwin, Pokoko, Meiktcila, and Yamethin districts. Elsewhere in Upper Burma crop prospects are reported fair.

The dacoits who recently assembled near Allanmyo have been dispersed with loss by the military police commanded by Superintendent Rae. The dacoits in Yeu have also been severely handled by the police.

Mr. MacDonnell, the officiating Chief Commissioner, will proceed to Upper Burma about October 15th. It is understood that he will visit and fully inspect the Magwe district. It has been for some time past the most disturbed in Upper Burma, and the consolidation of villages has been there very stringently and harshly carried out.

The questions which will probably immediately engage Mr. MacDonnell's attention are the improvement of the administration of justice in Upper Burma, the reorganisation of the Courts there, and the appointment of a Judicial Commissioner as an Appellate Court for the Upper Province. If these much needed reforms are carried out they will undoubtedly have a beneficial effect on the condition of the province.

ENGLAND AND SIAM.

CALCUTTA, SEPT. 15.

The Siamese Mission will decide the conflicting claims of England and Siam in the Trans-Salwein States, survey the country, lay down boundaries, settle claims for compensation brought by Siamese or English subjects, and account for losses caused by either Government, as, for instance, in the case of the Siamese in Eastern Karenni interfering with the timber trade.

THE CRAWFORD CASE.

SIMLA, SEPT. 19.

The Mamlutdar's Indemnity Act was introduced in the Council to-day. It provides that those who paid bribes under pressure in order to obtain appointments and promotion shall be retained in the public service, but that those who spontaneously offered bribes shall be dismissed with compensation. Eight Mamlutdars have already been dismissed, and other cases are under consideration.

The Marquis of Lansdowne, in an exhaustive speech upon the measure, said that the Indian Government regarded the engagement entered into with the Mamlutdars who gave evidence before the Crawford Commission as not in principle abhorrent, and declared that the Bombay Executive was not to blame for promising indemnity to them. The Viceroy concurred in the view that a large number of the accused were incriminated rather as victims of extortion than as willing parties to it. The Indemnity Act promised the Mamlutdars exemption from punishment, protection from private suits and prosecutions, and retention in office, notwithstanding their statutory incapacity. The Bombay Government, in dismissing those implicated in the worst cases, acted under orders from the superior authority. In conclusion, his Excellency declared that the Indian Government shared the Secretary of State's admiration for the courage and singleness of purpose with which Lord Reay had acted throughout.

THE INDIAN MAIL.

BOMBAY, SEPT. 18.

A monster meeting of Europeans and natives was held to-day in the Town Hall to protest against the proposed despatch of the Indian mail for England on Sundays. Three resolutions were passed. The first protested against the Sunday mail as a measure fraught with injury to the moral, physical, and material well-being of the community in and beyond Bombay; the second declared that no adequate cause had been shown for introducing the measure; and the third states that the meeting, while believing Friday to be the most suitable and acceptable day, endorsed the proposal of the Government of India for the departure of the mail at two o'clock on Saturday afternoon all the year round. Sir Charles Sargent, the Chief Justice, presided, and among the chief speakers were the Bishop of Bombay, Mr. Dinshaw Petit, the Hon. Forbes Adam, the Hon. F. L. Latham, Messrs. Sayani, Mehta, Wadia, and Telang, members of Council; the Rev. Mr. Mackichan, Colonel Bayley, Dr. Blaney, Messrs. Cotton, Geary, Gubbay, and Kabraji, and Dr. Porter, the Roman Catholic Archbishop of Bombay.

OPERATIONS ON THE FRONTIERS OF UPPER BURMA.

(FLOM A "TIMES" CORRESPONDENT.)

During the last cold season in Upper Burma several important operations were carried out on the frontiers of the new province, and it will serve a useful purpose to record their objects and the results which attended them. These operations may be divided under four heads—the Chin expedition, the Eastern Karenni expedition, the operations at Mogaung, and the operations in Momeik and the Bhamo district. Of these the two first were the most important, and represent the most severe military enterprises associated with the pacification of Burma during last winter. As those enterprises are to be followed up in the coming winter by further expeditions, an account of these will not only show what has been done, but will indicate the probable course of future events.

The principal tribes of the Chin valley are the Siyins, Sagyilaings, and Kanhaws in the northern part, and the Tashons in the southern. It was with the Tashons that we necessarily first came into contact, and it was hoped and believed that Major Raike's negotiations in 1887-8 with Sonpek, their chief, would have resulted in a durable agreement. The Chins resented the intrusion of several exploring parties into their secluded territory, which had never been invaded by an enemy, and once their suspicions were aroused they showed an implacable hostility to our officers, and began to commit raids within the neighbouring and tranquillised districts. Two pretenders, the so-called Shwegyobyn Prince, who is not a member of the ex-Royal family of Burma, and the ex-Sawbwa of Kale, placed themselves at the head of the Tashons, who in a little time were joined by the Siyins, Sagyilaings, and Baungshes. In other words, the great majority of the Chins declared their open enmity to our authority. In consequence of these acts steps were taken for the despatch of a punitive expedition in the event of the Chins refusing to give reparation for their deeds by surrendering the Burmese rebels and dacoits who had taken refuge with them, and also the captives they had carried off from villages under our control. These terms were not complied with, and the raids were resumed with greater audacity than ever. The authorities endeavoured to solve the difficulty by compromise, and it was not until some precious weeks had been wasted that a force was moved up to guard even the frontier. Several important villages were occupied by a mixed force of English and Goorkhas, and orders were given that, although no regular expedition into the hills should be undertaken, raiders should be pursued and punished. These measures did not prove effectual. The raiders in the Yaw district became bolder, and the inhabitants of several villages were either killed or carried off as captives. The dacoits, who were largely reinforced by villagers who turned against us the arms we had put in their hands for their own defence, grew more confident from impunity, and did not hesitate to attack convoys and even a stockaded place like Gangaw. On further reinforcements being sent to the front the hostile bands were dispersed in the neighbourhood of Gangaw, and the villagers were allowed to return to their villages after paying fines for their misconduct.

At the same time that these operations were being carried on in the Yaw district General Faunce was operating with a larger force against the Tashons and other Chin tribes, and Sir George White visited in person the scene of operations. Although several attempts were made to negotiate nothing came of them, and the British force, numbering about 1,000 men, advanced into the hills, making a road as it marched, and driving the tribesmen out of their villages, not without resistance, as can be judged from the loss inflicted on our troops, whose casualties were twenty-six killed and fifty-four wounded. The force reconnoitred as far as the summit of the Lethia range, which is 8,200 feet above the sea. One of the most important facts of this campaign was the capture of the village of Tokhlaing, which has been fortified by us, and is now called Fort White. It is the headquarters of the Chin frontier force. The results of these operations may be summed up as follows. The Tashons have expressed a willingness to conclude a truce, but although our terms are exceedingly moderate and no longer include the surrender of the refugee Burmese, they have not made their formal submission or signed any agreement promising good behaviour. The Siyins have not submitted, nor have the Sagyilaings. But the Kanhaws have surrendered many captives and paid a fine of 1,000 rupees. Still, even they, it now appears, have not restored all the captives they had taken. The occupation of Fort White during the rains will, it is hoped, exercise a deterrent influence on the Chins by showing them that our occupation of the country is permanent. It is hoped that this measure, added to a vigilant blockade, will suffice to insure a pacific settlement of our difficulties with the powerful and numerous Tashons; but should our hopes be disappointed in this respect complete success is expected to crown the renewal of active military operations in the coming winter. But, in any case, it is proposed that a force should visit the Tashon country, while another column will be sent to join hands with the expedition that is to be sent eastwards from Chittagong.

The Eastern Karenni expedition relates to a different portion of our Burmese dominions, and the tract named will be found on the opposite side of the Irrawaddy, near our old frontier. The chief of Eastern Karenni during the last few years has been the somewhat notorious Sawlapaw, and our difficulties with him have been of a personal nature as distinguished from the hostile opposition of the Burmese to ourselves as conquerors. The annexation of Burma should not have entailed any collision with Eastern Karenni, nor would it have done so but for the unprovoked and inexcusable defiance of Sawlapaw. The first inkling of his hostility was given when he refused to have an interview with the Superintendent of the Shan States on his making an official tour along his borders. But this act of incivility was passed over, and it was not until he invaded the British Shan State of Maukme and devastated it that active measures were taken to bring him to a proper sense of his position. A force was sent to recover Maukme, and the Karens were driven out. Sawlapaw had, however, the audacity to send a few weeks later a stronger force into Maukme, which was again devastated, and it was not compelled to retire until a strong reinforcement had arrived for the Anglo-Indian garrison at the capital of this little State. In consequence of these acts of open hostility an ultimatum was sent to Sawlapaw requiring him to come to Fort Stedman, to pay an indemnity of two lakhs of rupees, to surrender 500 serviceable muskets, and to pay annually a sum of 5,000 rupees as tribute. After a considerable delay Sawlapaw expressed his willingness to comply with these terms if the interview with the superintendent could be held on the borders of Karenni instead of at Fort Stedman. We complied with this request, and in our anxiety to avoid extreme measures we extended the period of grace. Our forbearance was mistaked for fear, and it very shortly became evident that Sawlapaw intended to use his respite not for the purpose of collecting the indemnity, but for making preparations for defence. Further delay would have been foolish, and in January two columns invaded Karenni, one operating from the north, and the other from the south. The northern column, under Brigadier-General Collett, was the larger, and to its share fell the brunt of the work to be done. After one encounter, in which the Karens lost nearly 200 men killed, all opposition ceased, and Sawlon, the capital of the State, was occupied without further resistance.

In the meantime Sawlapaw had fled, and as his hiding place was unknown our triumph was qualified, and it became difficult to see how best to make its results a permanent settlement of the Karenni difficulty. The best arrangement seemed to be to appoint Sawlawi, Sawlapaw's nephew and heir, to act as Sawbwa of Eastern Karenni. To this project that young chief gave his assent, promising to hold his State as a British subject, to pay an indemnity of three lakhs, and to otherwise comply with the requirements of the ultimatum. The payment of the annual tribute was guaranteed by the leading officials and timber merchants of the State. At the same time negotiations were opened with Siam for the purpose of joint action against Sawlapaw, but the Siamese were so dilatory that their co-operation was practically of no value. The Siamese have put forward claims over Karen districts which will be submitted to a mixed Commission that is now on the point of beginning its labours. Affairs in Karenni under Sawlawi have proved fairly satisfactory. The guns have been surrendered, and the first instalment of the indemnity paid. Sawlawi has also attended the durbars of the superintendent of the Shan States, and kept us well informed as to events in his territory. Sawlapaw's exact whereabouts is still unknown, but it is believed that he is residing in a village near the capital, and that he does not interfere in the government. The most likely cause for any further disturbance in Eastern Karenni seems to be the presence of a Siamese force in the district east of the Salwen, more especially as this district contains some of the best timber in the country. The third sphere of frontier operations was in the Mogaung sub-division of the Bhamo district. Mogaung is of special importance on account of its natural wealth of jade, amber, and indiarubber, and the town of the same name is a busy place of trade. The importance of pacifying a district likely to furnish such a considerable revenue is obvious, and success appeared to crown our efforts until the Lepei and Ithi Kachins attacked our force on its return from the jade mines. An attack was also made on Mogaung itself, where the small garrison of Goorkha police, under Lieutenant O'Donnell, valiantly and successfully repulsed the attack of a large force. Last winter four separate expeditions were sanctioned and organised against the different branches of the Kachin tribe. A demand was made upon their chiefs to surrender Po Saw and Nga Ti, our two most bitter and formidable opponents. As no compliance was shown with these requests the expeditions took the field. That against the Tepei clan achieved no inconsiderable degree of success, and the other then accomplished after more or less resistance the destruction of the head villages of the offending tribes. There were twenty-two engagements in all with a casualty list to our force of thirty-nine officers and men killed and wounded. Forty-six villages containing 639 houses were destroyed by our troops. The success of these operations would have been all the greater but for an outbreak of smallpox which delayed the movements of the troops during the best month for active operations. Work at the jade and amber mines has not been disturbed, and the hope is reasonably indulged that the Kachins will not in the future seriously disturb the peace of this sub-division.

The fourth set of operations was on the north-east frontier bordering on Bhamo and the State of Momeik. Momeik is immediately north of the Ruby Mines district, and the position of Bhamo is well-known. Here our principal opponent has been Kan Hlaing, whose pretensions to the Sawbwaship of Momeik we refused to recognise, and who in consequence became our bitter enemy. With him acted another adventurer named Saw Yan Naing. At the beginning of the present year these two leaders had collected a large hostile gathering, and vigorous measures had to be adopted against it. Troops were sent into the Ruby Mines district and also to Momeik. The mere presence of these troops sufficed to insure tranquillity, and after a little delay Saw Yan Naing was vigorously attacked and driven from his principal stockade. He is now a fugitive somewhere on the frontier, and although he still has all the inclination to be mischievous, it is doubted if he has any power or influence left. A more serious wave of disturbance visited the neighbourhood of Bhamo. A pretender who claimed the title of prince appeared there, and recruiting many Chinese brigands and deserters from the Chinese army soon found himself at the head of a force more formidable in a military sense than the ordinary dacoit band. The promptitude of our attack nipped the danger in the bud, and this force melted away after a single encounter with the police under Mr. Segrave, in which it lost 50 men. In the neighbourhood of Bhamo itself a reverse was experienced at Si-u, when the police were repulsed in an attack on a stockade with a loss of several men killed and wounded. This defeat was retrieved, but only after a desperate struggle, by a successful attack on Mankin and Malin, which success was followed by the dispersal of the gathering. The efforts to capture Kan Hlaing, which would have crowned our success, failed. The most signal of all the successes obtained in this quarter was the severe lesson read the Kachins of Ponkan. Their chief villages were occupied and destroyed, large quantities of grain were burnt, and the headmen made an abject surrender. There seems every reason for saying and believing that, here at least, our punishment of the Burmese marauders has been effectual, and that we shall not be troubled again by this particular branch of the Kachins.

INDIA'S GROWING TRADE.

The returns of India's foreign trade during the year 1888-89 are of the most satisfactory character. The increase on 1887-88 has been so remarkable that we have to go back to 1880-81 to find such another. That was the year in which India's foreign trade was said to have increased "by leaps and bounds." Again there has been a world-wide revival of trade, and India has undoubtedly got her share. In imports she shows a satisfactory increase under most heads, the only serious decrease being in metals. The imports of wrought and unwrought copper fell from 26,630 tons in 1887-88 to 4,925 tons last year, and this drop was due to the French copper corner.

Large importations of oil from Asiatic Russia, exceeding those of 1887-88 by twelve million gallons, are answerable for the whole of the increase under the head of oils, American importations having declined. Machinery shows an increase of more than 51 lakhs. In yarn and textile fabrics the increase is mainly due to the larger imports of grey piece goods and bleached piece goods, which are credited with 256 and 95 lakhs of rupees respectively. Twenty-five thousand tons represent the decrease in the quantity of salt used, but its value has increased nine lakhs. The supply of refined sugar from foreign sources is less by some 13,000 tons, and in value by 34 lakhs. On the other hand, although the exports of unrefined sugar have declined, their value has grown by 3 lakhs, and 45½ lakhs worth have been sent out of the country. The shipping of wheat has increased largely on the previous twelve months, the total exports reaching 881,000 tons, against 677,000 tons; in value the increase is over 197 lakhs. In opium the value has risen by 44 lakhs, but the number of chests has decreased 2,307. The cotton season is said to have been very unfavourable to shippers, so the quantity exported is less, but the value greater by 63 lakhs. Shipments of raw jute increased, and gunny bags worth 147 lakhs were exported to the United Kingdom, no doubt to the detriment of Dundee, though to the advantage of Calcutta. The total value of the imports of merchandise and treasure was more than Rs. 4,00,00,000 in excess of that of the previous twelve months, while the value of exports increased nearly Rs. 7,00,00,000. Together, the total value of exports and imports is Rs. 1,79,10,49,388, which gives a percentage of increase of 6·09 when compared with 1887-8.

THE VICTORIA CROSS.

Tuesday's Gazette announces that the Queen has been pleased to signify her intention to confer the decoration of the Victoria Cross upon Surgeon John Crimmin, of the Bombay Medical Service, whose claim has been submitted for Her Majesty's approval, for his conspicuous bravery in the action near Lwekaw, Eastern Karenni, Burma, on the 1st January, 1889, as recorded against his name. The following is the act of bravery for which he was recommended:—Lieutanant Tighe, 27th Bombay Infanty (to the Mounted Infantry of which Corps Surgeon Crimmin was attached), states that in the action near Lwekaw, Eastern Karenni, on the 1st January last, four men charged with him into the midst of a large body of the enemy who were moving off from the Karen left flank, and two men fell to the ground wounded. He saw Surgeon Crimmin attending one of the men about two hundred yards to the rear. Karens were round the party in every direction, and he saw several fire at Surgeon Crimmin and the wounded man. A Sepoy then galloped up to Surgeon Crimmin, and the latter joined the fighting line which then came up. Lieutenant Tighe further states that very shortly afterwards they were engaged in driving the enemy from small clumps of trees and bamboo, in which the Karens took shelter. Near one of these clumps he saw Surgeon Crimmin attending a wounded man. Several Karens rushed out at him. Surgeon Crimmin thrust his sword through one of them, and attacked a second, a third Karen then dropped from the fire of a Sepoy, upon which the remaining Karens fled.

LORD DUFFERIN ON INDIA.

On Thursday night the Marquis of Dufferin and Ava was entertained at a banquet in Belfast. There was a large and brilliant assemblage, the nobility and gentry in the surrounding Ulster districts joining in paying honour to the ex-Governor of India. The Mayor of Belfast presided, and, after the usual loyal and patriotic toasts, the health of "Our Welcome Guest" was given. It was most enthusiastically received, and, in reply,

Lord Dufferin dealt chiefly with India without disparagement to either of the sister kingdoms. He could say with perfect truth that both Ireland as a whole and Ulster as a province have imported a vast amount of ability, industry, and valour into the Indian civil and military services. Why, gentlemen, to whom at this very moment has been intrusted as Viceroy the supreme conduct of Indian affairs? Is it not to a great Kerry nobleman—the Marquis of Lansdowne? Who is governing thirty millions of Indian subjects in Madras with exceptional success and ability? Why, a Bourke, of Mayo—Lord Connemara. Who is it now commands the armies of the Queen in India with the universal acceptation both of the public and the Government? Is it not a Waterford hero—the victor of Candahar—Sir Frederick Roberts? Who, again, has succeeded in what—considering the difficulties of the task—was a marvellously short period in reducing Burma to submission, or—what was even more troublesome—the hill tribes that surround Burma? Has it not been Sir George White, a most distinguished soldier, of whom his native Antrim may well be proud? And who is the able financier that has contrived, in spite of the treacherous, debilitated, and ever depreciating rupee, to evolve a surplus out of impending deficit? Has it not been Sir David Barbour, whom they were entitled to claim as a Belfast man? In saying that he felt he was not trenching upon any burning political question. The British Empire could never get on without Irishmen. His lordship then proceeded to speak of the prosperity of India, and said that kingdoms and principalities, which for hundreds of years had been continually devastated by successive wars and intercine conflicts, were now peaceful and secure in amicable juxtaposition. A justice which formerly was never known in India and is not known in any Oriental Government under the sun protects alike the rights and property of the poorest peasant and the wealthiest zemindar. Extensive lines of railway not only unite all the great centres of population and of industry, but have, in a great measure, penetrated all those districts which were once the theatres of the most disastrous famines. Universities, colleges, and schools, offering free education to the entire population, were to be found in every town—nay, almost every village and hamlet. British manufacturing energy and enterprise have supplied millions with all the necessaries of life and have taught them in their turn to establish in their own land rival looms and industries, while, above all, the standards of moral obligation which prevail in the West have vindicated their authority and planted their sanctions both in the Courts of Justice and in the counting-houses of Hindostan. His lordship concluded with a brief reference to the wonderful prosperity of Belfast.

AN INCUBATING CONCESSION.

It is high time some definite particulars were given regarding a scheme vaguely spoken of as a "railway from Chittagong to East Bengal," which it is alleged is to be accompanied with a concession of three thousand square miles of "waste land,' or the right of "prospecting" in such large tract for "gold or petroleum," a mineral combination which may be commended to the attention of the School of Mines. The question was raised in course of the random Indian Budget debate; but the circumstance that compels attention to the secret negotiations now presumably proceeding at the India Office, is the peculiar tone and drift of such reply as the Under-Secretary of State thought fit to offer. With reference to the proposals for the Chittagong railway, said Sir John Gorst, "the Hon. Member for Northampton again showed himself anxious to do the work of the Secretary of State for India. The Hon. Member wanted all the proposals and opinions of everybody disclosed to the House, and the contract to be settled in the House instead of in the India Office. Certain proposals had been made concerning this railway, including a large grant of waste land. They had been submitted to the Secretary of State, who had considered them, but had not so far approved of them." Here Sir George Campbell interjected the query, "Where is the waste land?" To this Sir John replied "He could not tell;" and he then proceeded in this extraordinary strain: "He objected to the fussy kind of interference in the executive business of the Government of India to which some honourable members were addicted before the Secretary of State had the materials to form a decision. This arose from the anxiety of hon. members to do the business of the Secretary of State, instead of minding their own business, which was to criticise the Government's action when it had been determined on; their business was not to attempt by agitation and threats to exert an undue influence upon the executive departments of the Government before action had been taken." Now, as to this petulant little lecture it might seem to raise certain constitutional questions which it might be inconvenient for the India Office to answer. The authoritative dicta comprised in the passages we have italicised do demand the immediate attention of practical men. This is no mere question of some yet undivulged new method of railway exploitation in India; but it is evidently accompanied by negotiations, relating to extensive public property, that are being pursued by private parties for their own individual profit. And in this instance it is not the resources of a Native State that are to be manipulated, but lands and mineral deposits that are assumed to be under the direct control of the Government of India. With the conduct of certain members of the Indian Council and their friends regarding the Deccan Mining Concession still fresh in the public mind, the Under-Secretary could ill afford to treat the question of the inchoate Chittagong concessions in the highty-tighty fashion to which we draw attention.—Economist.

MARRIAGE OF MR. JOHN KAYE BATTEN AND MISS KETCHEN.

The marriage of Eva Muriel Elizabeth, only daughter of Colonel W. D. B. Ketchen, commanding the Nair Brigade, and Mr. John Kaye Batten, Madras Civil Service, son of the late Mr. John Hallet Batten, Bengal Civil Service, took place in Christ's Church, Trevandrum, on Wednesday, the 7th ult. The roads from the church to the commandant's house were lined by the Cavalry, Artillery, and Infantry of the Nair Brigade in full dress, who volunteered their services for the occasion. Colonel Ketchen wore the full dress uniform of the Madras Light Cavalry. The bride who looked charming, wore a lovely dress of rich white satin, draped with crêpe de chine and trimmed with long wreaths of myrtle and waxen orange blossom, the bodice and full train being of white moiré; her only ornament was a pearl necklace (the gift of the bridegroom); her long tulle veil was simply fastened with sprays of orange blossoms; she carried a magnificent bouquet of eucharis lilies, orange blossom, stephanotis, and tuberoses, mixed with the small delicate maiden hair fern; her train was carried by a tiny bridesmaid, Miss Annie Jacob, who was prettily dressed in white, with an apple-green sash, her large white hat being also trimmed with apple green; she wore a pearl heart brooch (the gift of the bridegroom). The bridegroom was attended by Mr. R. B. Ferguson, as best man. Many native gentlemen were present, among whom was his Highness, the First Prince of Travancore, who had come all the way from Madras on purpose to be present at the ceremony. As the bride moved up the aisle on the arm of her father, who gave her away, the choir sang "The voice that breathed o'er Eden," and when the ceremony, which was performed by the Rev. H. B. Norman, B.A., was over, and the bridal party proceeded to the vestry, another beautiful hymn, "O Father all creating," was sung. The bride and bridegroom then left the church, showers of rose leaves and jessamine being thrown into the air and before them as they walked down the aisle, while the band of the Nair Brigade played Mendelssohn's "Wedding March." Flowers were also thrown alone the route at intervals, and at the handsome arch at the entrance of the avenue leading to the Commandant's house, quantities of flowers fell, as if by magic, from the top of the arch as the bride and bridegroom passed beneath it. They were received at the Commandant's house by his Highness, the Maharajah of Travancore, who wore magnificent jewels. The house was beautifully decorated, and in a very novel manner. In the hall was a trophy of piled drums, the regimental colours, and stars of bayonets, erected by the European Non-commissioned and Native Officers of the Nair Brigade. At the end of the dining-room and drawing-room, which had been thrown into one, and were full of beautiful growing plants and cut white flowers, was a small canoe full of fragrant roses, which was sent by the Maharajah, and from the centre of the large arch connecting the rooms depended an enormous bell, entirely composed of the flowers of the large white sacred lotus, maidenhair, and eucharis lilies, with a fringe of the white blossoms of the cork tree, a single lotus bud forming the clapper of the bell, under which the bride and bridegroom stood to receive the congratulations of their friends. The Maharajah proposed the health of the bride and bridegroom in a few kind words, and Mr. Batten briefly returned thanks. The cake was then cut by the bride, and afterwards a huge white swan, very cleverly made, was presented to the bride by the servants of the establishment with a request that she would lift a lid concealed in the back of it. On her doing so a number of birds flew out. This little ceremony was supposed to bring good luck. At about five o'clock, amid a shower of rice and rose leaves, the bride and bridegroom left for the Residency, Quilon, kindly lent by Mr. Hannyngton, the Resident, in a handsome State carriage, which the Maharajah had courteously placed at the disposal of Mr. Batten for the occasion. They were loudly and heartily cheered as they departed. The bride's travelling dress was exceedingly pretty, being of the newest shade of green cashmere, beautifully embroidered in different shades of tan. It was made in the directoire style, the vest and front being of pale pink moiré, with a bonnet of green crêpe and pink roses. She carried an exquisite bouquet of pale pink lotus flowers mixed with grasses and ferns, to match her dress. Mrs. Ketchen, the mother of the bride, wore a bodice and train of moss green velvet, with a vest and petticoat of pale green and biscuit brocade, a moss green tulle bonnet, with honeysuckle coloured plumes. Her beautiful bouquet was composed of honeysuckle and Maréchal Niel roses, mixed with cream and yellow orchids. The presents were numerous and costly, including many handsome cheques. Among them was a silver necklace from the Dewan; an emerald and diamond ring from Her Highness the Senior Ranee; and a ruby ring from her consort, the Valia Coil Tampooran. His Highness, the First Prince, presented a magnificent bracelet, a massive band of gold with a beautifully enamelled peacock with diamond eyes raised from the gold; the tail composed entirely of diamonds, the eyes of the feathers being alternately a ruby, an emerald, a sapphire, and a diamond. This was set in a medallion of gold with diamonds at each corner, and when opened was found to contain the portrait of Colonel and Mrs. W. D. B. Ketchen, beautifully painted. His Highness the Maharajah also asked permission to offer a gift, and Her Highness the Senior Ranee and her consort wrote to the same effect; but these presents, so kindly sent and offered, had to be returned according to Government regulations.

ANGLO-INDIAN PRESS.

SWORDS FOR NATIVE CAVALRY.

(Civil and Military Gazette.)

On nearly every occasion when sword blades are imported from England or elsewhere for the use of a Native cavalry regiment the Commandant makes a special application to the customs authorities for a refund of the duty paid, and, on the case being referred for decision, the Government of India as often steadily declines to exempt the blades from the impost. We certainly should imagine that if any article might claim, more than another, to be imported free of duty it would be sword blades for the use of Native cavalry regiments. Not only is the sword the chief weapon of the cavalry, but the duty on it may mean just the difference in price between a second-rate article and a first-class one. And even if a first-class sword be bought, then the charges for customs duty is so much more out of the funds, and other articles of equipment must suffer in proportion. Only a little while ago a Native cavalry regiment imported some sword blades from England, and claimed exemption from paying customs duty on the grounds that they had been obtained to replace others destroyed on field service in Burma, and that the regiment had already undergone very heavy expenses in many ways in connection with the campaign in that country. One would think that these were good reasons for claiming exemption, but the Government of India apparently did not think so, for it refused to sanction a refund of the duty which had been paid. It appears to us that if it be necessary to import swords from England or elsewhere for the use of silladar cavalry—and we may be sure that it is, or the regimental authorities would not go to the trouble of sending such a distance for them—then it is only reasonable to claim that they be allowed to pass free of duty. To persistently refuse to recognise the undoubted justice of this claim is almost equivalent to designedly placing an obstacle in the way of our Native cavalry becoming efficiently equipped. Great things are expected from the Indian cavalry. A niggardly policy, such as the one brought to notice above, must ever prevent them from realising the hopes of their most sanguine friends.

THE JUTE CROP.

(Englishman.)

If the unsatisfactory reports of the jute crop which are now coming in should prove to be well founded, it will be bad news for the Calcutta exporters. The year opened with confident anticipations of bumper crops, low prices, brisk business, and the consequent prosperity of the port which such conditions imply. Unhappily, the season concerning which these pleasant expectations were entertained has been marked in fact by little else than successive disappointments and unpleasant surprises. The serious scarcity of food grains in Behar, and the unmistakably inferior and deficient wheat harvest in Oudh and the North-West, were scarcely realised ere they were followed by genuine reports of the short outturn of the oilseed crops throughout the same divisions of the country. The price of wheat has remained at a level which has reduced exports from this side of India to very small proportions; linseed has, from an early period in the season, been selling at figures nearly 25 per cent. above its normal value in times of abundance; poppy-seed has been scrambled for by excited speculators, the supply being quite inadequate to the demand; and, lastly, the abundant rapeseed crop in Eastern Bengal and Assam being insufficient to supply the deficiency in the crops of Bombay and the North-West, and in those of Continental Europe, the price of this staple also has risen far above the average of recent years. Now we are apparently face to face with a similarly unsatisfactory state of affairs in the case of jute. Early advices were of a hopeful character and the new crop was, in many quarters, believed to be a larger one than last year's. The official report wore a different complexion, the absence of rain early in the season, and the excessive downfall at a later stage, having, it was alleged, interfered with the satisfactory growth of the plant. Later private information appears to support this unpromising view, but both official and private advices coincide as to the extension of the area under cultivation, a result of the profitable prices realised by growers last year. Owing to the agreement made by balers not to sell baled jute before the first of the present month, the speculative element has to a large extent been eliminated from the local market this season. The agreement, a not unnatural outcome of the caution inspired by the unprofitable forward business of previous years, is now seen to have been wisely conceived, for the market has opened with sales at exceptionally high prices, and the present shipping cost is much above the values realisable at home. As a consequence of all this, the advance in freights which usually accompanies the appearance of the new jute crop has been more speculative than real. The "spurt" has been apparent, but is ill-sustained, and, with 50,000 tons of "unfixed" shipping in the port, we are not likely to witness a repetition of the remarkable excitement which distinguished the jute season of 1888.

THE FIFTY-FIVE YEARS RULE.

(Englishman.)

Much anxiety and some indignation were provoked among the officers of the Public Works Department by the recent rumour of the abolition of the rule enforcing the compulsory retirement of all officers at the age of fifty-five, and although these apprehensions were for a time allayed by a semi-official denial of the correctness of the report it is now believed by those most interested in the subject that a despatch recommending the annulment of the rule in question is under consideration, and moreover that his Excellency the Viceroy is strongly in favour of the proposed alteration. If this is the case, it is difficult to believe that the reasons which led to the introduction of the measure have been fairly and fully considered. In the Public Works Department promotion, now exceedingly slow, was for several years at an absolute standstill. There was no inducement for men to retire with a pension, small in any case, and rendered uncertain in value on account of the falling rupee, while the salaries of the men in the Department are not paid on a scale sufficiently liberal to admit of a competence being secured by thrift and economy. Every officer as a rule remained at his post until ill-health or the regulations of the Department compelled him to retire, and the rule of enforced retirement at the age of fifty-five is now, to a small extent, helping to give the flow of promotion necessary to secure an efficient and contented service. In the case, however, of engineers working in bad districts, and subject to the exposure which is incidental to their ordinary duties, weak health accounts, unless we are mistaken, for the majority of the retirements. Those whose lives have fallen in pleasant places are the officers chiefly affected by the fifty-five years rule. The secretaries, inspector-general and officers in similar posts, who enjoy a delightful climate all the year round, are those who will gain by being permitted to continue in office after attaining the age of fifty-five, and the feeling of exasperation in the Department will not be less intense when it is remembered that those at present holding these appointments are the very men who have benefited by the application of the rule in past years.

THE WASTE OF OFFICERS.

(Civil and Military Gazette.)

It is a matter of frequent complaint that the exigencies of modern military education tend to keep regiments short-handed in the matter of officers. In British regiments this evil is much enhanced by the number of probationers for the Staff Corps. Theoretically we believe probationers are supposed to be at once replaced in their regiments, but practically it takes at least six months to do so, and then very probably the new comer will, like his predecessors, be off to the Staff Corps as soon as, or possibly before, he has learned to make himself useful. However, the object of this article is not to discuss the system of officering the Staff Corps, but to show how some men, at any rate, might be retained with their regiments instead of, as at present, being scattered about undergoing various courses of instruction. We will take what are known as C. and D. examinations, or in the Staff Corps as Part II. Of what do these consist? Of a series of not very intricate questions in military law, tactics, field fortification and topography, all subjects with which an officer should by rights become acquainted within the ordinary course of his profession, but to enable him to pass in which it is considered necessary to institute a course of cram, known as the Garrison Class, whereby his services are lost to his regiment for three months. In a Native regiment this may be very inconvenient, under officered as such regiments always are, even supposing all their officers to be present—an event of rare occurrence—what with language leave, musketry, equitation, transport, and signalling classes. There is not one of these subjects that an officer should not be capable of mastering for himself with the aid of text books while with his regiment, and it would be no bad thing either for him or his commanding officer if the latter had to examine him periodically in these subjects, thus compelling him to keep himself fairly conversant with them. So much for the Garrison Class. Now let us take language leave, that bugbear of commands of Native regiments. Of course, a probationer is not of much use until he can talk to the men and understand what they say to him; but whether this result is achieved by the present H.L. Examination is very much open to question. So far as colloquial efficiency is concerned it is an utter failure. It is pretentious, pedantic, and impracticable. The candidate's whole time is taken up in trying to attain a literary style, such as shall please the Board of Examiners in Calcutta, the which style, if attempted to impress into daily use, would be simply "not understanded of the people" with whom he has to deal. The time wasted by the ordinary probationer would be much more profitably spent in learning the interior economy and system of his regiment; and he might simultaneously pick up such a knowledge of "Hindustani as she is spoken" and written as would enable him to pass at the end of his year's probation a quite sufficiently practical test therein before a Local Board. For the benefit of the men alluded to above, who really try to make a study of the language, language leave might still be retained, but not for probationers.

BENGAL.

(Sept. 1.)

"THE Rajah of Sikkim is at Guntok," says a contemporary, "and is a grass widower, his wife having left him somewhat suddenly a fortnight ago for Chambi, where her two children and brother-in-law are. There is no great probability of the Rani returning."

THE returns of Calcutta sea-borne trade for 1888-89 show a marked advance on those for the preceding year, the aggregate increase being no less than Rs. 2,61,52,716, or 3 2-3 per cent. The foreign imports were over 2½ crores better, and the foreign exports over 89 lakhs better. The value of the foreign imports was Rs. 27,06,79,011, and that of the foreign exports Rs. 36,69,16,271, making a grand total of Rs. 63,75,95,282, the highest figures touched in the history of the port.

THE old story of the murder of a child for its ornaments is reported by the Hindu Patriot; but the crime in this instance is accompanied with a peculiarly revolting circumstance. Early on the morning of the 18th a Native child, aged one a-half, and loaded with ornaments, was left by the maid in charge of it with a butcher in Bow Bazaar. When the servant returned to take the child home she was informed that its father had already done so. This having been found to be untrue, the police were informed and a search made; it was discovered that the child had been murdered by the butcher, its body cut up, and a portion of the flesh sold as goat's meat to a customer. The murderer was arrested, and, together with one or two accomplices, awaits his trial.

A CALCUTTA paper states that in several parts of Bengal there are signs that the hand-loom weaving of cotton is reviving. At Serampur the industry has so improved that the weavers, who were not long ago giving up the trade for other occupations, are now able to hold their own against the Manchester piece-goods. But in the Burdwan district the manufacture of cloth has largely decreased, and this is said to be due to the competition of Manchester goods. More than one recent district report bears evidence of a falling off in the local silk-weaving industries, owing chiefly to the successful competition of European-made fabrics. In Bogra the manufacture of silk has been almost entirely driven out by this competition, and the weavers have taken to agriculture. So in Bhagulpore the industry is rapidly waning. An officer is about to be specially deputed to make an industrial survey of Bengal, and part of his duty will be to ascertain how the local handicrafts are affected by outside competition.

A CONTEMPORARY reports an incident that occurred in Behar on the 22nd August. Owing probably to the presence of so many gallant planters, that province is singularly free from occurrences of the following nature:—"A Mrs. Danslem, whose husband is an accountant in the timber depot at Bugaha, was returning from Monghyr. After leaving the train at Bettiah, she proceeded in a shampony, and about 9 P.M., when the conveyance was about half a mile the other side of Pursah Indigo Factory, three men attacked the bullock driver and three more attacked Mrs. Danslem, rendering both her and the driver insensible; one man got a brick and hammered the unfortunate woman in the mouth, striking her repeatedly with it. Some villagers living close by hearing a noise ran to the spot and took the wounded pair into Pursah, the blackguards of assaulters clearing off. Mr. Canning did his best to assist, and was most kind. The injuries received are not supposed to be very serious, but the Civil Surgeon of Motiharee had gone out to Pursah to examine Mrs. Danslem when we last heard. From the slight details of a first report it is difficult to gather the full facts, but the scoundrels are not supposed to be Mugaieh Domes. The police are doing their level best, and it is fervently to be hoped they will succeed in arresting the culprits."

THE nuisance caused by the large number of monkeys at Tanjore has become so great that the Municipal Council has been put to the necessity of accepting the proposal of one Ramasawmy Naick of Karuppoor in Kumbakonam Taluq, to catch the monkeys at the rate of one rupee per head, the cost of deportation and feeding of the monkeys being borne by the Municipality in addition.

THE Eastern Guardian says:—"A stone-cutter was killed by the female elephant belonging to the Alugais Temple at Madura under very curious circumstances. It appears the unfortunate man was in that condition euphoniously called in the language of wine-bibbers 'three sheets in the wind;' and the animal not stomaching the smell of arrack became infuriated and crushed the head of the cutter with its foot. Perhaps Mr. Caine may be induced to urge this as an additional argument in favour of his temperance movement."

THE ROYAL BALL AT POONA.—It is difficult to convey anything but a dim idea of the magnificent spectacle the Council Hall presented on Wednesday evening, says the Poona Observer, when their Royal Highnesses the Duke and Duchess of Connaught's Ball took place. For several days past Poona society was wholly absorbed in making preparations for the Royal event; and many ladies and gentlemen of artistic taste busied themselves up to Tuesday till the day had nearly merged into night in decorating the handsome structure in which the ball was held. The grandeur of the hall was recognised by everyone present. Everywhere within the building was to be perceived a lavishness of decorative art, yielding effects full of beauty, and the superb picture induced the mind to marvel at the tremendous labour involved in the decorations and general arrangements, and the infinite patience of those who undertook to accomplish a work so intricate and extensive. Standing at the south gateway outside the Council Hall, the scene in front was not striking enough to promote rapture, but once in the lobby and interior of the hall a sense of bewilderment seized one. Here Mrs. Pottinger, with one or two assistants, laboured to the best advantage to convert the place into fairyland, for the scene that burst upon the view was a perfect dream of beauty, a happy memory of which will remain for some years to come. Entering the ballroom, which was resplendent with light, every crevice bore testimony to decorative art and refined taste. The walls were covered from top to base with martial arms and foliage, artistically designed. At the further end of the room, two guns placed in each corner, amid a thicket of shrubs, and resting on a crimson platform, formed a bold outline to a background of artistic devices. The floor itself was sufficient to satisfy the enthusiasm of the most inveterate waltzer. Attached to the hall, on the right, was an immense shamiana, under the canopy of which was a shimmer of scarlet, blue and gold, not a vestige of the ground beneath the spread of rich volvet carpets being visible. To add to the splendour of the elaborate satin-coloured gilded sofas and ottomans, arranged in a manner so exquisite as almost to baffle description, the brilliancy of the uniforms and the richness of the ladies' dresses combined to present a scene which, as a thing of beauty, will live in memory for some time. Turning from this spot to the supper rooms, everything was as magnificent as elsewhere. From half-past nine the guests began to arrive, and a little after ten o'clock the ball-room was filled with a brilliant assemblage, the scarlet and gold of the British Infantry and Staff Corps officers, the black and gold of the Artillery, the blue and gold of the Hussars, mingled with the rich dresses of the ladies, on many of whom were displayed jewels of the finest water, while the sombre black of the civilian dress-coats supplied the necessary shading to the picture. The ball was opened with a quadrille, in which her Royal Highness the Duchess of Connaught danced with H.E. the Governor, while Lady Reay partnered the Duke, to the strains of the bands of the Durham Light Infantry and Royal Fusiliers.

NORTH-WEST PROVINCES AND PUNJAB.

THE Dufferin Bridge at Benares has stood the strain of traffic remarkably well. The Ganges has been very high of late, but this has made no difference in the ordinary speed at which trains have been run across the bridge.

THE following is from the Lahore paper:—"The Simla-Kalka extension of the Delhi-Kalka Railway will, we are informed, be almost certainly carried into effect within the next three years. It has long been obvious that one day or other the railway must be made, for what has been done in the Himalayas at Darjeeling can as easily, though at somewhat greater expense, be done for Simla. The Darjeeling Railway pays, we believe a dividend of 6 or 7 per cent., and cæteris paribus there is no reason why the Simla-Kalka, or shall we call it the Delhi-Simla line, should not pay as well. Once the line is made good-bye to the exodus question, it may be hoped, for ever."

BURMA.

SOME months ago Mr. Hughes, of the Geological Survey, accompanied by an official from Burma, made a tour in Perak to examine the working of the tin mines. Since then Mr. Hughes has examined the principal districts in the Burmese district of Mergui, where tin mines have been worked for many years and where they are still being worked mainly by Chinese and Siamese. The methods are said by a Calcutta paper to be most primitive, and the working is only carried on at certain seasons of the year. Moreover, at present Government derives little advantage from the mining operations, for in some parts the miners pay nothing whatever for the use of the land, while they are free to cut down timber for their furnaces and export the tin almost entirely to China and Siam. In only one or two districts is a small ground rent charged by Government, and Mr. Hughes is of opinion that in a few years these squatters will consider themselves proprietors of the mines they work and of the ground on which their houses stand, when the Government may find some difficulty in ousting them. The coolies who work in the mines are mostly imported from Penang, but even in the wet weather there are only 250 of them, while in the dry weather they dwindle to forty. The men are poorly paid, and have such bad health that they seldom work for more than one season.

SIND.

It is reported that a new bar of a serious character has, since the burst of the monsoon, formed outside the old harbour bar of Karachi. On the 20th and 21st instant three steamers, bound for Europe, were piloted out of Karachi at high tide. One of these, the Branksome Hall, bumped on the bottom five times, the St. Regulus bumped twice, and the third steamer, once. On the 22nd the s.s. Lycia (McIver Line) arrived from Liverpool. The pilot went on board, declined to take the vessel in, ordered that she should stand out to sea for twenty-four hours, and that he would bring her in the next morning on the high tide. He then left, returned the next morning and brought her in safely. On the 22nd there was 27 feet of water at mean sea level on the bar at high tide, and according to the pilot, it was not safe, owing to the heavy monsoon swell, to carry any large vessel over the bar unless there were four clear feet of water below the ship's keel. It is now eight years since any vessel has struck upon the Karachi bar.

A Karachi paper of the 21st reports:—"A Sepoy of the Biluch Regiment stationed here ran amuck while out on sentry guard duty at the Bombay Bank, between the hours of two and four this morning. He left his beat and came down to the Rambagh quarter, where he fired at a police Sepoy who was at the Rambagh Chowki. He missed his mark, and the bullet went as far as a certain range of buildings near the Rambagh tank. While he was about to aim a second shot at the same policeman the latter entreated to be left unmolested, whereupon the Biluch changed his mind, saying tumara kismat atcha hai. The next person that he met was a street lamplighter, who was also fired at. Luckily the bullet entered his leg, leaving him unable to move. The next and the last that was aimed at was another policeman, and his case proved fatal. The Biluch, whose name is Danibux, was seen this morning at the general parade ground, where he was arrested. His plea is that he was given liquor by other guards while on duty and consequently knew not what he did. On being questioned where his rifle, ammunition and belt were he replied that he had left them on a shrub in the jungles."

CORRUPTION IN INDIA.

THOSE who sow the wind will, we are told, reap the whirlwind. The Government of Bombay is at the present moment realising the very unpalatable truth of this sacred proverb. In its anxiety to bring home the charges framed against Mr. Crawford it went out of its legitimate way to secure evidence against him, and gave its support to certain Native magistrates, who did not hesitate, under a promise of indemnity, to come forward and swear that they had paid bribes to obtain their appointments to the Bench. The charge of bribery, wrote Lord Byron, in his celebrated letter to the Editor of My Grandmother's Review, is revolting to the heart of man from its frequent occurrence, to the mind of a Statesman from its occasional truth, and to the soul of an Editor from its moral impossibility. But to the soul of a Bombay Mamlutdar a charge of bribery does not present itself under any of these hideous aspects. To him a bribe was as simple a matter of ordinary fact as the primrose by the river's brim was to Wordsworth's unsophisticated child of nature—"a yellow primrose, and nothing more." But the Bombay Government, by offering an indemnity to those Native magistrates who would confess to corruption, magnified bribery into a civic virtue. That it is in Native eyes held to be such may be gathered from the report of a monster meeting of the Native community held at Poona on the 1st inst., when three resolutions were put to the assembly and carried :—

The first resolution was, "That this meeting do place on record on behalf of the Native public their emphatic approbation and grateful appreciation of the courageous efforts made by the present Government of Bombay and its officers, amidst unusual difficulties and discouragements, to probe to the bottom and to eradicate the widespread corruption which is traceable directly to the evil genius of a single English officer, who enjoyed the full confidence of Government, and which had prevailed over two-thirds of the presidency, but remained unheeded for many years." The second resolution was, "That this meeting wishes to record an expression of opinion that unless the indemnity solemnly guaranteed to the witnesses who gave evidence before the inquiry is strictly respected and fulfilled in its integrity without distinction, the result will be that the public faith and plighted word of the British Government will be destroyed, and the experiences in this case will hereafter render absolutely impossible to bring to light any delinquencies and misconduct of European public functionaries—an evil fraught with danger to the future good government of India, compared with which any temporary inconvenience or difficulties caused by factious opposition, the policy of faithful adherence to solemn promises must undoubtedly count as a lesser evil. That in a country like India the possible advantages of meting out technical justice in deference to abstract principles will be dearly purchased at the sacrifice of the reliance of the people on the good faith and sanctity of the Government promises by whomsoever given." The third resolution was, "That this meeting wishes to place on record its strong protest against the persistent and factious misrepresentations and perversions of facts of interested writers, whereby public opinion in England is being misled, and that the Native public of India grieve to find some honourable members of Parliament, whom India cannot be too grateful to for their honest and disinterested efforts to see justice done to this country, allowing themselves to be influenced by such one-sided and incorrect representations."

It will be seen from this, that the only "evil genius" recognised by Native eyes was the British officer—the unfortunate, and no doubt corrupt, Mr. Crawford. Why the Government of Bombay should have committed itself to the extraordinary course of widening the sphere of corruption in order to convict Mr. Crawford is a question to which it is difficult to find a satisfactory answer. Mr. Crawford's impecunious position was no secret in Bombay; but he had done that city good service, and the Government would have lost no dignity or incurred no censure had it acted like Othello in dismissing his lieutenant. "I love thee, Cassio; but never more be officer of mine." Instead of acting, however, upon this very sensible precedent, it undertook a clumsy semi-legal prosecution, the result of which has been all the trouble now accumulating on its hands. Having sown the wind, Lord Reay's Government is now reaping the whirlwind. The Secretary of State for India must "in duty bound" support Lord Reay. There was no other course open for Lord Cross except to do so, or to convey a public censure. But what is the position now? An Indemnity Bill has been brought into the Viceroy's Council in India to protect, as far as possible, the corrupt Mamlutdars, and at the same time to support Lord Reay's action regarding them in the promise he gave. But holding a candle to the Devil is a difficult and not always a profitable operation, and so we are not surprised to read the following, telegraphed on Friday night from India to the Daily News:

"The Viceroy, speaking on the first reading of the Mamlutdars Indemnity Bill, said that, with every desire to support the Bombay Government, he felt it was impossible to approve of the proposed measure. It was an attempt to legislate with the express purpose of retaining in their offices, and in the discharge of judicial and administrative functions requiring the highest integrity, a number of persons who had become not only legally incapable of serving the State, but had even shown themselves guilty of deliberate and voluntary corruption."

"Eight Mamlutdars have been dismissed with compensation. Several other cases are under consideration. A Bombay telegram says that they threaten to sue the Secretary of State and the Bombay Government for damages."

This is how matters stand at present, and it may be questioned whether Cardinal Wolsey's assurance to Cromwell that "Corruption wins not more than honesty" be altogether correct. In Bombay corruption seems to have had the better of the argument.

THE Rangoon Times says that the completed revenue returns for Upper Burma for 1888-89 show an increase of Rs. 23,29,000 as compared with the revenue of the previous year, which was Rs. 50,16,000. The increase under land revenue was over 5½ lakhs of rupees. This large increase of revenue shows unmistakably that the province is settling down. Cultivation is largely increasing, and Upper Burma is importing little food supply now. In many districts people who left their houses and went to Lower Burma on account of the disturbances of 1886-87 are now returning.

THE abduction of females from Negapatam to Burma for immoral purposes has been going on for some time. Special police measures appear to be necessary to check the evil. The arrest recently of an abducted female on board the steamer Sirsa on the point of sailing to Rangoon has led to numerous arrests at Negapatam, where the delinquents are under trial before the Head Assistant Magistrate.

THE REV. JOHN CRAWFORD, Church of Scotland Chaplain, Meerut, and the Rev. Clement G. Moore, Anglican Chaplain of Meerut, have written jointly to an Indian contemporary with reference to the results of the abolition of the Lock Hospital system in India, in accordance with a snap vote in the House of Commons. They say:—"After a year's trial the issue is that the horrible disease (which the Lock Hospital system was established to check) has increased threefold! Are we, as God-fearing men, to shut our eyes to it, or to face it bravely and boldly? A section of the Christian religious world effected the abolition of the system; we believe that it is the duty, and that the time is ripe, for a far stronger party to come to the front (including most of the senior members of the Medical Staff in India), and to admit at once that, while doing all in our power to call forth self-control and a purer life, we seek the re-establishment of the old system in the name of common-sense, brotherly kindness, and the faith we stand by. In advocating the Lock Hospital system we beg it to be understood that we do so not as encouraging vice, but as preventing a terrible and partially preventible disease." We commend this to the serious attention of the Bishop and clergy of Madras, who have recorded a contrary opinion.

MILITARY INTELLIGENCE.

It is almost settled that when General Adams, Quartermaster-General, Bombay Presidency, goes on furlough shortly Colonel Jopp, Deputy Quartermaster-General, acts for him, and Colonel Hogg, commanding the Poona Horse, whose period of command would expire early next year, officiates for Colonel Jopp.

MAJOR MELLISS has returned to Simla. His visit to Poona has been satisfactory in its results, the Native Chiefs in the Bombay Presidency being anxious to provide a transport corps in connection with the scheme for the defence of the North-West Frontier.

AN Army Circular has been issued inviting the attention of the officers concerned to the regulation under which officers permanently appointed to civil or political employ, and to the Police, Public Works (including Telegraph), or Survey Departments since April 1st, 1884, cease to be borne on the rolls of the regiments, and after ten years' absence from military duty are placed on the supernumerary list.

THE prospects of the senior officers of the old Indian Artillery have been seriously affected by the redistribution of commands in India. There are but few brigades now to be given away, and these officers stand a poor chance of being selected for them, being on the same list, in this matter of promotion to commands, as the officers of the Indian Staff Corps, who naturally far outnumber them. The officers of the Royal Artillery Imperial List, as distinct from the old Indian service, have had their interests well looked after, one brigade in every four being allotted to them. Thus Colonels Budgen and Smart command brigades in Bombay and Madras respectively; and Colonel Pretyman will succeed to the Agra Brigade a few months hence. The Horse Guards insist upon this proportion of Brigade Commands in India being given to officers on the Imperial List qualified to hold them, and promotion has to be made accordingly. The Station Commands which were instituted when the redistribution scheme came into force have been so far reserved entirely for Staff Corps officers, and the Colonels of the Indian Artillery can look for no compensating relief in this direction unless the existing rules are modified. To prove how small are their chances of employment we may quote the case of Brigadier-General T. Graham, C.B., a Colonel of March, 1885, who on relinquishing his command of the Sikkim Field Force reverts to his substantive appointment of Officer Commanding the Artillery at Jutogh, where only two mountain batteries are stationed. There are other officers, full Colonels of several years' standing, who have done good service in the field, but who have now no prospects whatever of future advancement. How this question of finding employment for men whose retirement will be a loss to the Army is to be solved we cannot venture to say; perhaps the present Commander-in-Chief, who himself belongs to the "finest service in the world," the old Bengal Artillery, may be able to suggest some remedy.

ORDERS have been issued by the War Office to supply machine-guns to twelve battalions of infantry on the home establishment, eleven of these being in the 1st Army Corps. Two guns will be sent to each battalion, and presumably they will be of the Maxim pattern. It is to be hoped that the army in India will not be forgotten now that the principle has been adopted of giving machine-guns to infantry instead of entrusting their working to sailors or gunners. These weapons are peculiarly adapted for warfare in which troops in India are likely to be engaged; whether beyond the border or in this country itself, our small but highly-trained forces in the field being usually opposed to large bodies of undisciplined Asiatics. The effect of machine-guns fire against such rabble, using the word in a military sense, would be most effective, particularly where an automatic gun such as the Maxim was in action. In Afghanistan the Gardner gun was used, but it jammed so frequently that it was of no practical value. It thus fell into disrepute both with the artillery detachments in whose hands it was, and with the infantry whose fire it in no way assisted. There can be little doubt that at Charasia, Sherpur, and Kandahar, really good machine-guns handled by infantry would have had a marked effect on the Afghan fighting line; while at Ahmed Khel and Maiwand, where the enemy drove their charges home, such guns would have checked the rush of Ghazis before they could have got to close quarters. The 66th at Maiwand might have made good their retirement, and perhaps even have saved the battle had their fire been augmented by that of two machine-guns in good working order.

THE C. D. Act is not a thing one would wish to write about, but everyone who has to do with soldiers must wish the Government of India good luck in their efforts to introduce some restrictive measures to check the disease that cripples whole regiments. Poor Tommy Atkins! Well may he pray to be saved from his friends. He is forbidded to marry, but expected to be chaste—in fact, to have all the virtues of a monk, while exposed to every sort and kind of temptation. Everyone who is a real friend of the British soldier must applaud the action of the Supreme Government.

THE results of the annual musketry course show an immense improvement all round, and it is clear that both the British and Native Army are shooting with far more precision than has ever been attained before. The personal interest which the Commander-in-Chief has shown in musketry and the preference given to good shooting regiments when expeditions are being organised have had their due effect, and the shooting of both British and Native troops has improved all round. It now only needs a similar advance in fire-discipline to make the army in India one of the most efficient fighting machines in the world, and special measures have been taken to secure the full training of the soldier in this direction. When the next campaign comes to be fought we may expect very different results to be obtained by musketry fire—far from those which were recorded in Afghanistan in 1878-80.

THE recent case in which a British soldier of a regiment in the Bengal Presidency killed his sergeant by stabbing him with his bayonet is worth noting, because of the extreme rarity of such crimes. Since the authorities decided to remove ball ammunition from the men's pouches and to keep it under lock and key, military murders, once so painfully common, have been steadily decreasing. When the question was first mooted there were many who protested against depriving soldiers of their ball cartridges, arguing that it was derogatory to the character of the good soldiers who form the great bulk of the army, to deprive them of their ammunition, because a few black sheep could not be trusted with it. The result has shown the wisdom of the step, and has fully vindicated the action of the authorities. A soldier's side-arms, like an officer's sword, are the distinguishing badge of his profession, and the custom of allowing him to carry ball ammunition in his pouch was obsolete and absurd. It removal has made military murders so rare that, when one does happen, it is quite an event.

CAPTAIN KETTLEWELL will probably be appointed Inspecting Officer of Infantry in the Rajputana States under Major Melliss's scheme.

INDIAN EMIGRATION TO ASSAM.—A despatch from the Government of India to the Secretary of State on the working of the Emigration Act has been published in India. It begins by referring to a previous despatch of the Secretary of State, in which it was agreed that the most judicious course was to leave the Act as it was, so as to prevent the agitation and unsettlement which would be caused by reopening the discussion on the principle of the measure, but to correct by executive action those parts of the law which experience showed required amendment. At the same time Lord Cross desired that the working of the Act of 1882 should be narrowly watched and that a special report on it should be submitted to him in 1889. The Governments of Bengal and Assam have made and maintained inquiries and investigations; but the Government of India think that before a complete revision of the existing law can be attempted with any security, all the defects in the present system should be removed. The despatch then goes on to discuss the subject under four heads, the first two referring to the relations between planters and coolies and the health of the latter on the plantations, and the last two to the prevention of abuses in recruiting and to the provision of sanitary arrangements for the coolies while en route to Assam. The inquiries which have been made and careful reports from the Commissioner of Assam justify the conclusion that the relations between employer and employed and the health of coolies are on the whole satisfactory and are improving. In spite of certain defects, the Act of 1882 has been beneficial to emigrants after their arrival in Assam, and the Government is not prepared to decide in what respect new legislation is requisite. In regard to Bengal, it is admitted that Mr. Tucker's investigations (which will be found summarised in The Times of June 14, under the title "Coolies Kidnapping in Bengal"), showed the Act worked less satisfactorily. The Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal thinks some change is demanded, as the Act was to a large extent frustrated under the system of free emigration. A conference took place between the Bengal and and Assam authorities, with the result that the Bengal Government have made proposals for important changes in the system of recruiting, and strongly recommend measures being taken to prevent sanitary evils which caused outbreaks of cholera amongst the coolies. But the Government of India think that the executive measures already taken by the Bengal Government to prevent sickness and the abuses of recruiting will render unnecessary any partial amendment of the Act until the whole is revised at the end of the appointed period of three years.

MR. W. S. CAINE, M.P., has been good enough, says the Pioneer, to forward us a copy of a paper called Abkari, professedly the organ of the Anglo-Indian Temperance Association, of which Mr. Caine himself is the Secretary. The member for Barrow may therefore be held responsible for some remarks which otherwise we should have been well content to let alone. Some weeks ago it was pointed out in these columns, in reference to a proposal for an excise on Indian beer, that as the chief demand for Indian beer came from the canteen, it was doubtful whether an excise would pay; and he added:—"Formerly Government had to import vast quantities for the use of the British army of occupation, but since the development of Indian breweries the annual importation has dwindled to insignificance.' Mr. Caine apparently thinks that in writing thus we were in ignorance of the fact that the imports of beer into India have greatly increased; but we had no concern with the import into India; our only object was to emphasise the fact that the consumption of Indian beer was mainly a consumption in canteen, and one way of doing so was by pointing to the great decrease in the Government imports for the army. If Mr. Caine will turn to Mr. O'Conor's report on India's foreign trade for 1886-87, he will find it stated that "the import of beer (by Government) has fallen to an insignificant figure, the beer of the country having superseded it in most parts of the country where troops are stationed." This is the reason why a tax on Indian beer would in all probability not pay the cost of collection. Another extraordinary statement Mr. Caine makes is that the brewing of beer in India, "by turning large quantities of wholesome grain into deleterious intoxicants," raises the price of food to the poor considerably. According to this theory the less demand there is for grain, the better for the Indian cultivator; anyone who buys a hundred bushels becomes an oppressor of the poor; and as for the export trade in wheat, it must be an unmitigated calamity. That a member of Parliament who affects to pose as one of the "members for India" should commit himself to nonsense of this sort, is distressing.

DR. SPENCER'S ASTHMA CURE.

MR. D. FITZPATRICK, of Drumcree, Killucan, Westmeath, Ireland, writes:—"Thank God the two bottles of Dr. Spencer's Asthma Cure got from you cured me of the Asthma. I am over sixty years of age, and for the last twenty-five years I have suffered as much from Asthma (I believe) as any other Asthmatic could suffer, often for nights without ever lying on a bed, but I thank the good God I can now sleep as comfortable as I could wish for. I only wish every poor Asthmatic sufferer would give your cure a trial, for it is a great boon."

The public are hereby notified that the above remedy is prepared from a recently improved formula of Dr. Spencer (which has nothing to do with any other formula) and is sold, under his name, by us, who are the sole prorietors, and in no way connected with any other person or firm. We will send our Pamphlet "Asthma, its Treatment and Cure" (Third edition) by E. Edwin Spencer, M.A., M.D., &c., post free, on application

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE

IS THE GREAT SPECIFIC FOR CHOLERA, DYSENTERY.

COUGHS, COLDS, ASTHMA, BRONCHITIS.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE.—Dr. J. C. BROWNE (late Army Medical Staff) DISCOVERED a REMEDY to denote which he coined the word CHLORODYNE. Dr. Browne is the SOLE INVENTOR, and, as the composition of Chlorodyne cannot possibly be discovered by Analysis (organic substances defying elimination), and since the formula has never been published, it is evident that any statement to the effect that a compound is identical with Dr. Browne's Chlorodyne must be false.

This Caution is necessary, as many persons deceive purchasers by false representations.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE.—Vice Chancellor Sir W. PAGE WOOD stated publicly in Court that Dr. J. COLLIS BROWNE was UNDOUBTEDLY the INVENTOR of CHLORODYNE, that the whole story of the defendant Freeman was deliberately untrue, and he regretted to say it had been sworn to.—See The Times, July 13th, 1864.

DIARRHŒA, DYSENTERY. GENERAL BOARD of HEALTH, London, REPORT that it ACTS as a CHARM, one dose generally sufficient. Dr. GIBBON, Army Medical Staff, Calcutta, states: "2 DOSES COMPLETELY CURED ME of DIARRHŒA." From SYMES & Co., Pharmaceutical Chemists, Simla. Jan. 5, 1880. To J. T. DAVENPORT, London. DEAR SIR,—We congratulate you upon the widespread reputation this justly-esteemed medicine has earned for itself all over the East. As a remedy of general utility, we much question whether a better is imported, and we shall be glad to hear of its finding a place in every Anglo-Indian home. The other brands, we are happy to say, are now relegated to the native bazaars and, judging from their sale, we fancy their sojourn there will be but evanescent. We could multiply instances ad infinitum of the extraordinary efficacy of DR. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE in Diarrhœa and Dysentery, Spasms, Cramps, Neuralgia, the Vomiting of Pregnancy, and as a general sedative, that have occurred under our personal observation during many years. In Choleraic Diarrhœa, and even in the more terrible forms of Cholera itself, we have witnessed its surprisingly controlling power.

We have never used any other form of this medicine than Collis Browne's, from a firm conviction that it is decidedly the best, and also from a sense of duty we owe to the profession and the public, as we are of opinion that the substitution of any other than Collis Browne's is a deliberate breach of faith on the part of the chemist to prescriber and patient alike.—We are, Sir, faithfully yours, SYMES & CO., Members of the Pharm. Society of Great Britain, His Excellency the Viceroy's Chemists.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE is the TRUE PALLIATIVE in NEURALGIA, GOUT, CANCER, TOOTHACHE, RHEUMATISM.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE is a liquid medicine which assuages PAIN of EVERY KIND, affords a calm, refreshing sleep WITHOUT HEADACHE, and INVIGORATES the nervous system when exhausted.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE rapidly cuts short all attacks of EPILEPSY, SPASMS, COLIC, PALPITATION, HYSTERIA.

IMPORTANT CAUTION.—The IMMENSE SALE of this REMEDY has given rise to many UNSCRUPULOUS IMITATIONS. Be careful to observe Trade Mark. Of all Chemists, 1s. 1½d., 2s. 9d., and 4s. 6d.

THE BROAD ARROW AND

NAVAL AND MILITARY GAZETTE

EVERY SATURDAY. PRICE SIXPENCE.

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" has acquired a reputation for early and exclusive intelligence as to Appointments and other service News, for the high character of its articles, the independent course of its staff of writers, and for its earnest support of all measures for the good of the Services. Articles on specially interesting subjects appear from week to week written for the most part by officers of rank and experience, or by men of note in literature who have made the Naval and Military affairs of the country their special study. A series of Illustrated Articles is appearing weekly on Regimental Badges and History. Illustrations with descriptions are also given of new Service Inventions.

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" freely opens its correspondence columns to all grades in the Services. By this means an opportunity for interchange of opinion is afforded, such as is offered by no other Service Journal. Its ordinary weekly issue contains fully one-fourth more matter than the other Service Journals, even with their frequent "supplements."

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" circulates largely throughout India and the Colonies. It is supplied direct to the Army and Marine bureaux of the French, Russian, and other Governments, and it is read extensively by Officers of Foreign Services, especially of the German, French, and American Armies, who desire to acquire a true impression of facts and public opinion in England regarding Military affairs.

The Calcutta Review for October reached us a day or two ago, and a glance at its contents shows that the number more than sustains the reputation which this old and favourite publication is again achieving. The Review is rapidly regaining the position which it . . . . there is no fear of the Indian Review, or the Asiatic Quarterly rivalling it in public favour.—Statesman, October 1886.

. . . . The best service which I ever rendered in India, or, indeed, for India, was the establishment, single-handed, of the Calcutta Review, which has done far more for Indian literature than anything I have written under my own name.—J. W. KAYE, Athenæum Club, June 23, 1872.

The Calcutta Review has given us valuable articles on the army. Some from the pen of Sir Henry Lawrence, who wrote with the spirit of prophesy, of the coming storm of which he was one of the noblest victims.—Address of the C.-in-C. at the U.S. Inst. of India.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

MONDAY, SEPTEMBER 30, 1889.

[BY OVERLAND MAIL.]

THE Overland Mail brings us letters and advices from Bombay to the 10th Sept.; from Allahabad and Madras to the 8th Sept.; and from Calcutta to the 8th Sept.

THE Viceroy leaves Simla on Oct. 20th, and will visit the Kohat Pass, Peshawur, Attock, the Gomal Pass, Dehra Ismail Khan, Quetta, the Bolan and Hurnai Passes, Sukkur, and Lahore. Thence he goes direct to Calcutta, where he arrives on Nov. 30th.

THE Viceroy holds a levee at Calcutta on the 10th, and a drawing-room on Dec. 13th.

THE MARQUIS OF LANSDOWNE opened the Simla Fine Arts Exhibition on the 29th ult. The Secretary mentioned that the Society had not been very liberally supported this year, and that unless the Exhibition were assisted by the public it might be found impossible to continue it.

THE Duke of Connaught opened the Soldiers' Industrial Exhibition at Poona on Sept. 3rd, and alluded with satisfaction to the marked improvement in the exhibits this year as compared with last year.

MAJOR GENERAL SIR G. WHITE'S Burma despatch has been published.

CAPTAIN PAKENHAM, Aide-de-Camp to the Viceroy, will most probably meet Prince Albert Victor at Bombay on his arrival.

IT is expected that the Chin Hills force will begin the advance before the end of October.

IT is reported that coal has been discovered at Gundak, twelve miles north of Quetta, and that an 18-inch seam has already beeen worked.

CAPTAIN HEARSEY intends bringing a civil action in the High Court of Calcutta against the proprietor, editor, manager, and printer of the Pioneer, the damages being laid at Rs. 50,000. Nothing can be done till after the Court opens in November.

AT the meeting of the Legislative Council on September 4th the Bill to amend the Administrator-General's and other Acts was referred to a Select Committee, and the Merchandise Marks Amendment Bill was passed. With reference to the latter Bill the Hon. Mr. Scoble stated that the Local Governments would be empowered to delegate the power conferred on them to the chief customs authority or other competent officer, so that no unnecessary delay might take place in dealing with shipments. The Hon. Mr. Hutchins introduced the Bill to amend the India and Burma Forests Acts. The object in amending the existing law, he said, was by no means to increase the burdens or restrictions which had sometimes appeared oppressive, but only to make the intention of the law plain where it had been liable to misinterpretation, and to define, limit and control the powers of forest officers.

THE Mamlatdars' Indemnity Bill will be framed on the lines of the English Act, granting immunity from prosecution to witnesses in election petition cases. It will not save the corrupt officials from discharge from the service, but will simply protect them against prosecution in the Courts.

THE cold weather Legislative sessions will commence a month earlier than usual this year in consequence of the number and importance of the Bills which have to be considered by the Select Committees in Calcutta, the catalogue including the Cantonment, Railway and Leprosy Bills.

THE report of the Committee on the Public Works Account system is now being referred to certain selected officers, whose opinion is desired before action is taken.

THE Government of India is addressing the local Governments on the subject of the recommendations made by Drs. Lethbridge and Walker in their Jail Administration Report.

THE report regarding the Simla allowances has been sent in to Government by Mr. Fanshawe. It is believed that considerable reductions will be made in the travelling allowances of officers drawing Rs. 1,500 per month and upwards.

THE replies to Mr. Fitzpatrick's letter to District Officers and others in Assam regarding coolie emigration are now coming in, so that Mr. Quinton will be able to furnish a report on the subject soon after taking charge of the Province.

THE Viceroy's Levee, which annually marks the commencement of the Calcutta cold weather season, will take place on December 10th, and Lady Lansdowne will hold her Drawing Room on the 13th.

THE Commander-in-Chief, after his frontier tour, will reach Calcutta about January 3rd, and will leave again for Muridki camp on the 17th. He returns to Calcutta early in February, and will then go on six weeks' tour to Assam.

SIR CHARLES ELLIOTT, the Public Works Member, will make an extensive tour in November and December, visiting the Southern Presidency and going over the railway lines there.

MR. SCOBLE, the Legal Member, will probably visit Quetta in November to confer with Sir Robert Sandeman about the new Biluchistan Regulations.

SIR COMER PETHERAM has been reappointed Vice-Chancellor of the Calcutta University.

TWO first class district commands will fall vacant next year—Lucknow and Meerut. Sir John Hudson will probably be transferred from Allahabad to Meerut on Sir George Greaves vacating the latter command.

SURGEON-MAJOR O. BAKER, now at Moulmein, has been appointed by the Viceroy Joint Civil Surgeon of Simla, vice Surgeon-Major Brown.

MR. J. S. PORTER, Magistrate and Collector of Shahjahanpur, at present absent on six months' furlough, is resigning the service shortly.

COLONEL BAILEY, of the Forest Department, who has been lying seriously ill at Chakrata for some weeks, is now on the fair road to recovery.

CAPTAIN LOSACK has been offered the post of Forest Officer in Kashmir.

MAJOR LINDSAY, Commanding No. 7 Mountain Battery, Royal Artillery, died at Quetta on the 1st Sept. of enteric fever.

THE death has occurred in Ceylon of Colonel Atwill Curtois, Madras Cavalry, Examiner in Hindustani and Persian, and Hindustani translator to the Madras Government.

THE Viceroy, whilst appreciating the kindly motives which prompted and the loyal terms in which the people of Rangoon framed their resolution to invite Prince Albert Victor to Burma, regrets that present arrangements will make it impossible to comply with the suggestion. The Viceroy adds that he will not fail to acquaint the Prince with the wishes of the people of Rangoon. It would have afforded him much pleasure had he been able to hold out a hope that the Prince's engagements might admit of his acceding to their wishes.

NOTES.

THE latest news from India and Burma comes by telegrams from Calcutta and Rangoon, dated Sept. 29, but there is little of stirring moment to record. The Governor of Bombay was being entertained at Simla by the Viceroy, and the Commander-in-Chief and Lord Connemara had arrived in Calcutta en route to Darjeeling. The reports which have been circulated in the Indian Press regarding the likely resignation of the Madras Governor are said to be without foundation.

WITH regard to the heavy floods in Lower Bengal the reports from Moorshedabad are more favourable. The river has gone down three feet, and the flood water is rapidly decreasing. There will, it is said, be a considerable loss of cattle, and possibly a fever epidemic may ensue; but every precaution is being taken by the district officers to mitigate the after consequences of the floods. In the Lieutenant-Governor's report to the Viceroy he said he had visited Murshedabad and Mozufferpur. At Murshedabad the embankment had been cut by the villagers in two places, one causing a serious breach above the town 800 feet wide. The Bhagirathi had submerged a large tract, the water being some six feet over the rice-fields. One half of the crops is destroyed. Arrangements for boat service have been completed to supply fodder for the cattle. He had sanctioned agricultural advances for Mozufferpur. The distress in the flooded districts was general and serious, and must be met by an organised system of gratuitous relief. The planters were giving liberally, both in money and relief agency. All over Behar the winter prospects depend on rain in October.

NATIVE sympathy with the corrupt Bombay mamlutdars continues. Hindu public meetings have been held to express sympathy with them. The Times correspondent says:—"The Legal Member of Council's statement as to the illegality of the pledge of the Bombay Government fully supports the views expressed by the protesting Judges of the Bombay High Court. This important question of constitutional law has now been thoroughly argued out and settled. It is to be hoped that this will be the last, as it is the first, attempt by any representative of the British administration in India, however pure his motives, to inflict upon any province the terrible burden of a corrupt and venal judiciary."

FROM Rangoon details are given regarding the Chin Expedition. The main column starts from Kan in the Myittha Valley, 24 miles north of Gunjaw. Haka, the objective point of the column, where it is expected it will meet the Bengal column, is 50 to 70 miles from Kan. The rapids in the Myittha below Kan form a great obstacle to the transport of stores from Kalewa to Kan, but 100 tons have already been transported above the rapids. Great difficulty is likely to be found in provisioning the troops when they advance against the Chins, owing to the extremely difficult nature of the country. Transport depends almost entirely on coolies. The Punjabee coolies recently sent from India for the purpose of road-making during the expedition will, it is feared, be almost useless, owing to the excessively heavy kits supplied to them in India, in ignorance of local requirements. Each kit, which they insist on taking with them, weighs 33 lbs., while it is estimated that the average load for each coolie is 42 lb. Five hundred men have accordingly been retained in Rangoon.

THE following from the Burma correspondent of the Times may be interesting to spectators at home who are desirous of "developing the resources of Upper Burma." It should be borne in mind, however, that it is an individual opinion only, and that the wish may be father to the thought:—"The extremely illiberal policy hitherto prevailing as to the issue of licenses to prospect for minerals in Upper Burma is likely to be modified. The present rules are not sufficiently liberal to encourage prospectors. The licenses now granted confer no exclusive right to prospect, and promise no concessions. The local Government is believed to be willing to concede more favourable terms. If the Government of India wishes to develop the mineral resources of the country it should certainly sanction liberal rules for prospectors, who at present have no assurance of obtaining any return for their outlay or security against the fruits of their labours being appropriated by Government or rival speculators.

THE details of the Viceroy's tour have now been settled. His Excellency, accompanied by Lady Lansdowne, Sir H. M. Durand, Colonel Ardagh, Lord William Beresford, Dr. Fenn, Captains Streatfield, Harbord, and Brasier-Creagh, will leave Simla on 22nd October, and travel viâ Pindi to Kushalgarh. From Pindi Lady Landsdowne, with Captain Brasier-Creagh in attendance, will proceed direct to Peshawur. The Lieut.-Governor will join the Viceroy at Lahore and accompany him to Kohat. After halting for a night at the latter place, the party will ride through the Kohat Pass to Peshawur, where four days will be spent, which will take in a visit to the Khyber. The Commander-in-Chief will join his Excellency at Peshawur on the 29th October, and accompany him on his frontier tour. Lord and Lady Lansdowne will journey by rail to Attock, thence going by boat down the Indus to Kala Bagh on 3rd November, when her Excellency will leave the party for a visit probably to Murree and Lahore, rejoining at Sher Shah Junction on November 15th. The Viceroy meanwhile will proceed to Dehra Ismail Khan, and ride to the mouth of the Gomal Pass. He will afterwards journey to Quetta by the Bolan route, returning by the Hurnai line through Sukkur to Lahore, where he will stay three or four days. Leaving Lahore on the evening of the 27th November, the Viceregal party will travel direct to Calcutta, arriving there on the afternoon of the 30th.

MR. FANSHAWE, it is said, has completed his report on the Simla allowances question, and that it is now being circulated for consideration amongst the heads of departments. There is little doubt that the system of warrants proposed as an alternative has been considered unadvisable, and therefore rejected, and that allowances will be granted according to the classification of the official. This will be divided into three grades—the first drawing over Rs. 500; the second over Rs. 100; and the third under Rs. 100. Families will continue to receive allowances, but at slightly reduced rates. Covenanted civilians drawing salaries over Rs. 1,500 hitherto drew Rs. 400 for the journey. This it is now proposed to reduce to Rs. 246. The new proposals will, it is said, press rather heavily on clerks drawing under Rs. 100, as they will be entitled only to intermediate fares. Mr. Fanshawe's report, on the whole, seems a fair one. The net saving on the double journey is likely to be some Rs. 27,000 if the report is accepted.

IT is to be hoped that the Volunteers in India do not answer altogether to the following description, which we cull from the Pioneer in an article commenting on a certain corps:—"The men can shoot as a rule fairly well, some few among them very well; but as a disciplined body they have failed to acquire a grasp of the few rudiments of drill which are indispensable; they have little enthusiasm or sense of cohesion, and no interest whatever in the professional aspect of their duties; and, finally, they are furnished with no equipment, with nothing, in fact, which can give them a solid, real basis. After several years of increasing effort this result is not very encouraging. The Volunteers themselves, there is reason to believe, hold that certain privileges as to passages to England, exemption from income-tax, and the like, might be granted them. But these are all aspects of the same constraining cause. The truth, in fact, is merely this, that it is a rooted conviction in the heart of the Anglo-Indian that Government ought to do all his soldiering for him; and that he might as well be asked to drive locomotives or write sections for nothing as to learn drill and turn out for an occasional parade without being personally paid for his trouble."

THE unfortunate rupee appears to have fallen into greater disrepute in Turkey than even in India. It has depreciated to ten annas. In consequence of this compensation was applied for on behalf of the Bombay Infantry Guard at the British Consulate at Baghdad. The Government of India has refused the application, giving as a reason the following ruling :—

"No order of a Government touching the exchange value between its own and a foreign currency can possibly have any effect on the actual purchasing power of the foreign currency if it retain its intrinsic value as does the rupee."

This ruling has been characterised in India as a conundrum ; but it must be something less witty and more difficult to the Native Guard at Baghdad, who must purchase their provisions with a coin which now represents about half the amount in Turkish money which it did a year ago.

TANTIA BHIL must have wit as well as wickedness in his disposition. In his defence, already partly reported by telegram, he said he was more sinned against than sinning. He never so much as met a European official, much less deprived him of his clothes ; he never misguided a policeman, nor cut off anybody's nose, except that of an old woman whose son had offended him. If anybody had been murdered he wished it to be remembered that he had "many foster-brothers," and "some of these must have done it." This is "excellent fooling."

(Times Correspondents.)

INDIA.

CALCUTTA, SEPT. 22.

The Bombay Municipality have appointed a committee to prepare an address of welcome to Prince Albert Victor. He will probably be requested later to lay the foundation stone of a leper hospital. Various public fêtes will be held in his honour.

Thirty-five persons have been summarily convicted in connection with the recent Mohurrum religious riots of Hindoos and Mahomedans at Rohtak, and twenty-three have been acquitted. The convicted have appealed to the Chief Court.

The Punjab and Delhi Railway near Lahore has been considerably damaged by floods, and the river-bed portion will probably require reconstruction.

Lord Reay is expected to arrive at Simla as the guest of the Marquis of Lansdowne to-day.

At the last meeting of the Legislative Council at Simla a Bill was introduced to protect the corrupt Bombay Native officials who had given evidence before the Crawford Commission from prosecution. The Legal Member gave a full history of the circumstances which rendered legislation necessary, and explained the existing law applicable to corrupt officials. Mr. Hutchins, C.S.I., in supporting the Bill, said that earlier action would have been taken by the Indian Government but for the fact that the Bombay Government was in direct correspondence with the Secretary of State. His decision was contained in the following telegram to Bombay :—

"August 7.—On further consideration I am of opinion that the case of the mamlutdars must be governed by the spirit of the statute of George III. Consequently the order passed by you must be revised, and the mamlutdars and other officers who are proved to have paid money to obtain their offices or promotion or other official favours must be dismissed altogether from the Government service. Unless the cases fall within the second of two classes into which the incriminated officials are divided in your revenue despatch of May 3, they must be compensated in money for the failure of the Government to fulfil a pledge which it has been found out of the power of the Government to perform. In doubtful cases, the sindekars included, and also as to the question of compensation, consult the Viceroy before deciding whether their case falls within the second of two classes into which the incriminated officials are divided by your revenue despatch of May 3 last."

The Indian Government, Mr. Hutchins continued, concurred in this decision. He stated shortly that the effect is that those who paid money spontaneously cannot be allowed to remain in the service of the State, and that only those can be retained from whom payments were virtually extorted. This Bill indemnifies all against suits and prosecutions, but will not relieve any who made corrupt payments without pressure from other penalties incurred under the statue 49 of George III. It is not considered right that a guarantee against official departmental punishment or loss should be maintained in all cases. The rights and liberties of Her Majesty's subjects must not be left at the mercy of Judges and magistrates who have corruptly purchased their offices and powers. The dismissed men, however, should be given pecuniary compensation for this partial non-fulfilment of the guarantee. Eight officials have already been dismissed, and others will shortly be disposed of who clearly do not fall under the category of persons who paid under great pressure.

The Viceroy, after crediting Lord Reay with all possible good intentions and eulogising in terms of rhetorical courtesy his sincerity of motive, said it appeared, however, to the Secretary of State that there was a point beyond which the desire to redeem the pledge of the Presidential Government ought not to be allowed to go. That point was reached when the question became one of legislating for the express purpose of retaining in office, and in the discharge of judicial administrative functions requiring the highest integrity for their proper performance, persons who had not only become legally incapable of serving the State, but who by their own admission had shown themselves guilty of deliberate and voluntary corruption, and consequently wanting in the qualities most essential to secure for them the confidence of the public. The Secretary of State believed that if the guarantee given in such cases were literally construed, if a law were to be passed with the object of relieving from statutory disability men whose fault could not be regarded as venial, men who were not in any sense victims of extortion, but willing aiders and abettors of corruption, a greater blow would be struck at the purity of the public service by condonation of notorious guilt than by a partial departure from the terms of the bargain into which the Government of Bombay had entered. This solution, though not wholly satisfactory, was probably the best which the conditions of a very delicate and complicated problem permitted.

In the meantime the Bombay Government, acting under the orders of the Government of India, have dismissed a further batch of eight mamlutdars, belonging to the Central Division. A Poona telegram states that the dismissed magistrates will sue personally Lord Reay and other members of the Council —namely, the Duke of Connaught, Mr. J. B. Richey, C.S.I., and Mr. J. R. Naylor—and Lord Cross. This class has latterly been so petted and pampered that it finds it almost impossible to realise the fact that the Secretary of State is determined to compel purity of administration, even at the eleventh hour, by purging the public service of corrupt officials, notwithstanding the opposition of the Bombay Government. Had Lord Reay in the first instance consulted his law advisers it is impossible to believe that the illegal and ill-judged pledge of the immunity of the magisterial office would ever have been given. British administration in Bombay might then have been saved from the very serious public discredit with which it is now unfortunately regarded.

Copies of the resolutions passed by the Parsees at their meeting to protest against Mr. Ommaney's wholesale indictment have been forwarded to the Secretary of State.

A largely-attended public meeting was held at Bombay on Wednesday to protest against the Sunday mail. The Chief Justice presided. The speakers pointed out that the proposed change would revolutionise the existing business customs, and would not only destroy the Saturday half-holiday, but would force business men to convert Sunday into an ordinary working day. All sections, equally with the Christian community, condemned the proposed change as inflicting an unjustifiable burden upon Bombay. Various resolutions were framed and supported by numerous speakers of different nationalities and creeds. The Government of India have sent home a despatch supporting the opposition.

The Leper Bill is postponed for further reports.

The Tripati case is still exciting great religious interest in Madras. All the jewels have been successfully recovered from under the sacred flagstaff. On the tower being opened there was discovered a thin layer of gold on the top ; the rest of the contents was of copper. Four-fifths of the famous temple-treasure have apparently been stolen. The chief priest in his turn has now applied for warrants against four dismssed temple servants, charging them with the theft of this treasure, amounting to 17,000 rupees. The Viceroy and Lord Connemara refused to interfere, as the case was being judicially investigated.

The special officer appointed to report upon the scheme for instituting technical education in Bengal, the Maharajah of Puttiala, has been invested by Government with full powers. The Government Council has therefore been abolished.

is stated that some little friction exists among certain members of the Executive Council. One member drew up a minute against the Village Sanitation Bill in charge of Sir Raymond West, as neither the vested officers nor the High Court nor the Commissioner in Scinde had been consulted. Sir Raymond West is alleged to have retorted by drawing up a minute against proceeding with the Salt Bill in charge of his colleague. At the last moment it was found necessary to postpone the Council indefinitely. Executive and legislative matters do not appear to run altogether quite smoothly in Bombay at the present time.

BURMA.

(FROM A "TIMES" CORRESPONDENT.)

RANGOON, SEPT. 22.

The Mandalay Herald announces that the southern portion of the Katha district of Upper Burma is much disturbed by dacoits, who are plundering the villages. Since the cessation of the rainfall some renewed dacoity in the districts adjoining the territory of the Wuntho Tsawbwa has occurred. Dacoit bands have raided into British territory from Wuntho, and attacked villages. In one case the villagers beat them off; in others the dacoits succeeded in looting the villages, and retreated with their plunder to Wuntho territory. Some reached Katha, and these are the dacoits referred to by the Mandalay Herald. The local government have taken rigorous measures to crush these gangs before they make headway or extend their depredations. A force, consisting of Sepoys, military police, and Karen scouts, has been sent in pursuit. Mr. MacDonnell has despatched Major Graves, officiating Inspector-General of Police, to Mandalay to hold a conference with the General Commanding, Colonel Strover, Commissioner for the northern division, and Mr. Donald M. Smeaton, Commissioner for the central division, to arrange a concerted plan for surrounding and crushing these bands. The facility with which dacoit bands find refuge in Wuntho has caused not a little embarrassment to the local government. Until the Chins have been thoroughly dealt with and the Moo Valley Railway extended to North Wuntho, it is desirable for many reasons to avoid extreme measures against the Tsawbwa. Northward of his territory, extending to the Chinese frontier, lies a wild and unknown country. If the Tsawbwa now retreated to that district he might give great and prolonged trouble. A communication, however, has been sent to the Wuntho Tsawba plainly intimating that he must take immediate steps to maintain order in his territory, and prevent the recurrence of dacoit raids. The Tsawbwa has been requested to establish a chain of police posts along his border.

General Gordon, C.B., commanding in Burma, is busily engaged in collecting stores and transport animals for the Chin expedition, which will probably be on a more extended scale than was originally anticipated. Seven hundred tons of stores have been sent to Myingyan, whence they are being rapidly forwarded in Government steamers to Kalewa, on the Chindwin, and from there are sent, partly by boats, partly by coolies, under a strong escort. Three thousand coolies accompany the expedition—1,000 Punjabee coolies to make roads, and 2,000 Assam coolies to carry stores. Brigadier-General Symons and his staff are at Kalewa. As it was ascertained that the Chins intended attempting a counter-stroke by raiding on a great scale into the Kale and Myintha valleys, troops and the Kabo Valley Battalion of military police will occupy a number of positions which, it is believed, will effectually prevent any raid into British territory.

The Chin tribes can bring considerable numbers of men into the field. The following is a rough estimate of their force:—Tashon tribe, 10,000 fighting men, with as many guns; Sujins, 2,500 men, 900 guns; Kanhows, 2,500 men, 1,500 guns; and Hakas, 2,000 men, 1,400 guns. There are other minor tribes. The Chins may give considerable trouble, as their country is most difficult, and in many parts impassable even for pack animals.

An inquiry into the case of the tattooed woman at Mandalay has resulted in the district supurintendent of police charged with the outrage being substantially acquitted. Both Sir Charles Crosthwaite and Mr. MacDonnell concur in this decision.

During the past week there has been steady rain, and crop prospects have considerably improved.

The local Government issued an order some months ago declaring that after the 31st of March, 1890, peacock rupees coined under the Burmese kings would no longer be received by Government. It is estimated that over a million of these coins are still in circulation, mostly held by the peasantry in the remoter districts, where they are practically the only circulating medium. If the period for calling them in is not considerably extended great discontent is likely to result in the various districts. The reason for hurry in calling in Burmese coins is not apparent, as the bullion value of English and Burmese rupees is almost identical.

ANGLO-INDIAN PRESS.

THE MORAL TEXT-BOOK EXPEDIENT.

(Times of India.)

Last year the Government of India issued a Resolution on Education, which, as we stated at the time, read as if it were written by a pious dominie who had the narrowest views of one of the widest, most difficult, and most important topics of the day. Connected with the Secretariat of the Government of India, there is evidently a gentleman endowed with an infinite capacity for latitudes, for we now have another Minute issued to the world, which is as liberally garnished with them as the Education Minute published last year, and the Moral and Discipline Minute which at the time created so much amusement. "The Government of India are of opinion that the influence of the teacher may be greatly strengthened, and the interest of morality promoted by the use in schools of text-books having a direct bearing in conduct either by means of precept or example." The Syndicate of the Calcutta University has engaged Mr. Tawney to prepare a book of selection for the use of candidates for Matriculation. It is easy to imagine that a certain small amount of good might be done by gently persuading a boy to read a book which is to "consist of extracts having a direct bearing on conduct either by way of precept or example," but to compel him to cram this work for an examination must lead him for the remainder of his life to loathe all the examples. The Government of India hope that "each local Government and Administration will follow the example of the Calcutta University, and either by the appointment of a Committee or by employing selected individuals who need not necessarily be officials, or by the offer of suitable prizes, effect a revision of the existing readers in the direction indicated above, or, where necessary, procure for use in schools an entirely new set of books compiled on these principles. His Excellency in Council will be glad to learn from time to time the progress made in each province in this undertaking. But local Governments and Administrations need not put themselves to any such trouble. The work has been done for them. Australia has its Tawney. Mr. William Thomas Pyke has produced a work on "Conduct and Duty," which we are told is "A Treasure Book of Intellectual, Physical, Social and Moral Advice selected from the Teachings of Thinkers and Writers of all Times and Countries." What effect "Conduct on Duty" has had on the youth of Australia we know not. The fallacy that a moral text-book can have any abiding influence on the young like many other fallacies dies hard. Moral text-books to teach the fundamental principles of natural religion have been tried in France, and proved a failure. Paul Bert wrote one intended to make every Frenchman a good citizen. A moral text-book was introduced into the schools in Ireland, but after a time its use was abandoned. As Sir Raymond West said in his able and learned Minute on Education laid before the Education Commission, "Morality in the abstract is about as effective as grammar in the abstract." He pointed out that "the dissoluteness which ensued on a disordered confluence of creeds and customs has been noticed and deplored by historians from Plato to Lecky. Failing some sudden rapture of conversion, it is the secular teacher alone," he wrote, "who, armed with a science unknown to earlier times, can prevent the inevitable revolution from being morally destructive. It is his function to show how on simple natural principles the present is the necessary outgrowth of the past; that the old morality was the parent of the new; that Time, which innovates greatly, but gently links us alike to the past and the future, in a ceaseless process of evolution. Here there is no violent disruption, no breaking down of the old structure, but rather a union with it of the new; a feeling of the organic continuity of human existence is produced which leads to tranquillity, and shuts out contempt by intense personal interest in the whole history of the race. Definite instruction in duty must rest on this foundation, or an admitted dogmatic foundation, to have any influence at all. The dogmatic foundation is not one on which a Government can build, nor are mere principles of moral conduct learned by heart of any great efficacy in producing good behaviour." Mr. Wordsworth, when before the Education Commission, refused to enter into discussion with "those persons who are sanguine enough to believe that dissertations or exhortations on what is called natural theology might have a good moral effect in our colleges." He rightly considered that the discipline of school and college life lends, or ought to lend, a powerful support to habits of industry, truthfulness, courtesy, and temperance. "The example of teachers," he stated, "may be and ought to be, a most powerful and permanent influence for good." The Government of India seem to recognise this fact, for they state that "the careful selection and training of teachers provide the most effectual method of establishing a good moral tone in a school," and the suggestions made regarding the teaching staff of schools are eminently sensible and practical.

TRANSFER OF ADMINISTRATIVE AUTHORITY IN KASHMIR.

(Madras Mail.)

The Maharajah of Kashmir may congratulate himself that he does not live in the days of the Marquis of Dalhousie. Five-and-thirty years ago the Government of India would have had no hesitation about dethroning a feudatory who had surrounded himself with persons of the worst reputation, emptied the exchequer by his extravagance, caused corruption to prevail in every department, and proved himself unfit to discharge the duties of Sovereignty. But the times have changed, and the Paramount Power can now afford to be patient and forbearing. The letter from the Marquis of Lansdowne to the Maharajah, while it means that the Government of India is determined not to tolerate disorder in a frontier or any other State in Hindostan, it shows that his Highness has access to a place of repentance, and that if he will turn over a new leaf, and prove himself worthy of being re-entrusted with authority over the people of Kashmir, a larger share in the control of the affairs of that State will be gradually restored to him. But he is now "relieved of an active share" in the administration. He was warned more than once by the late Viceroy of what would befall him if he persisted in neglecting his duty to his people, and forgetting his obligations to the Paramount Power; but he refused to mend his ways, and the continued misgovernment of the State thus became every day a more serious source of anxiety to the Government of India. Eventually he grew weary of the reprimands addressed to him, and asked to be relieved by the appointment of a Council of State, which was to include an English member, and which was to have "full and sole powers in all the public Departments of the State for a period of five years," during which it was provided that "the Maharajah will not interfere, and will have no voice in the administration of the public affairs of the State, but he will continue to enjoy the honorary rights and position of Maharajah." The Government of India considered it would be better not to allow an Englishman to serve upon the Council, but accepted the Maharajah's proposal, with the exception that the arrangement should continue not for five years only, but for a time of which the length was not specified. The Maharajah now wishes to resume the administration, but he has been informed by the Viceroy "that Her Majesty's Government fully approves the measures taken by the Government of India in April last, and shares its conviction that in the interests of the people of Kashmir, and of the ruling family itself, it has become impossible to leave the control of affairs in your Highness's hands." The Maharajah has, in strong language, protested against what he calls the successful conspiracy against himself; but the Viceroy in a few words proves that there was no such conspiracy, and his Excellency entreats him earnestly "to show to the people of Kashmir, as well as to the Government of India, by bearing in a dignified manner the loss of power which you have sustained, and, above all, by not associating yourself with local intrigues and conspiracies, or attempts to obstruct the Government, that you have not entirely lost the qualities of a wise and prudent ruler." Should he disregard these words of advice and warning, his deposition will be forced upon the Government of India. Maharajahs have rights, but so also have their subjects; and when, in the year 1846, Ghulab Singh (a Sikh trooper, who had been presented by Runjit Singh with the Principality of Jammu) rendered the British important service at the battle of Sobraon, and was confirmed by the British Government in possession of Jammu which he had hitherto held as a feudatory of the Sikhs, and was conceded the contiguous province of Kashmir, it was understood that he and his descendants would govern the State thus created in accordance with the wishes of the British Government. That Government gave, and that Government can take away; but there is no indication in Lord Landsdowne's letter of any desire to surmount the difficulties and anxieties in Kashmir by the application of the principle of annexation, or the doctrine of "lapse."

READY MONEY FOR DEBTS OF HONOUR.

(Bombay Gazette.)

The first of the month is a very important day in India. On it men receive a certain number of depreciated silver rupees and pay away to their landlords, servants, and other grasping creditors more or less of what falls to their share. Sometimes there is not enough to meet their requirements, and then there is trouble. Those whose receipts are four or five times as great as their expenditure have been heard to say that there are only twelve days in the year worth having; and in Bengal pay-day has actually been canonised, and is known as St. Tullub's day, tullub in that Presidency being the equivalent of what we here call puggar. In an ordinary mofussil station with the first of the month pecuniary transactions are at an end, and all obligations are shelved till next settling-day, a month hence. To a stranger fresh from the shady side of Pall-mall it seems very remarkable that we can go into our club or gymkhana and call for refreshment of any kind, from a peg to a dinner, and not pay for it down on the nail, as he would do in his haunts in St. James's-street. The fact that the currency of the country is in silver has really not much to do with the system in vogue in India of living on credit from month's end to month's end; for it is no more inconvenient to carry about notes here than gold at home, five rupees or under being no more than an equivalent in weight of the amount of silver a man would have on his person in London. It is a custom of the country, and that is about all that can be said in explanation of its existence. It is very convenient in many ways, no doubt, not to have to worry about Iago's injunction to "put money in thy purse" whenever we go out, and to be able to refresh the inner man after tennis, polo, or rowing, or even without any such excuse. Whether we are possessed of the needful or not has, no doubt, certain advantages. It may, perhaps, lead to a larger consumption of the cup that cheers than would probably be the case if cash payments were insisted on, for gymkhana messing bills have a wonderful way of adding themselves up. Can no club try the experiment of allowing cash payments, and seeing how it works? But the system of monthly payments is productive of one really grave and serious evil. In a London club all gambling debts are settled either at the time of payment, or if not then at latest by the evening of the next day before play is recommenced. This is the understood custom as regards debts contracted either at the card or billiard table, and no one would venture to ignore it. But in this country for gambling debts, as for pretty well everything else, a current account is allowed to run on till the first of the month, when losings are supposed to have the first claim on the pay of the impecunious subaltern. Now, if all winnings and losings had to be settled day by day, a man who found that his little all had vanished by the 10th of the month would as a general rule refrain from playing till his next month's pay had actually come in; for even subalterns do not as a rule rush to the Sowkar for money with which to gamble. But when they have incurred a debt of honour which they cannot satisfy, that is the course which they are driven to adopt; and under the existing system this is constantly happening. By the middle of the month a youngster finds that his account is going against him. Instead of paying up and sitting tight till he is in a position to try to recoup his losses, he at once proceeds to plunge, hoping by some desperate luck to restore his financial equilibrium before settling-day. The first of the month comes in due course, and finds the victim of a run of ill-luck in the unenviable position of paying more than his monthly pay in debts of honour before he can begin to satisfy any more legitimate claims. Requisition is had to the confiding Bunnia, and the last state of that player is worse than the first. He either goes on and on getting deeper into the quagmire until Her Majesty graciously consents to accept his resignation, or else he has to undergo very considerable hardships and deprivations, perhaps for years, to retrieve his position. The number of men in India who have been ruined by a hopeless attempt to get back the month that was lost is legion. Considering the incomes in India, the stakes are not light; rupee points at whist and a gold mohur on the rub being not uncommonly the standard. Many young officers would owe a lasting debt of gratitude to the authorities if they would exert their influence to insist upon all gambling debts, at all events in military messes, and if possible in clubs also, being settled day by day. Having to pay ready-money, as Archbishop Whately observed, has a restraining influence on the imagination.

LORD WOLSELEY AS COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF IN INDIA.

(Civil and Military Gazette.)

The rumour which has been current in Simla, to the effect that Lord Wolseley will succeed Sir Frederick Roberts as Commander-in-Chief in India, is by no means new. There is only one reason that we can think of why Lord Wolseley should ask for or accept the position. As a soldier he is senior to Sir Frederick Roberts, and to follow the latter as Commander-in-Chief might not coincide with the English Adjutant-General's ideas of the fitness of things. As to his suitability there can be no question; for Lord Wolseley is so many-sided a man, and his experiences have been of so varied an order, that most military positions are to him alike. There can be little doubt, we think, that Lord Wolseley is endeavouring, and not without some measure of success, to follow, so far as may be, in the footsteps of the Duke of Wellington, and a little historical study would show that there is much that is identical in the careers of the two men—modern conditions being, of course, allowed for. Both have led foreign expeditions, and both have done so with unvarying success. Both have received grants of money from a grateful country, and both have not only been elevated to, but advanced, in the peerage. And finally both have taken—or shall we say in Lord Wolseley's case have endeavoured to take—a prominent part in politics. There are greater improbabilities in the future than a Wolseley Administration. But in one small matter Lord Wolseley must learn the wisdom of the wise old saw festina lente. To take one instance out of many, an intemperate zeal for temperance which leads him to publicly assert that the only way to make the British army "moral and good" is by the absolute prohibition of all drink, would, if carried suddenly into practice, do considerable harm.

SIMLA ALLOWANCES.

(Bengalee.)

A Committee under the presidentship of Mr. Fanshawe is now sitting at Simla to record the evidence of Secretariat clerks who are to be shorn of their allowances. Mr. Fanshawe has begun with travelling allowances, and it is not known whether the pruning knife will be applied to other allowances, such as maintenance and house-rent. As it is, the minds of the poor clerks have been greatly agitated at the prospect of the contemplated change. It is a well-known fact that these clerks perform very important and confidential duties, and the Government should carefully consider the question of reducing their emoluments. For ourselves, we cannot believe that any material reduction of expense is possible by taking away a few hundred rupees from the pockets of the not very liberally paid clerks. If the Government are at all bent upon reduction, there are many other items which are susceptible of clipping and cutting. Mark what Mr. Justice Cunningham said: "I think," said he, "that we ought to bring to the notice of the Government, as a possible means of economy, the question of a reduction of the salaries of European officials during their employment in Simla." The reasons which he urged were that the movement to Simla is for the "health, convenience, and gratification of the high officials," that their expenses become comparatively less than in the plains, and that they enjoy a European climate. Cannot the Government limit their stay at Simla to six months or less?

AN EPISTOLARY CURIOSITY.

A correspondent sends the Pioneer the following curious epistle addressed to a Government official:—

"SIR,—With due respect and humble submission we the zemindars and land proprietors of the village —— beg to bring it to your kind consideration that we have been inhabiting the village for generations, possessing lands of our own and paying the Government revenue, punctually and honestly.

"Our forefathers had from the very time of their settling in the village called certain lower and menial classes of poor people to inhabit the village, and settled them on their own lands in order that they might perform the menial services and do the work of husbandry. Besides this we used to give lands to those our suppliant tenants to till it for themselves, and pay the rent to us, so that they have been acting both as cultivators and farmers. In short we depend upon them for the cultivation and tillage of our land as well as for other works of private labour and hardihood/ which they are bound to perform by the laws of tenancy. By the same laws they do homage to us, bow submissively to our just demands, and meet our timely, urgent requirements. In return for these services, for which they are paid afterwards, we have given them certain privileges which they enjoy independently, and pass their lives happily; but they, too, depend upon us in as much the same way as we do on them, so that the one needs the other the most. Speaking rightly, we owe our landlordships to these humble poor peasants of lower class. They are like the hands, feet, and senses, and we like the belly, which though by itself does not do any labour to get food, and is fed simply through the exertion of hands, feet, and senses, yet all their nourishment, growth, and thriving depend on its supply/ And supposing if they conspire against the idle belly, and strike work to starve it, they in return find themselves weak and fading day by day with it; and thus the whole body is wasted and destroyed.

"Now, having proved at length the right of the land proprietor towards his subject tenants, and the duties of these tenants towards him, we beg to conclude that a land proprietor owes all his existence and superiority to his hereditary tenants, who in return owe their subsistence, protection, safety, strength, and growth to their land proprietor. Such has been the case with us for generations. No ill-feelings ever existed between us. But of late the general peace which has hitherto been preserved by the observance of the old law has been disturbed by the encroachment and usurpation of ——, and who has won over to his side our subject peasants and hereditary tenants by entertaining ill-feelings towards us, which we cannot prove, even if we try to do so. He has infused their minds to disregard the bonds of affinity and subjection. We beg to request you not to look upon our this last statement as a complaint against his personal aggrandisement, but as a submissive statement of our grievances, which we wish to be redressed. . . . We therefore humbly beg to solicit the favour of your kindly making inquiries after the matter to verify our statement, and to revert our subject peasants under our yoke as before/—We have the honour to be your most obedient servants,

"THE LUMBARDARS AND LAND PROPRIETORS OF ——."

BY-PATHS OF INDIAN LIFE.

REFORMATORY LADS.

(Times of India.)

On the opposite side of the road to Alipore Jail, Calcutta, is situated the Reformatory, an institution which well repays a visit. It has now been ten years in existence, and an inspection of the premises and the workshops will convince everyone of the invaluable work it is accomplishing. As I entered the gateway in company with Mr. Larymore, superintendent of the jail, who is also Vice-President of the Reformatory, and Mr. Kirschner, superintendent of the Reformatory, it was explained to me how difficult an operation it had been to bring native magistrates to understand the real mission of such an establishment. For long they hopelessly confounded imprisonment in a jail with imprisonment in a reformatory, and often passed alternative punishments, giving the youthful culprit or his guardians the option of so many months in the former institution or a longer period in the latter. Further, they were in the habit of sending boys to the Reformatory for one, two, or three years—short periods in which it is impossible to impart the training that is necessary in the case. Thus a boy came into the establishment at eleven years of age and was dismissed at thirteen—a proceeding utterly ridiculous on the face of it. The lads should almost invariably remain in the Reformatory up to the age limit of eighteen; thus the magistrate's order in the case of a boy of eleven should be seven years, and of a lad of twelve six years. Happily this principle is beginning to be grasped by the native magistrates, and as the general rule now is for a Reformatory lad to be "caught" young, kept under disciplinary training till he is of a mature age, and meanwhile thoroughly taught a good and remunerative trade, the institution promises to achieve still greater success in the future.

The boys leave their cubicles in summer at 4.30 A.M., and in the cold weather at 5.40 A.M. The first duty of each is to make up his bedding and clean his cell. They are then paraded, and receive their morning meal of parched rice. They are next divided into gangs to clean the wards and the premises inside and outside the enclosure, the gardens being also attended to. From seven to eight school is held, and thereafter the lads work at their respective trades till 10 A.M. Bathing and breakfast follow, and work is resumed till 2 P.M. Then comes an hour of play and relaxation, after which the lads again work till 5 P.M. The shops are next tidied up for the day, and the boys wash themselves preparatory to the evening meal. School is held from 6 P.M. to 8 P.M., attendance during these hours, however, being optional, though all are locked up in the building. At eight the boys retire to their cubicles.

Each lad has a separate sleeping apartment, or, to speak more correctly, compartment. These open off on each side of a long, narrow passage, and when the doors are closed the boys are completely isolated, and can hold no communication with each other. The locking-up is effected by a most ingenious arrangement. Twenty-seven doors are secured by turning a single lever, which fixes an iron hook into a strong staple on each door. There are 108 cubicles, so that four levers suffice to fasten the whole double row of doors. It is obvious that in the case of fire this would be a great safeguard against fatalities. To unlock 108 individual doors along a narrow passage would, under such circumstances, be almost impossible. By the arrangement adopted every cubicle can be thrown open in a moment by two men standing one at each end of the passage. At one end of the building a number of double-sized cubicles are allotted for hospital purposes. The whole place struck me as being a marvel of neatness and cleanliness.

In a long verandah outside I saw the boys at their mid-day meal. They were having good good white rice with dal soup, and there was no stinting of the amount supplied. Bright, intelligent lads they nearly all looked, well-fed and healthy, and evidently thoroughly happy in their home. No more delightful surroundings could be imagined for such boys. Looking from the verandah, I saw, shaded by trees, a beautiful tank in which the lads are taught to swim. The surrounding grounds might have been the pleasure garden of a Raja. The range of workshops occupying one side of the enclosure constitutes a handsome building, well lighted and ventilated. The work is varied and interesting, and beautiful machinery helps towards its accomplishment. As we have seen, abundance of good food is supplied and a comfortable place to sleep is provided. The boys can also earn a little money by the system of good conduct marks, and, lastly, they have every facility afforded them for acquiring a good education. In their daily life and surroundings, I reflected, what a contrast to the vice and squalor from which they have been rescued.

When work had been resumed we made a round of the shops. It is not too much to say that I was fairly astounded at the skill displayed by the boys, some of them little mites whom few would have deemed capable of constructing anything more elaborate than a mud-pie. But with patient instruction it is wonderful what excellent work they can produce. I saw tables, desks, chairs, almirahs, &c., that would have done credit to any cabinet-maker's shop in Calcutta. Some boys showed great proficiency in turning wood by lathes. The cane work, also, was beautiful in design and finish. In the tinsmith department uniform helmet cases, despatch and cash boxes, watering pans and tin pots, and a host of other articles were being turned out, the excellence of finish and solidity of construction being undeniable. Blacksmith work of many kinds was likewise in progress. There were also bookbinding and printing operations going on, all in the most intelligent manner. It should be added that the machinery throughout the range of buildings is driven by a gas engine, which does the necessary work almost noiselessly and very economically. A truly marvellous hive of industry, must be the verdict of every visitor to the Alipore Reformatory workshops.

The less intelligent boys, who on trial are found to show no aptitude for artificer's work, are employed in the gardens. This place fulfils a double end, producing all the vegetables required for the establishment (besides a surplus which finds a ready sale outside), and enabling dull lads to be taught a useful and interesting trade.

As we sauntered from the workshops I asked my companions as to the future of these boys. The answer was just as I expected—the same I had received in every place of confinement I had visited throughout India. In too many cases, the boys, having mastered a trade, return to their homes, straightway forget everything they have learned, and drop into their family pursuits of petty shopkeeping, cultivating the soil, and so on. It is almost incredible that a skilled cabinet-maker, for example, who could earn a large wage should lapse into such pursuits, and, without an effort to better himself, allow all his training to go for naught. Yet such is the case both as regards discharged prisoners and discharged Reformatory boys. I have known an instance of a man who in a jail in the Bombay Presidency had acquired rare skill in the weaving of rich and costly carpets; a week after his discharge I heard of him working up to his waist in mud in a paddy-field. This is undoubtedly one of the most disappointing circumstances attending the teaching of handicrafts in Indian prisons and reformatories.

For the latter class of institution a remedy could easily be found. As Mr. Kirschner explained to me, the lads on their discharge find it most difficult to find work. Many of them would prefer to stay in the institution, and follow their pursuits as heretofore. But, when free, when the last of their small store of rupees is expended, and when they can find no work in their special trade, what are they to do? They naturally turn to the pursuits of their families; or, worse still—and this is too often the case—they despair of finding honest work, take to pilfering, and speedily find themselves in jail. The remedy would be the founding of an auxiliary workshop for discharged Reformatory lads. They would live under no restraints, would be free as the ordinary artificers of the bazaar, but the place would be under disciplinary rules and careful supervision. There would be a market, I was assured, for any amount of articles thay turned out, their workmanship, acquired under European guidance, being so superior to that of the average Native artificer. Here, surely, is a field for philanthropy. What incalculable good might not be effected by a gift devoted to so useful and noble a purpose—the safeguarding of well-trained youths from crime and their gradual settlement among the general community as honest, respectable, and wage-earning citizens.

However, there are exceptions to every rule, and some of the boys do persevere in the pursuit of the trade which they have been taught in the institution. The careers of ex-Reformatory boys are watched, as far as possible, and cases are on record of their doing well as carpenters, blacksmiths, tinsmiths, gardeners, and in other capacities. One pleasing story was told to me. A boy, who had become a skilful carpenter, was discharged, and some years after he paid a visit to the Reformatory to pay his respects to the superintendent. He told how he was holding a good situation in the Allahabad Railway Yard, and, being on a visit to his relatives in Calcutta, felt impelled to visit the place where he had received his youthful training. Here was a case similar to the Englishman's never effaced love for his old school. It would be well if this fine trait of character could be more widely developed among the Natives of India.

The Alipore Reformatory is at present quite indequate to the demands made on its accommodation. It has room for 108 inmates, but there are always others who should be within its walls, but have, perforce, to be sent to prison instead. Another range of cubicles, however, is being built over the present one, which will exactly double the accommodation. This will necessitate extra workshops, which are also in course of construction. A still wider sphere of usefulness is, therefore, opening up for the institution. I was told that Assam, the North-Western Provinces, and Burma are all contemplating the establishment of Reformatories. If they give effect to their proposals, no better model can be taken for the whole of India than the excellently-managed establishment at Alipore.

BENGAL.

(Sept. 8.)

THE directors of the private Homœopathic School in Calcutta contemplate shortly applying to the Government of India to recognise the diploma conferred on the pupils who pass the final examinations of the school.

CINCHONA did well at Darjeeling last year notwithstanding the fact that a severe hailstorm destroyed thousands of young plants in the nurseries, and injured even the larger trees. There was an increase in the number of trees of all sorts on the plantations, the total number being 4,810,231, two-thirds of which are pure quinine yielders. Last year's crop of bark was the largest ever harvested, amounting to 373,100lbs., nearly the whole of which was made over to the febrifuge factory, the produce amounting to 2,191lbs. of sulphate of quinine, and 6,384lbs. of cinchona febrifuge. There was a falling off, it seems, in the quantity sold to the medical depots at Bombay and Madras, and also to Government officers and to the public. This decrease is attributed to the cheapness of quinine in the market, owing to large supplies of bark furnished from Ceylon, where many thousands of trees have been cut down to make room for more tea cultivation.

"HUMANITY" writes to a Calcutta paper:—"I trust that you will allow me to direct attention to a case which is certainly deserving of the attention of the authorities. The belief in witchcraft, as is well-known, is almost universal among the poor rural population of India. Every now and then the public is painfully reminded of the fact by some cruel outrage. But for one case of the kind that comes to light, a score are never heard of. The case of which I have just heard is a typical one. As yet no outrage has been committed, but the unfortunate family upon whom ignorant prejudice has given judgment are being subjected to an inhuman system of persecution. They are not only boycotted, but they are ill-treated in all sorts of ways, and the villagers regard it as an act of virtue to rob them whenever they get a chance. And what is their offence? The alleged witchcraft of a harmless old widow! This woman lives with three brothers, who have hitherto stuck to her in the face of the evil report which is so terrible in its consequences. The woman is blamed for all the deaths and sickness that occur in the village. A man fell ill after talking to the woman; sure proof that she is a witch. Another man who had dealings with the family is now sore stricken in his daughter-in-law. Could anything be more conclusive? And now the wretched family, after being harassed and harried by the village, are on the eve of being driven forth homeless into the world. The scene of this village tragedy is a village named Pachadahee Proshooram, two miles south of Silout station, in the district of Mozufferpore."

H.E. THE GOVERNOR left Ooty on Thursday afternoon and arrived at Trichinopoly yesterday morning, where he received a municipal address. Replying, his Excellency dwelt on the necessity for municipalities devoting themselves to practical projects rather than wasting their time in personal squabbles, towards which he observed a tendency in India as well as in England.

AFTER alluding to the proposed water scheme for Trichinopoly H.E. referred to the Ganjan famine. Affairs, he said, were improving very rapidly. He deprecated any special praise for his having gone there in hot weather, as it only formed a part of his duty. He eulogised Mr. Horsfall's services in connection with the famine.

ALLUDING to the coming Royal visit his Excellency said he had no doubt Trichinopoly would accord such a welcome as was due to a member of the Royal Family.

H.E. THE GOVERNOR went to Negapatam in the afternoon.

MR. GALTON, Revenue Secretary, is going on leave this month, causing temporary promotions of several higher officials.

THE Bombay Legislative Council met at Poona on Saturday, when the Bombay Village Sanitation Bill, on the motion of Sir Raymond West, and the Sind Salt Revenue Bill, on the motion of the Hon. C. D. Pritchard, were read a second time. The council meets at Poona again next Saturday afternoon, when amendments on several sections of the Salt Bill will be proposed and discussed.

THE Bombay Cotton Trade Association met yesterday afternoon and discussed the question of increasing the number of cotton contracts now being made on the so-called "railway delivery terms," and what steps should be taken regarding it. It was resolved on the motion of Mr. Forrest that the practice of advancing money on railway receipts in the present state of the law was most unadvisable; but as it appeared impossible to alter at present the custom of buying produce from the North-West, the Association should signify its approval of the Chamber of Commerce having requested Government to legislate for the purpose of rendering railway receipts negotiable instruments carrying a title to property similar to bills of lading. The secretary was also requested to prepare a representation to Government in support of the proposals of the Chamber of Commerce.

WE (Morning Post) understand that the local Government have accepted the tender of Messrs. THE meeting of the shareholders of the Egerton Mills, held at Simla on the 2nd inst., at the Alliance Bank, resulted in no definite decision, so far as the future of the company is concerned. The second meeting will be held in three weeks' time. Meantime, it is not unlikely that the Cawnpore Mills will submit a proposal to work conjointly with the Punjab Mills. There seems, however, some uncertainty as to the scheme coming to a head, the debenture holders pressing for an immediate liquidation.

NOTICES OF BOOKS.

SANT' ILARIO.*

"Sant' Ilario" is of course not the first novel from the pen of Mr. Marion Crawford which touches upon the ways and cuttoms of modern Rome; but the present tale differs from its predecessors in so far that it deals chiefly with the inner life of the Eternal City. It is true that the abortive efforts of the Garabaldians in 1860 to wrest Italy from the hands of the Pope are introduced to the reader's notice; and, indeed, one of the leading characters is a papal Zouave burning with zeal on behalf of the Holy Father. But war and politics are little more than "bye-play," and do not distract attention from the main incidents of the story.

And, assuredly, a lurid light is thrown upon the domestic life of the capital of Italy, where the patriarchal mode of existence still largely obtains, in so far that parents and children are sheltered by the same roof, albeit in this country marriage is invariably the precursor to the founding of a fresh "home." It may well be understood that this peculiar custom plays an all important part in the family circle; it can be conceived that the head of the household is thereby raised to a position of power and influence in his own circle which is at times likely to turn the head of the best and wisest of men. Let the reader imagine for an instant that the ways and manners of royalty obtained in the houses of subjects as well as monarchs and some idea can be formed as to the worship and homage which in Roman circles are the birthright of the great families of Italy. That in such circumstances the mind should become narrowed and the intellect deadened will not occasion much astonishment. That the "Counts" and "Excellencies" are often, perhaps too often, mean and narrow-minded may well be conceded, but it is barely possible that a Prince with a train of ancestry reaching back to the mythical ages should be so deadened to all notions of right and wrong as to persuade himself that a crime which in this country would have exposedthe perpetrator to the risk of a most degrading nature is allowable and even praiseworthy is barely conceivable. Mr. Crawford writes as though his tale were founded upon fact—so we must be prepared to concede that he has hit upon a "black sheep" amidst the proud and susceptible aristocracy of the Eternal City.

Be this, however, as it may, there is no lack of life and incident in "Sant' Ilario," which we have no hesitation in pronouncing by far the best of the many works which have flowed from the pen of this facile and fluent writer—at least so far as our experience is concerned. There are at times horrors which may well make Mr. Rider Haggard look well to his laurels, though it is but fair to say that the events portrayed, terrible as they may be, are never unreal or revolting. Crime is depicted with a master hand—it never occasions the "creeps"; and the scene where a murderer wakes up to the fact that he is branded with infamy and shame—a miscreant of the deepest dye—is superb beyond all description. Nothing within the range of modern fiction can compare with the thoughts and reflections which are compressed into one short chapter devoted to the downward career of one who had lifted up his arm against the master under whose roof he found sustenance and shelter, and who sought to wash clean with drink the tablets of the memory as regards the fearful deed which had imbued his hands with blood, and deprived his mind of the peace of innocence. Again we repeat the episode is superb; indeed, from beginning to end it may be said that "Sant' Ilario" stands forth by far and away the chef d'œuvre of a writer who can delight without disgust, whose reflections upon the personages which he introduces betoken a master mind, and who has learnt the true secret of fiction, which is that the daily sum of human existence is made up of apparently insignificant events which may, and at times do, develop into importance. Life, at least such is the common experience, does not consist of a few great things, but of an aggregate of trivial circumstances, and Mr. Crawford is aware of the fact.

OUTDOOR SPORTS IN SCOTLAND.†

Occasionally it is the good fortune of the few to meet with a keen, ardent sportsman experienced in the ways of his craft full of anecdote, and replete with information. Such a person is "Ellangowan," and the most fascinating volume which he has just laid before the public, under the title of "Outdoor Sports in Scotland," is the "chit-chat" of an enthusiast who has much to say, and the art of saying that "muchness" with simplicity and absence of ostentation. From the first line to the last page there is not a chapter but what abounds with attractive matter, and affords information on many points in regard to which, we venture to say, the ordinary reader possesses but little knowledge. Take an example or two at hazard. How many persons are aware of the fact that pheasants and woodcocks are on the increase, while grouse and partridges are each year becoming "small by degrees, and beautifully less"? Who save a "Competition Wallah" just through his "exams." could proclaim, with the least approach to accuracy, that the ordinary rabbit is slain to the extent of 10 millions per annum in this country, and yet in spite of this enormous destruction still holds its own in point of numbers? Of course, it is but fair to add that the rate at which they "replenish the earth" is something astounding beyond belief. It may be interesting to add that grouse and black game figure for 510,000 per annum, partridge for 376,000, pheasants for 365,000, and hares for 430,000, the money value of the entire "game supply" falling but little, if any, short of £1,000,000 a-year; and this, be it recollected, to a large extent is the outcome of lands too poor for the most part for profitable cultivation. If, then, to this large sum be added the expenditure on wages, travelling, food, and the numerous items which devolve upon the pockets of the "lairds" who preserve on their estates, it may be questioned whether the cry of "Shame" which the Radical doctrinaire is so fond of yelling forth at every opportunity against those who deprive the poor man of the profits of the earth is justified by the inexorable logic of facts.

Anecdotes are not wanting in the volume under notice, and from first to last the chit-chit is so enticing, and the olla podrida laid before the reader so full of vigour and dash, that pure, unalloyed praise is due to the author—a veteran alike in the ways of sport as in the art of interesting others in what interests himself.

Messrs. W. H. Allen and Co. have recently published a work which is likely to be most useful to all connected with the law. It is the Code of Civil Procedure (Act XIV. of 1882), with commentaries and appendices, by Mr. William Griffith, B.A., of Cambridge, and barrister-at-law of Lincoln's Inn; a gentleman who has already acquired fame as the author of several legal works, connected chiefly with the laws in India, notably those on the Indian Companies' and Trusts Acts of 1882, and on the Code of Criminal Procedure of the same year.

The work in question contains copious and valuable commentaries, or notes to the greater part of the code with which it deals, which are explanatory of the sections to which they respectively relate, thus making them intelligible to the reader and even to practitioners, where the legislature has failed so to do. These notes consist principally of the decisions of the various High Courts in India, and of the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council, as well as of those of the Superior Courts of this country, so far as they are applicable to the Code in question; and many decisions of the Superior Courts of this country are applicable to such a code, inasmuch as it resembles, in several places, the provisions of the Judicature Acts and the Rules thereunder. These notes are not entirely confined to judicial decisions; for instance, we find under Section fifty of the Code, which directs what the form and contents of a plaint should be, reference made, not merely to the fourth Schedule to the Code, which, like the Judicature Acts, gives certain precedents, but also to various Acts of the Indian Legislature, creating different causes of action, and giving forms for the respective plaints for the same. The notes, moreover, contain, in some cases, very useful suggestions, for practitioners as well as students. For instance, in discussing, under section 11, what is a suit of a civil nature, the author adds very valuable suggestions as to the matters that should be taken into consideration before any such proceeding is commenced.

The special feature of this work is the fourth schedule to the Code, which contains forms of pleadings and decrees. Such forms are preceded by several introductory chapters on substantive law, and these chapters, ten in number, deal with (inter alia) ordinary and extraordinary remedies, mercantile law and remedies, bankruptcy, and specific relief. Next come the forms themselves, most of which are supplemented by notes containing judicial decisions, and the Statute law relating to the respective subjects, after the style of Bullen and Leake's "Precedents of Pleadings," familiar to all lawyers.

Another feature of this work, equally important as the last, is the Appendices. These are four in number, the first three of which give the law on the respective subjects clearly and concisely, the first dealing with Discovery both by Interrogatories and by Affidavit of Documents; the second with Attachment of Debts; and the third with Injunctions. The fourth and last Appendix contains Acts of the Legislative Council ancillary to the Civil Procedure Code, and without which no work on such a subject would be complete, such as, for example the Court Fees' Act, 1870; the Presidency and Provincial Small Cause Courts Acts of 1882 and 1887 respectively

At the end of the second schedule, which mentions the chapters and sections of the Code, extended to Provincial Courts of Small Causes, is given a short history of such Courts as well as an account of their jurisdiction. This will be found very useful, particularly by practitioners in such Courts, whose name is now legion.

The work contains a carefully-arranged Index and two Tables of Cases, the one relating to the Commentaries on the Code and the other to the Comments on the Forms, all of which materially enhance its usefulness.

The type is excellent and the paper very good, and the size, for the matter contained in it, by no means bulky. So good and useful a work should have a large sale.

THE season for changing one's club or belonging to another is now fast approaching, and the number of new clubs which offer attractions are daily increasing. We think, however, that the supply is already quite equal to the demand, and some of those recently started do not promise any sustained existence. The best non-political club we know, which, although it has been in existence for seven years, has only recently taken a new departure, is the Grosvenor, in New Bond-street. The literary men in this club, attracted possibly by the fine reference library as well as by the free use of the Grosvenor library, form a considerable section of its 1,600 members. There is a large number of military and naval officers, scientists, artists, and many well-known names in clubland. The smoking concerts in the exhibition galleries, which we have several times attended, have been very successful, and one may be sure of finding excellent music and arrangements for comfort, a good view of the pictures forming not the least of the attractions. The ladies' nights were a feature during the past gay season. Those who are undecided would do well to look at the premises, as an entrance fee of twenty guineas will be imposed from Jan. 1 next, which those who join before that date will escape.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

THE COLONISATION OF CASHMERE.

THE suggestion made by Sir Lepel Griffin in the remarkable Paper which he read at the Colonial Institution, that a settlement of three millions of Englishmen in Cashmere was not only practical, but ought to be encouraged as a splendid means of protecting our North-West Frontier of India, was not likely to pass without comment in India itself. There has generally been a feeling in that country that any attempt at British colonisation, even in the most favoured localities of the hills, would be a failure, and this opinion has been expressed frequently in the Anglo-Indian as well as in the Native Press. The latter, of course, were naturally unanimous against such an attempt being even hinted at, being, of course, of opinion that there were already quite enough, if not too many, Englishmen in India already. But the Anglo-Indian Press took a little higher, if also a personal, ground of objection, and held that such an attempt would be a waste of material too valuable —that Englishmen were too precious to be sacrificed in such an experiment, which meant decay or death to them. The objection taken was not clothed in particularly complimentary language to the Natives of India, in an article on the subject which appeared in the Calcutta Review in 1857, to which we have referred before. India's climate, it was held, was fatal to worthy forms of life, and the writer went on to say that "even as the tiger, the crocodile, the serpent, and all the slimy train of noxious reptiles flourish in this inhospitable region, so man, though prolific and multitudinous, appears under a degraded and noxious type; and it is surely chimerical to suppose that the worthier stock of a more favourable region could be transplanted to this soil without undergoing a moral and physical decay, slow, perhaps, and gradual in its downward progress, but none the less inevitably sure." This was not intended to apply merely to any attempt at British Colonisation in the plains; it was held to be equally applicable to any attempt to do so in the hills where climate, soil and temperature might be supposed to offer advantages to English settlers. But the idea of forming an English Colony in any part of India was never, we believe, seriously entertained by the most sanguine of emigration advocates or agents. And even when we heard Sir Lepel Griffin in his own inimitably seductive manner enunciate his scheme for planting three millions of Englishmen in Cashmere, we were not convinced that the speaker was so very terribly in earnest, but rather threw out the suggestion as one which was capable of further consideration. Indeed, it was smilingly said by more than one of his friends that the idea was a very clever ruse of bringing his lecture on the Native Princes of India within the scope of the rules of the Colonial Institute, which otherwise it would probably not have been. This, however, may have been only surmise or cynicism.

But whether Sir Lepel was terribly in earnest or not there can be no doubt of the Calcutta Statesman being terribly in earnest in combating his proposal. The name of Sir Lepel Griffin appears always to have a similar effect upon that journal as the proverbial effect of a red rag on a bull. The head is immediately lowered, and wild butting commences. Sir Lepel Griffin's "astonishing disclosure," we are told, "certainly caps every absurdity before proposed," and the writer cannot "adequately realise the insult which this so-called Indian authority has offered to the common-sense of his countrymen." To accomplish the task proposed by him "would involve the suspension of all the commerce of the world." But some excuse is made for the erring official. "Not the faintest idea had he while parading this nonsense before the Royal Colonial Institute of what his project meant." But the Statesman comes to the rescue, and explains the project for him:—

The realisation of Sir Lepel Griffin's wild dream of defence would mean that all the dockyards of the United Kingdom were employed for an indefinite number of years to come in building a transport fleet—not of five (5) ships such as we now possess, and that cost the people of this country £1,250,000—but of at least 300 ships of the same size, with capacity in each to carry 1,000 men, women and children of the home agriculturist classes, at a cost of construction not of 1¼ millions sterling, but of 70 to 80 millins sterling. It would take the enormous sum of £75,000,000 to construct a transport fleet of 300 ships to "bring out to Bombay or Kurrachee" such a colony as Sir Lepel Griffin speaks of for ten full years to come. But this would be the initial cost only of providing the mere fleet that would be required for bringing 300,000 men, women and children—or 60,000 families—a year for ten years on end to the Indian ports. Not a single thought, moreover, has entered his mind as to the preparations that would require to be made for the reception of these 60,000 families. What would he do with the 300,000 persons annually arriving at Bombay and Kurrachee for his famous military colony of 3,000,000 in Cashmere?

Digitized by Google

This is not the only poser put: The writer wants to know how Sir Lepel would arrange for the withdrawal of from three to four hundred of the ocean steamers of the world of 3,000 tons each from its carrying trade for his purpose, and how would he provide for the commissariat of his vast hosts on their immediate landing? The Statesman evidently considers that Sir Lepel meant that the three millions of Englishmen for Cashmere were to be secured at a moment's notice, and sent off to the "happy valley" with the least possible delay; and under this impression the Calcutta critic comes to the charitable conclusion that he is of unsound mind:—"Any man who has been in India, and could give such foolish advice as Sir Lepel Griffin has given regarding colonisation in Cashmere, should be consigned to a lunatic asylum." But—and there is virtue in a but—it may be that Sir Lepel did not mean what the Statesman means at all. He spoke of the advantage to England and India were Cashmere held by a host of Englishmen who might be made available for military service if required. It could only be a lunatic who could suppose that he meant to immediately stop the traffic of all the world to bring that event about. There was much more method in Sir Lepel's attributed madness.

RELIGIOUS ANIMOSITIES.

TO THE EDITOR.

SIR,— Many Englishmen fancy that the quarrels which are constantly reviving between Hindoos and Mohamedans are good for British supremacy in India.

In Rohtuk, west of Delhi, there has been an explosion of party hatred, by which many lives have been lost: we have apparently lost the power of subduing religious contests without bloodshed. In former times an assistant magistrate would by his own authority overawe and disperse crowds. Now we resort to shooting. Such shooting may kill more innocent women and children than guilty men.

If we are to retain India the authorities must be enabled to foresee coming danger. It is not sufficient to imprison those whom we catch; we must make our subjects interested in the maintenance of peace.

In Etawuh we owed our safety to the wisdom of a railway station master; but there is little use in giving large salaries to district officers if they are to stand idle and do nothing to snpport the authority of the British Government.—Your obedient servant, T.

Sept. 24th.

MILITARY INTELLIGENCE.

THE Mian Mir Camp of Exercise will not be held, as it has been found that the money allotted for the Camps generally is insufficient to meet all requirements.

IT has been decided that horse allowance for one horse is included in the Staff pay of a 1st Class Station Staff Officer, who is now to be considered as holding a permanent Staff appointment.

As it will not be possible to send a full garrison to Gilgit before the Passes are closed, 200 Gurkhas, chosen from the Kashmir troops in process of reorganisation, will be armed with sniders and despatched to the frontier outpost.

IT has been decided not to exempt from income-tax the salaries of lady nurses, army schoolmistresses, and the percentages on pay drawn by clerks of the Army Headquarters offices and of the office of the Director of the Army Remount Department when absent from Simla.

ALL four Punjab cavalry regiments will attend the Muridki Camp, the 12th Bengal Cavalry from Multan sending detachments to some of the frontier posts to take their places. There will be thirteen regiments in all at Muridki during the visit of Prince Edward, and a grand assault-at-arms is being arranged for.

THE Government of India have ruled that an officer retired during the non-trooping season will not be granted passage-money unless he proceeds to England before the next trooping season, or unless it can be shown that it was impossible to provide a passage by troopship for him during the ensuing trooping season.

Now it has been formally announced that the Duke of Connaught will vacate the command of the Bombay Army in the spring, conjecture will probably be revived as to his successor. We mentioned some time ago that in military circles at home Sir Evelyn Wood's nomination to the post was believed to be most probable, and news received in India by the last mail confirms this view. If it is intended to send out any other officer, or to give the post to a General serving in India, the secret has so far been well kept.

THE popularity of Rifle Clubs in British Regiments in India has become so great that commanding officers find the quantity of ball ammunition supplied to the men is insufficient to meet all the demands. A correspondent in a military cantonment in the Punjab suggests that no limit should be placed upon the quantity of ammunition obtainable by soldiers on payment, so long as their officers see that it is expended in a legitimate way. The suggestion is a good one, as only by practice other than that which has compulsorily to be gone through can the men become first-class shots. As the necessity for good shooting is now being proclaimed every day more earnestly, there should be ammunition in abundance always available in regimental magazines.

CAPTAIN PAKENHAM, A.D.C., will meet Prince Albert Victor at Bombay, and not Lord William Beresford, who is required by H.E. the Viceroy on his frontier tour.

DR. SPENCER'S ASTHMA CURE.

Mr. D. FITZPATRICK, of Drumcree, Killucan, Westmeath, Ireland, writes:—"Thank God the two bottles of Dr. Spencer's Asthma Cure got from you cured me of the Asthma. I am over sixty years of age, and for the last twenty-five years I have suffered as much from Asthma (I believe) as any other Asthmatic could suffer, often for nights without ever lying on a bed, but I thank the good God I can now sleep as comfortable as I could wish for. I only wish every poor Asthmatic sufferer would give your cure a trial, for it is a great boon."

The public are hereby notified that the above remedy is prepared from a recently improved formula of Dr. Spencer (which has nothing to do with any other formula) and is sold, under his name, by us, who are the sole prorietors, and in no way connected with any other person or firm. We will send our Pamphlet "Asthma, its Treatment and Cure" (Third edition) by E. Edwin Spencer, M.A., M.D., &c., post free, on application

THE BROAD ARROW AND NAVAL AND MILITARY GAZETTE

EVERY SATURDAY. PRICE SIXPENCE.

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" has acquired a reputation for early and exclusive intelligence as to Appointments and other service News, for the high character of its articles, the independent course of its staff of writers, and for its earnest support of all measures for the good of the Services. Articles on specially interesting subjects appear from week to week written for the most part by officers of rank and experience, or by men of note in literature who have made the Naval and Military affairs of the country their special study. A series of Illustrated Articles is appearing weekly on Regimental Badges and History. Illustrations with descriptions are also given of new Service Inventions.

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" freely opens its correspondence columns to all grades in the Services. By this means an opportunity for interchange of opinion is afforded, such as is offered by no other Service Journal. Its ordinary weekly issue contains fully one-fourth more matter than the other Service Journals, even with their frequent "supplements."

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" circulates largely throughout India and the Colonies. It is supplied direct to the Army and Marine bureaux of the French, Russian, and other Governments, and it is read extensively by Officers of Foreign Services, especially of the German, French, and American Armies, who desire to acquire a true impression of facts and public opinion in England regarding Military affairs.

The Review is rapidly regaining the position which it . . . there is no fear of the Indian Review, or the Asiatic Quarterly rivalling it in public favour.—Statesman, October 1886.

. . . . The best service which I ever rendered in India, or, indeed, for India, was the establishment, single-handed, of the Calcutta Review, which has done far more for Indian literature than anything I have written under my own name.—J. W. KAYE, Athenæum Club, une 23, 1872.

The Calcutta Review has given us valuable articles on the army. Some from the pen of Sir Henry Lawrence, who wrote with the spirit of prophesy of the coming storm of which he was one of the noblest victims.—Address of the C.-in-C. at the U.S. Inst. of India.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

General Intelligence.

[BY OVERLAND MAIL.]

THE Overland Mail brings us letters and advices from Bombay to the 20th Sept.; from Allahabad and Madras to the 18th Sept.; and from Calcutta to the 18th Sept.

THE Legislative Council day has been changed to Thursday, owing to the change of the mail. The Mamlatdars' Indemnity Bill has now been drafted in the Legislative Department, and may be passed in one meeting of the Council, rules and business being suspended for the purpose.

THE Bombay Government have received instructions from the Government of India to dismiss summarily eight of the corrupt Mamlatdars.

IN connection with the Lushai and Chin operations it is now proposed to send a small column from Cachar southwards across the border. This step is designed to effectually prevent any diversion the tribesmen might be tempted to undertake by raiding on the tea gardens. The Bengal troops sharing in the Chin operations will probably be the 2nd Battalion 4th Gurkhas, the 10th, 33rd, and 38th regiments of Infantry, and the 42nd Gurkhas.

REGARDING the modifications that are to carried out in the matter of Simla travelling allowances, the ruling idea will be to assimilate these more closely than at present to those that are granted under the Civil Service Regulations which govern the ordinary movements of officials and subordinates. The question of family allowances is likely to prove a difficult one for the Government to solve. The Secretary of State has formally accepted the recommendation of the Finance Committee that all family allowances should be abolished; but this is scarcely possible, and the position is embarrassing.

THE report of the Committee on Public Works Accounts has been communicated to Local Governments and Administrations for their views, but they have been expressly told that on certain points the Government of India will pass orders when they have been sufficiently discussed in the Secretariat offices. The various questions raised are being dealt with singly, and orders are nearly ripe for issue on more than one of these.

THE Government of India, replying to the English Postal authorities, have protested strongly against Sunday being fixed as the day of departure for the overland mails from Bombay. They suggest Saturday all the year round, the mails being closed at 2 P.M., so that the local half-holiday may still be secured.

THE Survey of the East Coast Railway has been sanctioned.

THE Governor of Madras left Ootacumund on the 5th September. His lordship has made a short tour in Tanjore and South Arcot, and returned to Madras on the 13th. He was to start for Calcutta in about a week. After arrival there his Excellency will pay a short visit to Sir Steuart Bayley at Darjeeling, and then proceed to Simla. Subsequently he will pay a visit to the Punjab and the frontier, prior to returning to his Presidency.

THE dates of his Excellency the Commander-in-Chief's forthcoming tours have been published. Sir Frederick Roberts commences his cold weather inspections on the 1st October.

THE Lieutenant-Governor of the North-West Provinces has decided to make a tour during the coming cold weather through Bundelkhand.

SIR MORTIMER DURAND has had a sharp attack of pleurisy, but is now well on the way to recovery.

ACCORDING to present arrangements, Mr. A. P. MacDonnell, on return from Burma, resumes the Secretaryship of the Home Department, remaining at Calcutta over the Legislative session.

SIR EDWARD BUCK, the Revenue Secretary, will probably take six months' leave to England early next year.

AS the presence of the Military Secretary is required with the Viceroy on his first frontier tour, Lord William Beresford will not meet Prince Albert Victor at Bombay, that duty devolving upon Captain Pakenham, A.D.C.

MR. G. E. WARD, Commissioner of Jhansi, who went home on sick leave last spring, has resigned the Civil Service, with effect from the 17th July.

THE Commander-in-Chief in India has confirmed the Secunderabad Court Martial's sentence on Major Creighton, paymaster of the 7th Hussars, which is one of a year's imprisonment, with the forfeiture of his decorations for service in Egypt, and to be put on stoppages to make good Rs. 16,000.

MR. J. M. SALMOND, Executive Engineer, Yemethen, committed suicide on the morning of the 8th Sept. by shooting himself in the head with a carbine in his bungalow.

MOHURRUM rioting has occurred at Rohtak. The police fired on the mob, killing nine persons before the crowds dispersed, and wounding others. At Amritsar, too, there have been disturbances which might have easily become become serious, but were suppressed by the prompt action of the police officer in charge.

A COMMITTEE is to meet at Dera Ghazi Khan during the present month to consider the whole question of measures for the protection of the town and cantonments against further inroads by the Indus.

ELABORATE preparations are being made in connection with the census operations next year. Cashmere and Upper Burma are naturally the two places which will give the most trouble. At present no system for census-taking exists in the former, and the attempt may have to be dropped in Upper Burma. The ordinary process may probably be found impossible. A rough estimate may be based by accepting the returns now used for purposes of taxation.

THE Lieutenant Governor of Bengal telegraphed to the Viceroy, Sept. 19, that he had visited Moorshedabad and Moozufferpore. At Moorshedabad the embankment was cut by the villagers in two places, one serious above the town some 800 feet wide, the other of less importance, which can soon be closed. Bhagirati is submerged, and in a large tract of country the water stands from 4 to 6 feet over the rice fields. Rain was falling rapidly. The damage to autumn rice is considerable. Half of the crops are reaped before the rest is lost. The general condition of the people is good. The distress in the flooded area is very general and serious, and has been met by an organised system of gratuitous relief and tuccavi loaves, supervised partly by planters and partly by Government. The planters are giving liberal aid both in money and agency. The prospects of crops outside the flooded area are excellent, but relief in diminished amounts will be required for some months. Several deaths from starvation have occurred. Five have been verified, mostly old and weak. The people have been cut off during the flood from relief centres. His Honour had to sanction an additional 20,000 rupees for loans. All over Behar the winter crop depends on rain in October. Four deaths from starvation have been reported, and are under inquiry.

THE Calcutta jute manufacturers have decided to reduce the production of heavy goods by stopping ten per cent. of the sacking looms.

Boring operations at Quetta for pure water have been crowned with success.

The Millowners' Association resolved at their last meeting to close the mills two days in the week if forty millowners supported the proposal. The agents of more than forty mills have since signed an undertaking to that effect.

The Viceroy and Governor-General in Council has been pleased to remit the duty stamp payable under the Indian Stam pAct of 1877 on all instruments of memorandum or agreement with the Public Works Department by contractors for the due performance of their contracts.

NOTES.

By the present Overland Mail, which left Bombay on Friday, September 20th, we have ten days later news than that brought by the mail which left on Tuesday, September 10th. The news by telegrams from Calcutta and Rangoon, as wired yesterday by the special correspondents of the Times and Daily News, will be found in another column.

The agitation against the proposed change in the day of departure of the English mails from Bombay has assumed very considerable strength. What is reported as one of the most genuinely enthusiastic public meetings ever held in that city has been presided over by Sir Charles Sargent, the Chief Justice, who was supported in his vigorous protest against the proposed change by representatives of all classes of the community. The Bombay Municipal Corporation has also, under its President, Mr. Grattan Geary, come to the conclusion that no legitimate means should be neglected of protesting against a change, which would have the effect of making Saturday and Sunday the busiest days of the week in the fair island city. A memorial was, therefore, authorised for submission to the Right Honourable the Secretary of State for India, protesting against the proposed alteration, which the memorialists considered was an attempt to sacrifice the interests of Bombay to those of Australia.

We can well understand why the business men of Bombay do not want to be kept at their desks in their hot, moist capital on Saturdays and Sundays when they would otherwise be enjoying the cooler breezes on Malabar Hill or at Poona; but the argument that the Government of Bombay is opposed to the change of mail day lest the overworked mill hands might be enforced to work on Sundays also is, perhaps, a little far-fetched. A more powerful argument was one advanced by Mr. Justice Bayley, who commands the Bombay Volunteer Rifle Corps, and who stated that to take away the Saturday half-holiday, which the corps utilised for drill or shooting exercise, would be almost to do away with the corps itself, a body numbering 700 efficient rank and file.

In the meantime the latest information in India on the vexed question is that the Government of India itself has strongly protested against Sunday being fixed as the mail day from Bombay, and suggests that Saturday be made the day all the year round, the mails being closed at 2 P.M., so that the local half holiday may still be secured.

The Bombay Corporation are making great preparations to give a befitting welcome to Prince Victor on his arrival in their city. A wealthy citizen, who modestly keeps back his name, has intimated his desire to contribute the munificent sum of one lakh of rupees towards the building of a Leper Asylum, and it has been suggested that his Royal Highness should be asked to lay the foundation-stone, which doubtless H.R.H. will graciously consent to do.

The weary dispute about the corrupt Mamlutdars appears to be as far off a satisfactory settlement as ever. Meetings of Natives, whose views on corruption are not those of the general community of honest Englishmen, continue to be held to protest against what they choose to call English breach of faith, regarding Lord Reay's promised indemnity. The difficulty is an unfortunate one for the Government, but we hardly see that it could have been easily solved, as the Times correspondent suggests, by the recall of the Bombay Governor, and his supersession by a new Governor, who could have at once adopted a resolute attitude, and peremptorily have refused to ratify Lord Reay's pledges, on the ground that he had gone beyond his constitutional powers, and violated the existing law. Such action would only have been interpreted by the Native discontents as a trick on the part of the English Government, and the protests and the howls would have been louder.

But we agree with what the correspondent says as to the present agitation of the Bombay Brahmans and the conclusion he draws from it:—"These very sagacious and subtle-witted Brahmans fully appreciate the difficulties of Lord Reay's position, and are using all possible endeavours, by an apparently widespread agitation, to coerce the Government to maintain the corrupt officials in office, despite the Secretary of State's announcement, or, if that move fails, then, at all events, to extort an exorbitant retiring pension. This public avowal of sympathy with venality and corruption constitutes a rather curious and instructive advertisement of moral fitness for extended promotion and for a fuller measure of political privileges. Before these clamorous aspirations can be gratified it must be shown in a more satisfactory manner that the veneer of Western official purity is more than skin deep."

It is not, however, about the case of the Mamlutdars only that complaints against Lord Reay are being made. The Times of India complains of the appointments, especially the acting ones, made under his patronage, and says that "one by one the different services have all become dissatisfied, and there is now scarcely a Government department in Bombay in which the members have not a personal, and often a very real, grievance." If this be so it is a pity—but in the way of patronage distribution Bombay civilians have generally been the most difficult of the whole Indian Civil Service to please.

From happy Simla, however, the news is only of sunshine and champagne. As blessings are said to brighten when about to take their flight, so the gay community on the mountain are making the most of the little time which is left to them before returning to the hated plains. Balls, pic-nics and theatricals have been coursing one another in such rapid succession that an enthusiastic correspondent gushingly assures his readers in lower latitudes that "the past fortnight has been an unprecedentally gay one—even for Simla." There is much meaning behind these italics. The celestials are thorough when they abandon work and take altogether to play.

The demand for rifles exists not only on the North-West Frontier, but on the far away eastern border of Assam. At least this is the only conclusion, thinks the Allahabad paper, which can be arrived at from the thefts of Government rifles belonging to the Assam police. Curiously enough, the police were themselves the thieves, the Manipuris enlisted in the Surma Valley Battalion being the offenders.

INDIA.

CALCUTTA, OCT. 6.

At the last meeting of the Legislative Council the consideration of the Mamlutdars Indemnity Bill was adjourned till the 10th, as certain minutes from Bombay had not been received. The Cantonment Bill was also postponed.

On the occasion of the distribution of prizes by Lady Roberts, at the Simla rifle meeting, the Commander-in-Chief in the course of his speech insisted on the necessity of good shooting in the battlefield. It was better not to fire at all than to fire wildly. Mentioning the new weapon which is to replace the Martini, he said that with the new rifle he expected that men would be able to put a bullet through a loophole at 400 yards and pour rapid volleys into enclosures at 2,500. Marksmanship was a tradition of the English race. Musketry had been placed on such a firm basis in the army in India that the necessity of mastering it, both theoretically and practically, was hardly ever disputed. The scores at the present meeting showed a distinct improvement. Referring to the simultaneous match he congratulated the 7th Dragoon Guards on winning it, specially mentioning private Phillips, who made 35 at 200, 34 at 500, and 36 at 600 yards—a total of 102 out of a possible 105. This he characterised as magnificent shooting. The Diana competition was won by his daughter at the highest possible score of 35.

Lord Reay left Simla last Tuesday. Lord Connemara arrives to-day. The past fortnight has been unprecedentedly gay even for Simla. On Wednesday, the 25th, there was a State Concert at the Viceregal Lodge. On Thursday the dinner given to Lord Reay by the Commander-in-Chief was followed by theatricals in the Snowdon ballroom. On Friday a ball was given by the Viceroy's staff, and on Saturday a picnic was given also by the staff, and was followed by races and sports, with a musical party in the evening. On Monday the United Service Club welcomed 500 guests at a ball.

On Tuesday Sir Thomas Baker, K.C.B., presided at the Staff College dinner. He said in the course of his speech that the Staff College had succeeded in gaining the confidence of the Army authorities by its class of officers, all the higher appointments being filled by these officers. He hoped this would act as an incentive to the native army to send more men to the college, and that eventually all appointments would be held by Staff College officers. He had learnt much at the college which it had been impossible to learn elsewhere.

Under the reformed mobilisation scheme the Punjab Frontier Force will constitute north and south divisions, under orders for immediate advance across the frontier in the event of war. An army circular notifies that the Commander-in-Chief is vested with larger spending powers without prior reference to the Government. This is not to exceed Rs. 10,000 in any one month in the case of the Commander-in-Chief in India and Rs. 2,500 in the case of provincial Commanders-in-Chief.

The Sikkim force has been redistributed. At Gnatong there are 400 of the Connaught Rangers, at Guntok 200, at Paunyong 100, and at Pedong 125 of the 13th Bengal Infantry. General Graham has sent in a full and detailed report of the history of the campaign.

It is rumoured that Sir George Greaves, K.C.M.G., is to succeed the Duke of Connaught.

There has been a severe outbreak of cholera at Meanmeer. Among the deaths is that of Colonel Pemberton, commanding the artillery. Sukkur has also suffered from a cholera epidemic.

The Native troops have shown marked improvement this year in shooting. Among 40,000 re-armed with the Martini, the percentage of marksmen is 18·91 of first-class shots, 25·63 of the second, and 45·09 of the third.

The Lieutenant-Governor of the Punjab accompanies the Viceroy on his tour. The Viceroy holds levées at Rawul Pindi, Peshawur, Dera Ismail Khan, Quetta, and Lahore. From Lahore the Viceroy will travel direct to Calcutta, arriving on the 30th of November.

Tantia Bheel was committed for trial at the sessions charged with causing grievous hurt. The case was investigated by the Assistant-Commissioner at the Jubbulpore Court. The surrounding grounds were densely crowded from an early hour. Tantia was heavily manacled and guarded by an armed police force. The evidence showed that about ten years ago Tantia Bheel, known to be intimate with Jashoda, daughter of his employer, a native of the village of Pakar, was, by the machinations of Mohun Chowdri, a near relative of Jashoda's, lodged in Khundwa Jail for two months on a charge of theft. After serving his term, Tantia, bent on reprisals, returned to Pakar and proceeded to harass his enemies by slaughtering cattle and destroying agricultural implements. Mohun Chowdri, to whom Tantia was indebted for his two months' imprisonment, enjoyed naturally a large share of the dacoit's attention, so much so that he resolved at any risk to capture his enemy. A clever snare was laid, and Tantia at last was run to earth and confined in Khundwa Jail. Pending his trial Tantia escaped and began the wild career which has made him known to us as the most desperate dacoit in India. In October, 1887, Tantia Bheel made his way to Pakar. On the 27th he visited the house of Mohun Chowdri and inquired for his old enemy. He was informed by Mohun's mother that he had died some days before. Tantia refused to believe the story, and proceeded to beat the mother of Mohun Chowdri, demanding the Rs. 100 which Mohun had been awarded a year before for capturing Tantia, and claiming also Rs. 500, the sum which the father of Jashoda had been fined by the village panchayet for the misconduct of his daughter. The woman refused to give the money to Tantia, whereupon she was seized, dragged out of the village, stripped of her jewellry, and mutilated by having her nose severed from her face with a hunting knife. At his trial Tantia, who was undefended, did not contradict the above allegations, except in minor particulars. He acknowledges having mutilated the woman, but denies having robbed her. He also acknowledges having claimed Rs. 600, but maintains that he had a right to the money. The other charges will be tried later.

In the case of the Rohtak religious riots appeals have been allowed.

A large and influential Mahomedan meeting was held recently at Poona to discuss the means of improving the condition of the Mahomedan community. The Persian Consul presided. A resolution was passed in favour of English education being adopted.

A commission has been appointed at Hyderabad to investigate and settle the heavy liabilities, said to exceed Rs. 300,000, of the late Sir Salar Jung.

Mr. Ney Elias has been appointed chief of the Siam Boundary Commission.

Dr. Porter, Catholic Archbishop of Bombay, died on the 28th of September. The funeral was largely attended. The Archbishop was highly revered and esteemed, and he is regretted by every section of the community. He had been suffering for a considerable time from the effects of malarial fever, but he refused to leave his post in order to recruit his health.

An interesting case arising out of the re-marriage of a Hindoo widow was recently heard on appeal in the Madras High Court. A certain Brahman had married a virgin widow, and in consequence the priest refused him admittance to the temple. He then sued the priest for damages. In the course of his judgment the native Judge said it must be remembered that Hindoo law as administered by the Courts was the law as at present received by the Hindoo community, not as it stood in the Vedic periods of Hindoo religious history.

A subordinate magistrate of Tinnivelly has filed a suit against the Secretary of State for Rs. 65,000, the value of precious stones alleged to have been stolen whilst in the charge of the postal authorities. The Postmaster-General maintains that the jewels were never posted. It promises to be a very sensational case.

The Mahratta Brahmans are working up a number of native meetings in the Bombay Presidency to express sympathy with the corrupt Bombay native officials. This is done with the special object of supporting Lord Reay in his supposed endeavours at Simla to induce the Indian Government to maintain these magistrates in office.

RANGOON, OCT. 6.

In consequence of the heavy rainfall in the hill district the expedition against the Chins is likely to be delayed for a fortnight. The Tashons, one of the principal Chin tribes, have accepted the terms imposed by the Chief Commissioner and will surrender the captives in their hands. They have been given till October 9th to do so. They also volunteer to enforce the surrender of the captives held by the Sagolain and Knoulon Chins and other small tribes by attacking their villages if necessary. The Sagolain and Mwebyin Chins having refused to comply with the Tashons' requests hostilities between these tribes are imminent. The genuineness of the Tashon's action is confirmed by captives escaped from other tribes.

The troops are likely to meet with considerable opposition. The roads are naturally very difficult, and have been rendered impassable in many places by felling trees and other devices.

The health of the troops at Fort White is not satisfactory. The Norfolk Regiment especially is very sickly, and will be moved when the rains cease. There have been heavy floods on the Mandalay line, the embankments being breached in several places. The new drainage on the Shone and Ault system will shortly be in full work. Much interest attaches to the result, as this and other similar systems are peculiarly suitable for towns like Calcutta with large populations, but it is a question how far it will be successful in level plains with little or no fall.

CALCUTTA, SUNDAY NIGHT.

Another serious religious riot between Hindoos and Mahommedans occurred on Friday night in the native quarter of Madras. The Mahommedans have built a mosque in a street through which the Hindoo procession passes on the occasion of the Dusserah festival, and they wished the police to forbid the procession to pass the mosque with music. The Hindoos, on the other hand, objected to be deprived of the privilege they have enjoyed for nearly a century, and the authorities refused to interfere.

Friday being the date for the Dusserah procession, a large number of Mahommedans assembled at the mosque, and when the procession drew near raised a cry of "Deen, Deen!" and attempted to attack it. The police were present in force armed with sticks, and though the Mahommedans used brickbats, clubs, parcels of chillie powder, and firebrands thrown from the roofs, the police succeeded, after a sharp struggle, in driving them into the mosque.

When the Hindoo procession passed, playing triumphantly, the military had to be called out, but no further rioting occurred. The number of Mahommedans arrested was 157.

These outbreaks are signs of a strong antagonistic feeling between Hindoos and Mahommedans, which the Congress agitation and a crusade against cow-killing, now being preached all over India by a Hindoo, have helped to increase. This Hindoo has lately been lecturing at Madras.

SHOOTING AFFRAYS.

(Civil and Military Gazette.)

The Government of India has recently approved of new rules for the granting of shooting passes to British soldiers, especially with respect to the Magistrate and the Military authorities of the district to which the men are proceeding being informed of all particulars with regard to the party. These passes are not to be given for more than fourteen days at a time, and all regulations in force regarding the close season of the district concerned are to be carefully explained to the men, with strict injunctions not to infringe them. These new rules have not come before they were wanted, for during the last two or three years many fatal affrays have occurred between parties of soldiers out shooting and natives, which might have been prevented had the proper authorities been informed in time of the intended movements of the several parties. Shooting affrays, however, have always been common enough in India, and even so far back as 1844 we find that Sir Charles Napier issued some very characteristic orders on this subject. One of them, dated Karachi, 25th February, 1844, runs as follows:—"Officers must not shoot peacocks: if they do, the Beloochies will shoot officers,—at least so they have threatened, and Major-General Napier has not the slightest doubt but that they will keep their word. There are no wild peacocks in Scinde,—they are all private property and sacred birds, and no man has any right whatever to shoot them." This order is pretty much to the point, and shows how the "Conqueror of Scinde" viewed this vexed matter. A very frequent cause of trouble between natives and soldiers out shooting is the latter's total ignorance of the vernacular. This is especially the case in these days when there are so many short-service men in India who, naturally enough, do not consider it worth their while to pick up even a slight colloquial knowledge of the language. In former times the long service men in this country were well acquainted with the vernacular. Though shooting affrays seemed to have occurred then also, still it was probably through utter lawlessness rather than through inability to talk to a native. Touching this subject of the soldier's ignorance of the language, we cannot refrain from quoting another order by Sir Charles Napier, written about the same time as the one alluded to above. It is certainly original enough to be worth preserving:—"The Governor unfortunately does not understand Hindoostanee, nor Persian, nor Mahratta, nor any other Eastern dialect. He, therefore, will feel particularly obliged to Collectors, Sub-Collectors, and officers writing the proceedings of courts-martial, and all staff officers, to indite their various papers in English, larded with as small a portion of the, to him unknown tongues as they conveniently can, instead of those he generally receives,—namely, papers written in Hindoostanee, larded with occasional words in English. Any indent made for English dictionaries shall be duly attended to, if such be in the stores at Karachi; if not, gentlemen who have forgotten the vulgar tongue are requested to procure the requisite assistance from England." It is very difficult to realise in these days that such an order was issued by the most renowned soldier of his time, yet such is the fact. We cannot recommend, however, that soldiers who are fond of jungling should follow Sir Charles Napier's example in neglecting to learn the language. We are sure they would enjoy their shooting excursions much more, and there would also be less chance of their falling into mischief had they a fair colloquial knowledge of the vernacular. The best shikaris we have known have generally been those who have never had any trouble with the natives, and who have an intimate knowledge of the customs and language of the people.

THE PORT CANNING COMPANY.

(Statesman.)

Although the project of improvising a port on the Mutlah, started in 1865, "went up like a rocket and came down like a stick," the result was only such as might have reasonably been expected. The idea of forming an auxiliary port to Calcutta in the middle of a dense jungle, with a sparse population and in a climate reeking with malaria, was as wild as it could possibly be; and the attempt to carry it into practical effect was simply to court the failure with which it was almost at once overtaken. If we are not mistaken the Company's shares of Rs. 1,000 rose to a premium of £1,200 in Bombay and £1,000 in Calcutta; but a rude awakening soon followed, when most of the eager ones who had taken shares were ruined by this new South Sea Bubble on a small scale. The report for 1888-89 of the present Port Canning Land Improvement Company, which is managed by a body of Parsee and other merchants in Bombay, shows that its affairs have been conducted with much intelligence, prudence, and regard to local circumstances. Instead of aspiring to carry out ambitious projects which are only too likely to result in loss, the present management is quietly, steadily and unostentatiously pushing on the reclamation of land from the forest and the settlement of ryots on the clearings, with the result of slowly but surely adding to the Company's revenues. It is only by following up the present plan that the establishment of a subsidiary port on the Mutlah can ever be rendered possible. As the clearings are extended and the sanitary conditions of the settlement improved, the chances of foreign ships using Canning as an occasional port can be raised. Notwithstanding the unfavourable character of the past season the business of the Company shows steady progress and every tendency to increasing prosperity. The arrears being largely susceptible of recovery, the Company's outstanding revenue may be considered satisfactory. As the Company's estate comprises an area of 336,994 biggahs, it would seem that more than two-thirds of it is already under cultivation and settled at a progressive rate of rent, which will be annually adding to his income. The present management is therefore acting wisely in applying its energies and resources to the reclamation of land, which is its chief and surest source of revenue; while it already holds large tracts which are ripe for settlement, and will, when settled, very greatly increase the resources of the estate. It is to be regretted that the experiment with Norton's tube well, which was intended to supply a great want of the station, namely, good drinking water, has not been as successful as was hoped, but further trials have been reserved till the next season. It would seem that the last year's profits amounted to Rs. 1,22,748, of which Rs. 1,20,000 have been appropriated to the payment of a dividend of Rs. 20 per share, the balance, Rs. 2,748, being carried forward to the next year's account. These results are fairly satisfactory, and creditable to the management. The Company well deserves all prosperity.

A JUDICIAL COMMISSIONER FOR UPPER BURMA.

(Rangoon Times.)

It is, we think, highly desirable that a Judicial Commissioner should be appointed for Upper Burma. Such an appointment would relieve Commissioners of work which occupies a large part of their time at present, and which, the mere fact of their being Commissioners or officiating Commissioners is no guarantee that they will perform correctly. In a recent letter to our contemporary "A Barrister" pointed out that, a Punjab civilian, who recently officiated in one of the Upper Burma divisions, whatever knowledge he may possess of revenue or other work, is evidently not yet quite competent to pose as a Judicial Commissioner in criminal cases. Where the law says that nine months was an adequate punishment for the non-payment of a fine, this gentleman upholds a sentence of twelve months inflicted by one of his subordinates. Whatever his abilities may be in other respects it is quite evident that this Punjab civilian is not yet fit to be a Judicial Commissioner, and it is therefore fortunate, we think, that he has been removed to Lower Burma, where an officiating Commissioner, at any rate, is subordinate to a Judicial Commissioner, and where his decisions are consequently easily appealed against, or revised by the Judicial Commissioner of Lower Burma. It is highly desirable, we think, that our new subjects in Upper Burma should see, that though we can and will punish crime, we yet wish to do so in accordance with the law, and not in accordance with the whims and fancies of individual officers whom the exigencies of the service may occasionally rise to places for which they have not shown absolute fitness. Whilst we think it an unfortunate choice in placing any one who has not been a success in Upper Burma as officiating Commissioner of the Irrawaddy division, so soon after the displays he has made in Upper Burma of his incapacity, it is fortunate for Upper Burma that the public there have been relieved of the presence of such an officer, and that he has now an opportunity of learning his duties in a place where he will be able to do less mischief, and where there is an Appellate Court over him, to set him right either in appeal or revision, when he goes wrong.

THE DUTY ON SILVER PLATE.

(Times of India.)

The discussion in the House of Lords on the 26th ultimo regarding the abolition of the duty on silver plate will do good not only by tending to accelerate the removal of an impost which only yields some £50,000 or £60,000 of revenue per annum and by putting an end to the present system of hall-marking described by Lord Cross as barbarous, but it will show the authorities of this country that it is not only in the House of Commons that the interests of Uncovenanted officers are cared for, and that the friends of the Service are powerful and numerous. We here allude partly to what the Earl of Northbrook said about the great hardship which the fall in silver had entailed on public servants in India who were paid in silver and had to make remittances to England in gold; but we were thinking chiefly of Lord Herschell's speech. His lordship said that, as chairman of the Royal Commission on Bimetallism, and as having been recently in India, he was strongly alive to the feeling there on this question. Whatever differences of opinion existed among the members of the Commission, they were all strongly impressed in considering the varying relations of silver to gold with two circumstances:—"One was the financial difficulty which was created for the Government of India, and the other was the hardship imposed on Civil Servants employed in India who were obliged to make remittances to this country." To return, however, to the plate duty, Lord Northbrook, speaking with the authority of an ex-Viceroy, and Lord Kimberley with that of an ex-Secretary of State for India, strongly urged the abolition of the silver plate duty; and Lord Herschell, who was, as we have seen, chairman of the Royal Commission appointed to inquire into the gold and silver currency, expressed himself to the effect that the adoption of such a course would be a step in the right direction. Lord Cross admitted he agreed with what the noble Earl, who brought forward the motion, had said in its favour, and argued that, as India had taken off duties in our manufactures, we owed something to the people of that country for the course they had taken. The discussion was most opportune, and cannot fail to have a good effect.

LUSHAI AND ITS INHABITANTS.

(Pioneer.)

The Lushais can scarcely be called a nation, though there is no doubt that, numerous as their clans are, stretching as they do from the Chittagong Hill Tracts border north to Cachar, east to Burma, with differences of dialect, yet their customs, ways, and habits are more or less the same everywhere. Two derivations can be gathered from the word Lushai—one Lu a head and shei to cut, i.e., head-cutters; another being Lu a head or hair and shay long, i.e., the long-haired ones. The latter derivation I believe to be the more correct one. As regards the origin of the race no satisfactory conclusion has been come to. The Lushais are as a race well set up, strongly built, though of somewhat small stature. They are capable of undergoing any amount of fatigue and hardships, and, as often happens when their rice supply is exhausted, live for several months on wild roots, plantains, and other fortuitous supplies of the forest.

The Lushai Hills may be described as a series of parallel ranges running north and south. These ranges increase in height the further east they go, till summits of over 7,000 feet are attained towards the Burma frontier. The hills are mostly covered with bamboos of all kinds, but after the Koladyne is crossed they become much scarcer, and are, I believe, not found at all in the Shendu country. Near Lungleh and all along the Bol-pui ranges oak trees grow in abundance; the wild cinnamon is common near this range also. The wild ferns, orchids, and other plants are numerous, and it would well pay any botanist to come here. Water is very plentiful all the year round, and is found in abundance at great heights. The soil appears to be very fertile. Of minerals there are, I believe, none—a very small quantity of salt is found and also a little iron; but gold and silver are unknown, the Lushai words for both being copied from the Bengali language, shona and tanka.

Elephants abound in the hill tracts, and produce very fine ivory. The two-horned rhinoceros is not by any means uncommon. I have by me a very fine pair of horns of one shot by a frontier policeman a few months ago. The wild gyals are very numerous in parts, and are not difficult to shoot. They are very clumsy in their movements, and I am told never show fight. The Sambhur and karkar are the only two kind of deer found. Wild pig abound, and bears are sometimes shot—the common black species. Of birds there are not very many varieties, and no one can travel much through the jungle without noticing how rarely he sees any. Jungle fowl, however, abound; also the muttoora and hill partridge. The Argus pheasant is, I believe, found; but I have not myself seen a specimen of one. On two occasions I have seen woodcock, but was unable to get a shot at them owing to the nature of the ground. The rivers abound with mahseer, and I have tried catching them at all seasons with spoon and fly, but with little success. Capital sport can be had in the way of fly-fishing for butchwa, which, though not growing to a very large size, readily rise to the fly.

A village is usually inhabited for a period of from three to five years, after which all the available jhooming ground is generally exhausted, and a fresh site has to be chosen. The village is always situated on the top of a high hill, and is in time of war fortified with a strong timber stockade. The houses are built of logs and bamboos, the roof being made of cane leaves bent over and thatched very closely, and the whole covered with split bamboos, making an arched roof. Outside the door of every house is a small raised platform, where the men sit out in the cool smoking and talking, and the women weaving their cloths. Every village of importance contains its Zalbuk; this is a large strongly built house, with a huge mud fireplace in the centre, and two verandahs at each end of the building. Anyone passing through the village can stay here, and have a night's rest. The supply of water in a Lushai village is generally very limited, sometimes but one small spring for the whole community; water is so scarce at times that I have seen the women going down by torchlight at about 4 A.M., so as to be the first at the spring.

The Lushai system of cultivation, known as jhooming, is as follows:—About January or February a portion of the hill side—thick bamboo jungle preferred—is cut down. It rapidly dries on the ground, and about the end of March or beginning of April the whole is set on fire; it quickly burns, leaving a thick coating of charcoal, which answers the purpose of manure. Then, when the first rain falls, out every one goes and puts into the ground rice, Indian corn, melons, pumpkins, yams, cotton, cucumbers and numerous other vegetables: these are all sown indiscriminately at one and the same time. Throughout the rains the women carefully weed the jhooms, and about November or December gather the crop. Soil thus prepared is never used twice. The following year the same operation is gone through in fresh jungle. Except the actual cutting of the timber and bamboos all the work is done by the women. When the crop is ripe it is cut, gathered and stored on the jhoom in houses made of bamboos, from which as it is required it is carried up to the village. These jhooms are sometimes half a day's journey from the village, and as they are always on the sides of steep hills the toil is sometimes very great.

Each village has its Chief or Lal, which is a hereditary title, though I have known instances of self-made Chiefs. The Chief's house is generally in the centre of the village, and much larger than the other houses. His position is curious; no outward respect of any kind is paid to him; his house is free to all the villagers. On one occasion I remember seeing a young fellow early one morning go to his Chief, who was sleeping off the effects of heavy potations of rice-beer overnight, give him a kick and tell him to get up, and no notice was taken of it. On the other hand the village furnishes the Chief with everything; he gets as his share of all animals killed one hind-leg and a portion of the entrails. His jhooms are all cut for him and his rice gathered in. On the war-path his word is absolute, and death is the punishment for any disobedience of his orders. The Chief's house is a harbour of refuge for all criminals, the only penalty being that the person doing so becomes the Chief's slave for life. When a Chief's son grows up his father generally first finds him a wife, and then sets him up with a certain number of his villagers, and he starts life for himself in a fresh village.

The men simply wear one long home-spun cotton garment and nothing more. These are either white with lines and patterns of red let in, or else blue with red and white lines. Their hair is bound at the back of their head in a common knot, and adorned with small combs sometimes made of ivory or of wood beautifully inlaid with some species of lac. Nearly all wear a small tuft of goat's hair tied round the neck with a bit of string. Others who are well to do have necklaces of amber strung together, the joints being sometimes two or three inches long and of great thickness. Very great value is attached to these. The women wear a short strip of dark blue cloth barely reaching to the knee, fastened round the loins by a string, and in the event of their being married the bosom is generally uncovered; unmarried girls wear a cloth lightly thrown over the breasts and shoulders. The lobes of the ear are frequently distended by circular discs of ivory up to two inches in diameter; failing ivory these earrings are made of wood or mud baked in the sun.

The most highly prized weapon is the gun; and such a gun too! The barrels and locks show the old Tower mark, the locks are flint locks; the stocks are in many instances made by the Lushais themselves. With these guns they kill elephants, though it is astonishing, considering their age and the thinness of their barrels, why they don't burst. I have known a charge of 14 drams of gunpowder extracted from one of them; certainly the gunpowder was of Lushai manufacture, but even in that case it is a powerful charge. The Lushais manufacture their gunpowder from sulphur, which is smuggled across from Burma and Cachar. After the gun almost the only weapon they have is a double-headed spear, one end having a broad flat blade coming to a sharp point, and the other end a short four-sided blade. A sort of short bladed sword in a sheath is also used by the Lushais occasionally.

The Lushais have domesticated animals, the most highly-prized of all being the gyal, a species of wild cattle originally tamed. The tame and wild gyal are exactly alike in appearance, and they often inter-breed. The tame gyals are very gentle and harmless. They are allowed to roam in the jungle all day and return at night of their own accord, when they are allowed to lick rock salt, of which they are passionately fond. No ceremony of any importance can be performed without killing a gyal and eating the meat. It is a curious fact that a Lushai, whose palate is generally not of a fastidious order, looks upon milk as quite unfit for consumption, and consequently the gyals are not milked: they give very rich milk, I believe, though small in quantity. The skin of the gyal is used for making shields, drums, &c. The Lushais also have goats, pigs, and fowls, and numerous dogs.

The Lushais, male and female, are very unclean in their habits. A bath is an unknown luxury. They are also very dirty feeders. They eat meat even in a putrid state, and the whole carcase of any dead or killed animal is eaten, entrails and all. I know of no living animal that they won't eat. One recherché dish of theirs is a puppy who is allowed to eat his full of rice, and is then killed and eaten, rice-stuffing and all. The men and women are great drinkers. They make two kinds of liquor, one a sort of beer made from rice, which is very good, and another a spirit, which is very strong and nasty. Scarcely a day goes by that drinking does not take place in the Chief's house. Both sexes are also inveterate smokers; their tobacco is poor stuff, and evidently not indigenous, as it is known as bay-plo—foreign drug. The men smoke from a common bowl, made from bamboo, with a long bamboo stem. The women's pipes are more elaborate, being fixed on to a small reservoir, into which the juice drops. This juice is poured out afterwards into a small gourd, and is taken in sips by the men. The custom is, if you wish to be courteous or friendly to your neighbour or acquaintance, you ask him if he will have tui bur. On his accepting he pours a few drops into his mouth, keeping them between his lower teeth and the back of his tongue (the idea is that this juice kills the tartar on the teeth), and after a few minutes spitting them out.

Crime is very rare. Adultery is almost unknown, the punishment for the offence being either the death of the woman or the mutilation of nose or ear. The co-respondent in these cases gets off free. The husband inflicts the punishment on his wife. Theft cases are of rare occurrence, and are settled generally by the Chief, who imposes a fine.

AT a special meeting of the Jute Manufacturers' Association, Calcutta, on Saturday, it was decided to reduce the production of heavy goods by stopping 10 per cent. of the sacking looms. This arrangement was, it is understood, adopted at the instance of one of the largest and most prosperous of the mills, in lieu of the original proposal to shorten work generally by another day per fortnight. As it will not lessen the production of yarn, and leaves the mills free as regards the manufacture of hessians, its effect upon the total outturn will probably not exceed a reduction of 5 or 6 per cent. The new agreement is to take effect not later than the first proximo, or from whatever earlier date may be fixed by the committee.

SRI KRISHNA TATACHARIAR, the celebrated Pundit of Conjeeveram, upon whom the title of Mâhamatopâdhyaya was conferred on Jubilee Day, February 16th, 1887, died last evening at Conjeeveram, deeply and widely regretted. He was for many years the warder of the Vishnu temple at Conjeeveram, but he retired from that position on the death of his wife. He was a very eloquent teacher and preacher, and was held in great respect for his scholarly attainments and personal worth.

IT was recently brought to notice that considerable pecuniary loss was sustained by the troops serving in Secunderabad owing to the difference in the rate of exchange between the Halli Sicca rupees of the Nizam's coinage and the Government rupees. It was urged that the British soldier's contract was to serve Government for a certain amount of English money daily, the full equivalent of which he should receive at the local rate current wherever he might be serving. The trouble appears to arise from a Government assay rate having been assessed years ago, and not having been since rectified, though the condition and value of silver currency have changed materially. To obviate this difficulty, the Government of India was asked to fix the rate of exchange, at which the troops are paid in Secunderabad, annually or half-yearly, as may be most expedient, in the same way as the English rate of pay of British soldiers serving in India is converted into Indian currency. But the Government of India is of opinion after making inquiry, that the present market rate of exchange of Halli sicca rupees into Government rupees is as near the average as any rate fixed yearly or half-yearly would probably prove to be; and therefore sees nothing to be gained by adopting the proposal.

A DREAM OF FAIR POPPIES.

(Pioneer.)

PART II.

And in my dream we stood within a factory in Patna city. Great jars of opium, numbered and marked, were ranged in rows—a vast array that made our M.P. groan. And these were all examined and re-marked, and samples taken from them and conveyed in a locked box to the laboratory, there to be tested and assayed. We saw the samples weighed and dried on heated tables, and on each drying plate was marked figures or letters corresponding to the marks upon the tagas or tin plates. The samples had been brought into the laboratory, so that it might be known which set of jars the samples came from; and while some samples dried and were reweighed to find out their exact consistency, others were tested for adulteration, and I was amazed to see the care that was bestowed upon the weighing, drying, and reweighing of the drug, the scales being so delicate and true that even a single hair did turn the scale. Some of the weights were so minute they looked like bits of silver hair, and had to be adjusted on the scale with pincers. The testing, too, was carefully gone through.

"Most interesting," remarked the man who had gone there to curse the whole concern. "Alas! that all this care should be bestowed upon so vile an object."

"Nay," said the courteous guide who showed us round the factory. "When you drink wine you like the purest and the best; and if you drink no wine, why then you take great care to have your temperance drinks as good as you can get them. John Chinaman does just the same, and if he could not trust the quality and pureness of our opium he would not buy it. The Chinese opium is to him what poor adulterated liquor is to Europeans. The poorer classes buy it because they cannot pay for what is better; the richer classes buy the best they can: and as we can supply the best, why should we not do so?"

"Because the trade is most iniquitous," replied our M.P. angrily. "What is that thick dark fluid in that vat?"

"That is lewa," said our guide." "It is used in making up the cakes, as you shall see. We make it from the opium that is not good enough to cake and pussewah, the thick fluid that is drained from the fresh opium by the cultivators. If it is not drained off it spoils the drug. We buy it separately. With this we mix the scraping from the jars, the pots and pans and baskets; nothing is wasted. This paste, or lewa, has been mixed and then assayed and brought to the exact consistency required."

"And do you really mix this trash, the very scourings of the pots and pans, with the good opium? A most disgraceful trick of trade."

"This is not trash; the trash is stored in other godowns and we use it——"

"You use it and are not ashamed to say so!" cried Samuel Small, M.P. "I'll tell this to the House!"

"Only for packing and dusting the outside of the cakes," remarked our guide, "as you shall see if you will follow me."

The storage vats contained great stores of opium. Each vat was marked with numbers like the jars, and as the coolies carried in the opium that had been assayed each jar was emptied into its own proper vat. Then other coolies came and carried off tins of the dark thick mass, all duly weighed, so many from each vat, and took them to the alligation vats, where they were mixed together. Each coolie carries twenty seers. A badge upon his neck, that corresponded with the marks upon an alligation board, guided the mixers as to which coolie's load to take. They called them two by two and threw their loads into the alligation vats and mixed them up. Some were of high and some of low consistence, and being mixed produced one fixed and certain rate of 75°. And to make sure the mixing was correct a testing tube, like a great cheese scoop, was thrust through the sticky mass and its contents again assayed. Then, being found correct, the opium was carried off to larger tanks that held about 750 maunds, or nearly twenty-eight tons a-piece, ready to be distributed for making cakes.

"Enough to send the whole of China into an endless sleep!" ejaculated Small, M.P., gazing with horror on the mass. "I wish I could destroy the whole of it!"

"I fancy you would do more harm than good," I ventured to remark. "John Chinaman is wide awake enough: he shows no sign of sleepiness about his business. The money that he pays our Indian Government all tends to benefit the people. But let us see the caking-room and how the cakes are made."

And we were led into a hall of vast dimensions divided into aisles and sections. Rows of men were sitting on each side on little wooden seats about three inches high, and each man had a tray before him and a brass bowl. Nimble-footed boys ran quickly to and fro and carried to each man a tin of opium, a cup of paste or lewa, leaves and water, all accurately weighed and meted out. With quick and skilful hands the men began to line the bowls with leaves, the leaves that had been made of soft white petals, heated and pressed—a good and whole one at the bottom of the bowl well pasted with the lewa; then the other leaves were torn in pieces of a proper size and fitted round the inside of the bowls well smeared with paste, the ends left hanging from the edge ready to fold across the precious drug that was to fill the centre, and strips of leaves were pasted crossways round the sides to bind the rest together. Then the men wet their hands lest any of the opium should stick, and taking it from off the tin placed it with care within the well-lined bowl. The hanging portions of the leaves were quickly pasted over it—a whole leaf over all, and every morsel of the paste and leaves was used, and nothing wasted. The nimble-footed boys ran off with each ball as it left the cake-maker's hands, and had it weighed and well examined by a sirdar at the door. Each ball was ticketed with the cake-maker's name or number and ranged amongst its fellows on the floor, when trash had been well dusted over it and a small earthen cup placed under it. And Small, M.P., found out what trash was, and was shown the trash-godown and how the poppy plant provided all that was required to make the cakes and pack them, for that trash was all the leaves and stems broken and sifted. And while we walked about a gong was sounded every now and then, and we asked why.

"The gong is sounded every twenty minutes," said the guide, "and each cake-maker's work is checked. In twenty minutes they can make five cakes or balls, and they are not allowed to make more or less, because, being paid by the cake, they would be anxious to make fast and scamp the work. At every stage the cakes are re-examined; the faulty ones are sorted out to be re-made, the perfect ones are put aside to dry, and stored upon the racks."

We saw the racks with many thousands of the cakes stored on them. Our M.P. groaned.

"How many cakes are stored here now?" he asked.

"I do not know," replied our guide, "but we can easily find out if you would like to wait and see the books; but there is storage room for 2,500,000 cakes; 1,420,000 were made last year."

"How truly awful," muttered Small, M.P.

"Yes," said our guide, misunderstanding him, "it means a lot of work. Every six days the cakes are taken down and turned to let the shell dry evenly and to preserve the shape. If any have been injured or grub-eaten they are repaired before they are put back upon the rack. Boys are employed upon this work of turning and transferring, because they creep between the racks more easily than men, and it is easy work. See how they catch the balls."

Between the racks small boys were perched, who dropped the balls, each in its cup, straight down to other boys, who caught and placed them on the ground. At other racks they passed them up those that had been turned, and put them in their places. Two at a time they passed them up, poising them cleverly upon their palms high up above their heads.

From hand to hand they passed them up to the topmost rack of all. Busy as bees the little fellows were, quite happy and content.

"Poor little chaps," our guide remarked. "The Factory Act will not be welcome here. These boys will many of them have to go because they are under age. The work is light and just what suits them—running about and tossing balls from hand to hand. They earn their wages now and can buy food enough to satisfy themselves. When the Act comes in force they will go hungry many a day."

"The few must suffer for the many," remarked Experience sadly.

"Besides," said Small, M.P., "this factory will close when I have laid the case before the House."

"Then I fear many will have to suffer for the few. You have already heard how many cultivators are employed growing opium. Now think of all the workmen in this one factory—men and boys; of all the industries that profit by this manufacture—pottery and basket-making, the timber trade. Look at those piles of boxes and the stacks of timber in this yard, and consider the number of hands they pass through and the money that they represent."

Before us rose a vision of a forest. Sal trees were felled and lying on the ground—great giants lying low—and men were sawing busily, while women lit the fires and cooked their food; and then the vision vanished and we saw great piles of wooden cases, lined and tarred, ready to pack the opium in; huge piles of timber stacked and logs unsawn, and everywhere the busy hum of wheels. Machines were sawing, planing, drilling, and doing all kinds of work. And as I watched quick wheels revolve, dovetailing planks and cutting them as if by magic, I felt curious to see where all the power was stored that moved the many wheels. So we were led to where the iron horses were at work; and while we looked and wondered, as one always wonders, at this mighty force that rules the world and yet is ruled by man, a blindness stole upon us and we could not see; and when the blindness passed away, behold! again we stood in fields of fair white poppies. And still the shadowy form of pale Experience guided us.

"This," she said, gravely, as we gazed around, wondering to see strange forms and sights, "this is China, where you say the cultivation of the poppy is prohibited under penalty of death, where the people live in moral degradation caused by the opium trade of India. Methinks they look less poor and less degraded than the ryots of Behar, and if they work in fear of death they work right cheerfully."

"I will not trust your guidance," cried our M.P. angrily. "You move along the regulation groove; you show us only what you wish to show, and hide the seamy side. Let us move on, and I will find the truth out for myself."

He led us to a town, and grew quite jubilant as he beheld the opium shops around him.

"See!" he cried, "See! Was I not right? Is this a joyful or a pleasant sight?"

We stood within an opium shop, a veritable den, and it was not a pleasant or a joyful sight.

"Neither is this," said Experience, as she drew a scene before our eyes as from a magic lantern—a London gin-shop just before the closing hour. "Will you judge all England from a scene like that? All China from a scene like this?"

"I judge by figures. Bring forth your books and let me see how much the Indian revenue makes out of such a den as this. Bring them forth quick," I say, "you scoundrel of an opium dealer."

But the scoundrel had no books. Then, being full of zeal, Small, M.P., sallied forth and caught a well-dressed Mandarin by the sleeve, and asked him many questions, and the good Mandarin smiled, and told him many things. He said that Indian opium was not sold in low-class opium shops; the poorer classes could not afford to smoke it, as it was too dear, and so they all smoked home-made opium instead.

"But how about the law?" I asked. "We have been told that there is a law to stop the cultivation of the plant in China; the punishment is death."

The Mandarin laughed and chuckled in great glee, and then explained that Chinese laws were never understood by Englishmen; that perhaps there was a law to that effect, but no one cared. In 1878 a proclamation was sent forth by Governor General Ting Kung-pao ordering the prompt destruction of the growing opium crop and raising the lekin or land transport duty on the drug that should be grown in China; and with this curious two-sided proclamation private instructions were sent out to bid the officers who should receive it to carry out the latter portion only, and give due attention to the collection of the lekin; also to endeavour to prevent the plant from being grown close to the public roads. The people knew the meaning of the proclamation and paid the tax; and now the poppy fields extend up to the public roads, and even to the very walls of many of the cities.

"Why should we not grow opium?" asked the Mandarin, in broken English that sounded strangely in our ears. "Our people want it, as your people want their beer? The crop is paying, for we grow it on our land when other crops are off the ground. You see an opium den like this and cry out against the sin of opium-growing. Are there no drinking shops in your own English towns where men go mad from drink and fight and kill each other? We only smoke and sleep. And do you therefore cry: 'Let no more hops be grown, no spirit made, no vineyards cultivated?' Do you demand of France and Spain to give up growing grapes because all nations like to drink good wine?"

"We cannot make you give up growing opium," said Small, M.P.; "but what we can do and will is this: make our own Indian Government refrain from pandering to the vices of another nation by forcing opium into China."

"And if your Indian Government consents to play the fool for you what think you will result? Will Chinamen smoke less? Not so; they'll grow a little more themselves, and perhaps be wise enough to learn to make it like the good Indian opium; and so India will lose her revenue and we shall profit by it. But we are well content to buy your Indian opium—it is always pure. We know its strength—it is not mixed or bad, as our own always is. Much care and trouble are expended on it, and when we buy it we know what we buy and get our money's worth. Why should we, who can afford to smoke the best, put up with bad, adulterated stuff to please a few M.P.'s who think they know our business better than we do ourselves? Go to! You drink your champagne, while your workmen drink their beer. Why should not Chinese gentlemen smoke Indian opium while the poorer classes smoke Chinese?"

"My dear sir," pleaded Small, M.P., "do but consider for a moment; think of the terrible effects of opium-eating—the moral and the physical decay it leads to."

"I don't believe it," shouted the Mandarin. "I am just as strong as you, and when I lay upon my mother's knee she puffed it in my face. You see the abuse of opium in this den and in many others too; but go out into our villages amongst the rural population, who have smoked opium since their hands could hold the pipe, and see if they are not as strong and healthy as your non-opium eating ryots are."

"But," again pleaded Samuel Small, "the evil is a growing one. See the enormous quantities that India supplies."

"Would you like to see the Custom House returns? A friend of mine will show them to us if you will come with me."

He mused as we walked on, and then burst forth: "Good Mr. M.P., you are right, I see. Why should we put this money into India's pocket? If the trade was stopped our land would rise in price. It would be well for me and for my fellow Mandarins who own large poppy lands; and we could learn to make good opium too, and all this revenue would stay in China. Yes, it would be well for me."

"But not for me and for my fellow Mandarins who own no poppy land," cried out another Chinaman. "We have no wish to raise the price of land. We want our Indian opium. Get you gone, you and your fellow moralists, and mind your own affairs. We are not children to be schooled by you. You say you do it for our good; may be it is so, but we want you not. You surely are not hoping that the whole of China will grow good and moral and give up opium-smoking if you stop the trade with India! Come in with me and you shall see our books. Why, you are trying to dry up a mighty sea by checking one small river."

He led us to an office and drew forth great books and maps, and showed us all the Custom House accounts. In them we saw—and Samuel Small did note it—that the trade returns showed how in the season of 1877-78, 83,317 chests passed through the Custom House; in 1878-79, 82,151; in 1879-80, 94,835; in 1880-81, 82,392; in 1881-82, 78,553; in 1882-83, 80,696; in 1883-84, 83,728; in 1884-85, 75,391; in 1885-86, 76,115; in 1886-87, 83,124.

"I do not see much increase," said the Mandarin. "In this other book you see now much is grown in China. In Sczuchuan alone 177,000 piculs (each picul equals 133⅓lbs. avoirdupois). In Sczuchuan and in West China over 224,000 piculs are grown—2¼ times as much as India imports. As to the rest of China——"

"That will do," said Small, M.P. "I do not care to waste my time on figures. I will go forth and find out for myself if all you say is true."

He went and wandered up and down the land, growing more sad each day.

"It is a problem that I cannot solve," he said. "I cannot tell which road to take; each one seems right—and wrong. I will go home."

We flew across the sea and stood in the great House of Commons, and while he waited for his turn to speak, sleep fell upon him and he dreamed a dream within a dream, and in his dream he stood again where he had broken the fair poppies down and saw the desolation he had caused—the misery that reigned. And there was none to help, for Government was poor, and he began to learn how much a country suffers when its Government is poor.

"'Tis only for a time," he murmured in his sleep.

"Not so," said sad Experience. "You cannot see how far the roots extend. You can curtail a rich man's income without fear of starving him, but when an industry is ruined it is the poor who suffer."

He woke and met her calm, deep eyes, and then at last he learnt the lesson she had tried to teach, and understood that even in trying to do good we may do harm, and we should take great care that the harm does not exceed the good.

"If you could slay this dragon, well and good; then 'twould be well to fight him tooth-and-nail; but you can only prick him with a pin and wound a friend in doing it," I said.

And then he rose and spoke in other fashion than his friends had thought. He laid before them all the figures in his book, and read his notes and sighed.

"The case is this," he said: "China grows opium in large quantities; but yet the Chinese like the Indian opium best, because it is the purest. If we stop the trade we shall not stop the Chinese from growing or from eating opium. They want it and will have it, and will only grow the more if India grows none. But, on the other hand, to stop the cultivation of the poppy plant will ruin Indian ryots and drain the Government, which is already poor—so poor that, as my honourable friend the Under-Secretary told you, the just claims of its servants cannot be listened to or satisfied. How, then, can we expect it to give up such an important portion of its revenue merely as a protest against the Chinese vice of opium-eating? Granted that it were well in the great cause of national morality to enter our protest and stop the trade, will England pay the cost?"

A shout of "No" was echoed through the land, and with a start I woke and found myself amongst the poppy fields watching the women gathering the soft white petals of the flowers.

ESME.

The Editor of the Illustrated Naval and Military Magazine is to be congratulated at having given to his readers this month one of the best numbers which have been brought out under his able guidance. The contents are excellent and varied, and show great care and judgment in their selection, and the illustrations are both numerous and good.

Our old friend Colburn's United Service, whose mellowness in October, 1889, is a proof of healthy age, is, however, to our humble thinking, somewhat heavy in the Service articles, especially those relating to the Navy. He is, however, light enough in fiction; but would not military readers like to see a little more concerning their own profession in the pages of a journal which counts so many patrons in all the ranks?

THE proceeds of six sales of Bengal opium and five months' pass duty on opium exported from Bombay amount to Rs. 4,18,76,970, or Rs. 24,81,970 better than the estimate. Nearly 22½ lakhs of the improvement come from Bengal.

THE officiating vacancy of a brigade command in Upper Burma, caused by General Wolseley taking six months' leave, will be filled up by the Madras authorities, as the garrison is under their control. General Wolseley belonged to Bengal, but was transferred to the Madras establishment on being appointed to command at Mandalay.

RATHER a good story reaches a contemporary from Delhi At a court-martial there recently the prisoner's defence was that he had been to "Hindu Rao's house," which is on the famous Ridge, and, as everyone in Delhi knows, is a convalescent hospital. The court-martial concluded, and the proceedings were duly forwarded. Soon after they were returned by the department concerned, with instructions for Hindu Rao's evidence to be taken. The old Maratha has been in his grave for many years.

THE FATAL RIOTS AT ROHTAK.

Further particulars regarding the Rohtak riots at Allahabad, September 12th, state that a party of some 200 Hindoos, all armed with lathis, assembled near the Mahomedan burying ground, and when the Tazia procession was entering the Kerbela intercepted it and commanded the Mahomedans to return. The police accompanying the procession, who were commanded by Mr. Dunsford, District Superintendent, in person, would not permit this interference, and rioting at once followed. Mr. Dunsford, finding his force too weak to cope with the disturbance, ordered the police to fire a blank volley into the rioters; but this having no effect he was obliged to use buckshot, killing and wounding many rioters. He himself had a very narrow escape, one of the rioters having made a murderous assault on him when his attention was otherwise engaged. A police orderly, however, promptly came to his assistance, and very pluckily cut down the murderous villain. A strong police guard was at once posted at the Treasury, with orders to fire at anybody who might approach within a certain distance. Meanwhile, free fighting had broken out between the rival parties, and the whole city and civil station were in an uproar. The Deputy Commissioner, Major Rennick, at once telegraphed to the neighbouring districts for assistance, and caused proclamation to be issued in the city to the effect that, if all disturbances did not at once cease, the police would parade the streets and fire indiscriminately into the riotous mob, and that all the leaders on both sides would be held personally responsible for the restoration and maintenance of peace, serious notice being taken of their conduct if hostilities did not immediately terminate. This proclamation, and the knowledge that the reference to the police was not an empty threat, had the effect of breaking up the riotous gatherings as soon as the police came in sight; but free fighting was continued almost incessantly wherever the police, owing to the limited force available for patrol duty, were found to be absent. With the arrival of 100 police from Delhi on ekkas, and the appearance of other reinforcements, the city quieted down, though the presence of a strong police force is still necessary, as excitement remains at its highest pitch; and the withdrawal of the reinforcements just now would be the prelude to a renewal of rioting. The Bunniahs are said to have been at the bottom of the disturbances. Several Hindoo rioters are now in custody. They state they were paid by the Bunniahs to attack the Tazia procession. All sorts of exaggerated rumours are in circulation in Delhi, and bad characters on both sides are taking every advantage of the revival of the tension between the rival religionists. Owing to a bazaar canard to the effect that the Mahomedans of Delhi would rise and revenge themselves on the Hindoos for the insult offered to their co-religionists at Rohtak, many shops in the Chandni Chowk were kept closed yesterday, and the Native leaders are endeavouring at the present moment to reassure their followers, and induce them to open their shops. Prayers have been offered up in the public mosques on behalf of the Mahomedans of Rohtak. Government is being called upon to mete out to the Hindoos such punishment for the affront offered to the faith of Islam as will fully satisfy the Mahomedans throughout India. Altogether, the effect at Delhi of the Rohtak riots has been to revive to a certain extent the bitter feelings engendered by those of October, 1886. There are being disseminated all kinds of wild stories, one of them being that fifty Mahomedans were burnt alive by the Hindoos at Rohtak, while the Government officers stood by powerless to interfere.

ORDERS have been issued, it is said, for restricting in future the number of armed retainers composing the retinue of a native personage of distinction when travelling in British territory. The sudden influx into a station of such a number of armed men as frequently compose these retinues is said to cause at times considerable embarrassment to the civil authorities, and we believe the action now taken is the outcome of complaints which have been made to the Government of India. The maximum number of armed men to compose these retinues in future in British territory has been fixed at thirty, we understand.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

THE TRUE STORY OF DULEEP SING.—I.

MESSRS. W. H. ALLEN AND Co. have just published a book which will be read with considerable interest, not only by Anglo-Indians, but by the English public generally. It is a memoir of the late Sir John Login, compiled by his widow, but is entitled Sir John Login and Duleep Sing, who was, it may be remembered, made the ward of Sir John by Lord Dalhousie, and continued to be so until the close of 1857, when the Court of Directors permitted the Maharajah to assume the management of his own affairs. Lady Login states in her preface that it is probable that the work would not have been undertaken by her but for the fact that the interest taken by her late husband in his ward invested it with an interest which has assumed greater proportions in consequence of the recent action of the Maharajah. "For many years the Maharajah," she adds, "lived in our house; he spontaneously adopted Christianity under our roof; and he developed many instincts alike generous and calculated to inspire regard. I have always taken the deepest interest in him, and no one has been more grieved than I have been at the line of conduct he has lately so heedlessly adopted. Still, condemning that conduct as thoroughly as anyone, feeling that the world regards it as a base return for great kindness, I am anxious that the world should know that there is not only something, but a great deal to be said on the other side." After a perusal of Lady Login's pages the reader will come to the same conclusion; for she tells from her own knowledge the story of the first connection of the Maharajah with the British to this day. In an admirable introduction to the book, written by Colonel Malleson, with all the clear insight and graphic power of that distinguished historian, we are informed that as no living being was so thoroughly acquainted as Lady Login with all the circumstances attending the Maharajah's youth, early training, development into manhood and subsequent career, and as no one could tell so accurately the history of those monetary relations towards the Government which have influenced so unfortunately the later actions of the Maharajah, he—Colonel Malleson—suggested this work. "I respectfully urged," he says, "the advisability in the interests of truth and justice of Lady Login writing from the stores of documents in her possession a connected history of the Maharajah's life, from the date of the connection with him of the late Sir John Login to the time of the cessation of that connection. The story might, I ventured to suggest, form one of the main features of the life of one of the noblest servants of the late East India Company—Sir John Login himself." With the story of that life we shall deal at another time, merely endorsing now what Colonel Malleson says—that to a truer-hearted, more conscientious, or better man, it would have been impossible to consign a ward than to the late Sir John Login. In Lady Login's work she tells not only how well her husband performed his duty to the young prince, but she tells all that she knows of Duleep Singh, and of the causes which have for the moment turned him into the bitter foe to England which he declares himself to be. Colonel Malleson, who is personally acquainted with the Maharajah, says that Duleep Singh was a man of trustful, generous, and open disposition, but that he hated business matters, and did not care to bother himself about details.

"So long as Sir John Login lived he was happy. Though often urged to effect a settlement, or rather, to insist that the India Office should make a definite settlement with him, he always put it off. He was content to have Sir John between him and the India Office. After Sir John's death, Colonel Oliphant, whom he appointed equerry and controller of his household, soon gained an ascendancy which produced similar feelings of trust. He was then living at Elveden, where he had the best shooting in England; and when I stayed with him there in 1871 he told me he was the happiest man in the world. When I next saw him, about ten years ago, he told me he was the most miserable. His words were to the effect that, subsequently to Colonel Oliphant's death, he had discovered that he had been cheated out of his kingdom, and out of the private estates which his father had possessed, and that he could get no settlement from the India Office; that he had still hopes that he might ultimately succeed, but that the treatment he had received had well-nigh broken his heart. He complained bitterly that no provision had been made for his family. When at Elveden he said he was in constant hopes that he might receive an English title, and with that title such a sum attached to it inalienably as might make him forget that he had ever sat on the footsteps of a throne; which hope, he added, was growing dimmer and dimmer, till it was well-nigh extinguished. He told me this one evening that I dined with him at the Garrick Club, of which he was a member. The time, to the best of my recollection, was 1879-80."

The story told by Lady Login is one which cannot but reflect severely upon British officials in high places. The later conduct of Duleep Singh is not extenuated nor excused; it is unhesitatingly condemned; but as Colonel Malleson says, there are few who will rise from the perusal of this book without admitting that the Maharajah has suffered great wrongs, and without asking "whether it is yet too late, by a generous concession, to bring back the lost sheep to the fold he quitted in despair?"

Fourth Tour: To Assam, beginning the tour on the 17th, and returning to headquarters in about a month.

Brigadier-General Barnard resumed the command of the District yesterday on return from privilege leave.

The 2nd Battalion of the 3rd Gurkhas may possibly be employed in connection with the Lushai and Chin operations, if it is finally decided to send a column from the side of Cachar.

The trooping programme for the Lushai expedition and Burma reliefs is now being arranged at Simla by Captain Hext, Director of Indian Marine, in communication with the Military authorities.

Colonel Tillard, C.B., Royal (late Bengal) Artillery, is to be posted to Delhi as Colonel on the Staff, the nearest approach to a brigade command that he can reach now that there are so few 2nd Class Districts.

Colonel Westmacott, at Poona, recently informed his men—the 28th Bombay Pioneers—that they had been selected for service in the Lushai expedition. The men vociferously cheered again and again. They have been ordered to proceed forthwith to Chittagong.

It is likely that some action will be taken by the Government of India for improving the status of the Silladar Cavalry within the next few months, the whole question being now under careful consideration in the Military Department.

The officiating vacancy of a brigade command in Upper Burma, caused by General Wolseley taking six months' leave, will be filled up by the Madras authorities, as the garrison is under their control. General Wolseley belonged to Bengal, but was transferred to the Madras establishment on being appointed to command at Mandalay.

The retirement from the Indian Army of Colonel Sir J. West Ridgeway, the present Under-Secretary in Ireland, is formally notified in the Gazette. Few men, as far as can be seen, will have less reason to regret the abandonment of an Indian career, bright as Colonel Ridgeway's prospects were at the moment when he severed his connection with the service.

It is probable that Major Gilchrist, Military Secretary to the Resident at Hyderabad, will be granted another term of office in his appointment, which lapses next January. Major Gilchrist is one of the few officers at Hyderabad who have performed their duties to the satisfaction of everyone, and Mr. Fitzpatrick is most anxious to retain his services, General Stewart, Commanding the Hyderabad Contingent, cordially approving.

Major Creighton, Paymaster of the 7th Hussars, submitted to the Commander-in-Chief in India a petition against the proceedings of the court-martial at Secunderabad. The petition had not reached Sir Frederick Roberts at the time of his confirming the sentence, but the legal points raised are not considered to be sustained in any way, and the sentence of imprisonment, which involves cashiering, will be upheld. The principal plea put forward was that the Advocate-General misdirected the Court in telling them to treat the officers' mess money which was lodged in Major Creighton's hands as public money, the contention being that it was private property, and also that the proof of his having misapplied it "to his own use" was not made out.

The twentieth annual report on the East Indian Railway Volunteer Rifle Corps has just been issued, and shows a season of admirable work in that fine regiment. The strength on the last day of March this year was 1,191, and of these 1,141 were "efficients"; the result is that the corps in the period under review drew the largest capitation grant since its formation. The figure of merit was 173·80, or 11·82 higher than last year; and the percentage of marksmen 21·41, being an increase of ·67 as compared with the record preceding. Some remarkably good shooting was done during the musketry course by individual members, Lieutenant Harry Dale, of Q Company, heading the list with 259 points, and the nine next succeeding him making from 253 to 243. The interest in Volunteering among the railway subordinates must be very keen when, as evidenced by the nominal roll, even chaplains and surgeons attend drills.

The Civil and Military Gazette says:—"The steps about to be taken for the additional security of the North-Western Railway are anything but superfluous. At present, no doubt, there are a thousand or twelve hundred Volunteers enrolled along the line, but in the event of internal disturbance in India they would be required, most of them, for their ordinary duties and could not be concentrated at any threatened point or be available for service beyond four miles from any given section of the line. As Volunteers they are not regularly attested, and are subject to no genuine military discipline or regulations, and may keep up to the mark of efficiency or not pretty much as they please. It is with a view to supplement aid of this nature that the proposals for a military corps d'élite for the North-Western Railway have been made. The principal suggestion placed before the military authorities is that a certain number of men whose time is within a year of expiry should be entertained by the railway in order that, at the end of the year instead of leaving India, they may have become acquainted with the most easily learnt railway duties and remain with the company as a species of trained body, attested in the ordinary way, movable in a body if need be from point to point, and at a distance from the line should the emergency arise. Some plan of the kind is especially requisite for a line like the North-Western, and we trust that the authorities at home will not stand in the way of what is an important step in frontier defence."

THE CHIN-LUSHAI EXPEDITION.

Simla, Sept. 12.

It has been definitely settled that Colonels Symons and Tregear command the Chin and Lushai Expeditions, with full political and military control. The Cachar Column has been countermanded. The 28th Bombay Infantry takes the place of the 200 men 1st Madras Pioneers.

The following troops form the Chin Column:—Bengal Mountain Battery, two guns; one company, Queen's Own Sappers and Miners; 1st Battalion Cheshire Regiment; 1st Battalion King's Own Scottish Borderers; 42nd Goorkhas; 4th Goorkhas; 10th, 33rd, and 38th Bengal Infantry; and Madras Infantry as may be detailed by the Madras Commander-in-Chief.

The Lushai Column will consist of Staff Officer, Captain F. J. Watkins; Field Intelligence Officer, Captain J. Shakespear; Assistant Field Intelligence Officer, Captain O. A. Chambers; Commanding Royal Engineers, Captain H. Leach; Chief Commissariat Officer, Captain W. Bond; Superintendent of Signalling, Captain A. Browne; and Assistant ditto, Lieut. H. Birkbeck. Troops:—3rd Bengal Infantry, 2nd Battalion, 2nd Goorkhas, a company of Bengal Sappers and Miners, and the 28th Bombay Pioneers.

The Chin troops will be ready to start from Gangaw on the 2nd of December.

Simla, Sept. 13.

The general object of the Expedition is, firstly, to punitively visit certain tribes that have raided and committed depredations in British territory; secondly, to subjugate the tribes as yet neutral, but now, by force of circumstances, brought within the sphere of British dominion; thirdly, to explore and open out as much as time allows only as yet the partly known country lying between Burma and Chittagong; lastly, if the necessity arises, to establish semi-permanent posts i the regions visited, so as to insure complete pacification and the recognition of British power. With the Chittagong column, the principal medical officer will be Surgeon-Major A. B. Seaman; Transport Officers—Captain Ussher, 7th Dragoon Guards, Lieutenant T. Davidson, Leinster Regiment, and Mr. Willoughby, 2nd Bengal Cavalry. Chief Commissariat Officer, Captain W. Bond; Assistants, Lieutenant A. Phillips and Captain Allen. Survey officers will be detailed by the Survey Department. The troops, with the Chin force will be considered on field service from the date of concentration, and the Chittagong troops from the day they leave Demagiri. The equipment will be as light as possible. The transport for the Chin column will consist of two thousand Manipuri coolies, and one thousand Punjabi coolies and two thousand mules. The Chittagong transport will comprise sixty-two elephants, one thousand Punjabi coolies, fifteen hundred Lushai coolies, and two-hundred mules. There will be six field hospitals for the Chin, and two for the Chittagong forces. The first battalion (King's Own) Scottish Borderers, 38th Bengal Infantry, and the 2nd Battalion 4th Goorkhas will proceed to Burma on the ordinary relief scale. On arrival at Rangoon they will receive orders from the Commander-in-Chief of the Madras Army as to the disposal of heavy baggage."

THE FLOODS AT MOORSHEDABAD.

CALCUTTA, SEPT. 10.

The river has fallen six inches at Moorshedabad. The water is still rising in the eastern part of the city from water through the Rampal Breach. The floods are extending over a wide expense of country in Krishnagore, Goalundo, Alamdangah, Pumarkole, and Durgapore, where the crops and the villages are now under several feet of water. The paddy crop, which was nearly ripe for reaping, is completely destroyed, as is also the jute crop, and the sugar cane is seriously damaged. The villagers living in machans on the high lands are without the necessaries of life, and are obliged to swim to the nearest market for food. No boats are available. Cattle are perishing for want of pasturage. Three miles of the railway between Kumarkali and Kashka is under water. Trains are passing over slowly. The Mahajans have exhausted the supplies in their granaries. Rice for immediate relief is required.

ALLEGED OBJECTIONABLE SCHOOL BOOKS.

The Indian Standard and Bombay Guardian have unintentionally, we are quite sure, writes the Bombay Educational Record, done grave injustice to the Government Educational Department in the course of their strictures on certain Gujarati books which have been circulated in Gujariti girls' schools during the last twelve months. The books are entitled "Stri Dharm Prakash" and "Sundari Guna Mandir," and inculcate in a full and stringent form the orthodox view of the absolute subjection of wife to husband. They are in fact elaborate expansions of the well-known text of Manu (V.154):—"Though destitute of virtue, or seeking pleasure elsewhere, or devoid of good qualities, yet a husband must be constantly worshipped as a god by a faithful wife." Our contemporaries justly regard such a degree of subjection as this as degrading, and expressed themselves, as they are fully entitled to do, vigorously against the doctrine and its consequences. Had they stopped here no one would have had any right to complain; but they go further, and seek to involve the Educational Department into a kind of complicity with the doctrine of the books, on the ground, apparently, that it has permitted or has not prevented their circulation in girls' schools. It is here that the injustice has crept in, and that a clear exposition of the relation of the Department to schools appears to be called for. The fact is that there are two distinct classes of schools, with regard to which the responsibility of the Educational Department is widely different. There is the class of schools maintained out of public funds, whether Government, Local Board, or Municipal, and controlled by officers or bodies exercising powers delegated to them, directly or indirectly, by the State. Here the Department is fairly responsible for the character of every book used, whether as a class-book or purchased out of public money to be used as a gift book. We believe we are correct in saying that the two books mentioned above have never been used in this class of schools, and that not a rupee of public money has ever been expended in the purchase of copies to be presented as prizes. But there is a totally different class of schools—the "aided" schools, which receive subventions of public money on account of the secular education they give, and in regard to which a moment's reflection will show that the Department could have no power to interfere with any matters or books outside the standard curriculum of studies, except, of course, on the ground of their involving something morally objectionable. It is in these schools that the two books in question circulated, and the Department is consequently no more responsible for the peculiar doctrines of Manu taught in one aided school than for the tenets of Judaism inculcated in a Jewish one, or the precepts of Loyola which commend themselves to the responsible authorities of a third. These are matters outside the sphere of either official approval or official disapproval, and in regard to which it is quite certain that the intervention of any Government Inspector would in the long run do more harm than good. In all matters affecting the religion of the people of India, and not clearly falling within the domain of morals, the Department is, from the nature of the case, as well as by the express and often-repeated orders and promises of Government "perfectly neutral"; and it was, as we said, unjust for our contemporaries to seek to fasten upon it an approval of the contents of a book merely because it does not officially condemn them. And we may add that it would, in our view be most unfortunate at this juncture of an idea were to get abroad that the attendance of Native girls at school is incompatible with the preservation of orthodox Native sentiments regarding feminine duty and propriety. Such an idea would array against us the whole of respectable Hindoo woman kind and make school hateful to women, and would at once close the surest if not the only road to future amelioration. Our contemporaries are also, we think, somewhat unfair to the book itself, but that is a detail of less consequence than the principle involved.

THE decision that the guaranteed mamlatdars are to be summarily dismissed, unheard, and uncompensated, has caused widespread excitement and discontent among the Native official community. The English name and prestige they declared to be discredited. The ruined mamlatdars are driven to law, and heavy damages will be claimed. Suits will be instituted against the Secretary of State, the Bombay Government, and personally against the Duke of Connaught, Lord Reay, the Hon. Mr. Richey, and the Hon. Mr. Naylor, who gave the guarantee.

A POLICE OFFICER IN TROUBLE.—The Civil and Military Gazette's correspondent in Simla telegraphs:—A District Superintendent of Police in the Punjab has been recently suspended for six months and reduced to the first grade of Assistant District Superintendent of police, on account of financial embarrassments and improper borrowing of money from his subordinates." Our contemporary adds:—"The District Superintendent of Police is, we understand, Mr. O'Connor, late District Superintendent of Police, Jhelum. The Deputy Inspector-General of Police went to Jhelum lately to hold an inquiry on the subject."

HIS many friends will be glad to hear of the lucky escape of Mr. H. Whymper, C.I.E., from what might easily have been a fatal accident, writes the Civil and Military Gazette. He was travelling with a companion, by special tonga from Murree to Pindi on the 8th September, when the driver at the end of an incline leading down to a bridge over a ravine turned the horses over the khud instead of on to the bridge. The animals fell over the parapet and were suspended in mid air by the harness for fully seven minutes, the tonga fortunately being jammed against a rock. Ultimately the horses fell, one being injured beyond recovery. The other escaped with but little hurt apparently, which was wonderful, considering that the fall was in the first instance down a stone wall about twenty feet in height.

A PRISONER REQUESTS THAT HE MAY BE HANGED.—Prisoner Peddireddy Kristnareddy was recently charged before Mr. C. Ramachendra Iyer, the Acting Sessions Judge of Nellore, with having, on the 29th June last, murdered his wife Nagamma, aged about 40 years. The medical evidence showed that there were three wounds on the head of the deceased woman; that the skull had been fractured, and that the fracture was sufficient to cause immediate death. There was no direct evidence to prove the murder, and the whole case rested upon the detailed confessional statement of the accused. Before the Sessions Court the prisoner pleaded guilty, and repeating the confessional statement which he had made to the committing Magistrate, asked the Court to pass upon him sentence of death, and not one of imprisonment. He said:—"I shall state the truth. The Court should not let me go. I cannot suffer imprisonment. If I am sentenced to be hanged I shall state the whole case." He then went on to state that he had for some months closely watched his wife, whom he had suspected of infidelity, and that on one occasion he caught her in the act of committing adultery with a goldsmith. He detailed the circumstances of the murder, and wound up his confessional statement thus:—"I request that I may be ordered to be hanged. I do not want any other punishment. I want the property that was on the dead body to be delivered to my two children in my presence. I want to see my children. I wish that four silver gasulu worth Rs. 16 should be converted into bangles, and that I should be allowed to wear them for four ghadias, and then they should be given to my daughter." The Session Judge was of opinion that the murder was a premeditated one, and, concurring with the assessors, found prisoner guilty of murder, and sentenced him to be hanged. This sentence was confirmed by the High Court.

THE Masonic ball at Simla, on September 17th, was a great success. The rooms were beautifully decorated. Lord and Lady Lansdowne arrived shortly before ten, and were received by the Masons, who made an avenue up to the dais. The Knight Templars drew their swords and made an arch for their Excellencies to pass under. The effect was very beautiful.

DR. SPENCER'S ASTHMA CURE.

Mr. D. FITZPATRICK, of Drumcree, Killucan, Westmeath, Ireland, writes:—"Thank God the two bottles of Dr. Spencer's Asthma Cure got from you cured me of the Asthma. I am over sixty years of age, and for the last twenty-five years I have suffered as much from Asthma (I believe) as any other Asthmatic could suffer, often for nights without ever lying on a bed, but I thank the good God I can now sleep as comfortable as I could wish for. I only wish every poor Asthmatic sufferer would give your cure a trial, for it is a great boon."

The public are hereby notified that the above remedy is prepared from a recently improved formu'a of Dr. Spencer (which has nothing to do with any other formula) and is sold, under his name, by us, who are the sole prorietors, and in no way connected with any other person or firm. We will send our Pamphlet "Asthma, its Treatment and Cure" (Third edition) by E. Edwin Spencer, M.A., M.D., &c., post free, on application

IS THE GREAT SPECIFIC FOR CHOLERA,

DIARRHŒA, DYSENTERY.

COUGHS, COLDS, ASTHMA, BRONCHITIS.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE.—Dr. J. C. BROWNE (late Army Medical Staff) DISCOVERED a REMEDY to denote which he coined the word CHLORODYNE. Dr. Browne is the SOLE INVENTOR, and, as the composition of Chlorodyne cannot possibly be discovered by Analysis (organic substances defying elimination), and since the formula has never been published, it is evident that any statement to the effect that a compound is identical with Dr. Browne's Chlorodyne must be false.

This Caution is necessary, as many persons deceive purchasers by false representations.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE.—Vice Chancellor Sir W. PAGE WOOD stated publicly in Court that Dr. J. COLLIS BROWNE was UNDOUBTEDLY the INVENTOR of CHLORODYNE, that the whole story of the defendant Freeman was deliberately untrue, and he regretted to say it had been sworn to.—See The Times, July 13th, 1864.

GENERAL BOARD of HEALTH, London, REPORT that it ACTS as a CHARM, one dose generally sufficient. Dr. GIBBON, Army Medical Staff, Calcutta, states: "2 DOSES COMPLETELY CURED ME of DIARRHŒA."

From Symes & Co., Pharmaceutical Chemists, Simla. Jan. 5, 1880.

To J. T. Davenport, London.

Dear Sir,—We congratulate you upon the widespread reputation this justly-esteemed medicine has earned for itself all over the East. As a remedy of general utility, we much question whether a better is imported, and we shall be glad to hear of its finding a place in every Anglo-Indian home. The other brands, we are happy to say, are now relegated to the native bazaars, and, judging from their sale, we fancy their sojourn there will be but evanescent. We could multiply instances ad infinitum of the extraordinary efficacy of DR. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE in Diarrhœa and Dysentery, Spasms, Cramps, Neuralgia, the Vomiting of Pregnancy, and as a general sedative, that have occurred under our personal observation during many years. In Choleraic Diarrhœa, and even in the more terrible forms of Cholera itself, we have witnessed its surprisingly controlling power. We have never used any other form of this medicine than Collis Browne's, from a firm conviction that it is decidedly the best, and also from a sense of duty we owe to the profession and the public, as we are of opinion that the substitution of any other than Collis Browne's is a deliberate breach of faith on the part of the chemist to prescriber and patient alike.—We are, Sir, faithfully yours, SYMES & CO., Members of the Pharm. Society of Great Britain, His Excellency the Viceroy's Chemists.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE is the TRUE PALLIATIVE in

NEURALGIA, GOUT, CANCER, TOOTHACHE, RHEUMATISM.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE is a liquid medicine which assuages PAIN of EVERY KIND, affords a calm, refreshing sleep WITHOUT HEADACHE, and INVIGORATES the nervous system when exhausted.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE rapidly cuts short all attacks of

EPILEPSY, SPASMS, COLIC, PALPITATION, HYSTERIA.

IMPORTANT CAUTION.—The IMMENSE SALE of this REMEDY has given rise to many UNSCRUPULOUS IMITATIONS. Be careful to observe Trade Mark. Of all Chemists 1s. 1½d., 2s. 9d., and 4s. 6d.

COORG SAUCE.

The Universal Appetiser,

PRICE ONE SHILLING.

This delicious Sauce is prepared from the receipt of a Nobleman, whose perfect knowledge of the culinary art has obtained for him the nom de plume of the "Modern Lucullus."

The name of this celebrated Sauce—

THE UNIVERSAL APPETISER—

Has been given to it because, in addition to its remarkable flavouring qualities, it possesses the singular property of

CREATING OR RESTORING THE APPETITE,

In fact, it practically realises the French saying—"L'appétit vient en mangeant."

Since the introduction of THE UNIVERSAL APPETISER it has been said, both in Society and at the Clubs, how rarely is the mauvais quart d'heure noticed, every one being so much interested in discussing and enquiring about the new Sauce—

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

MONDAY, OCTOBER 14, 1889.

General Intelligence.

[BY OVERLAND MAIL.]

THE Overland Mail brings us letters and advices from Bombay to the 27th Sept.; from Allahabad and Madras to the 25th Sept.; and from Calcutta to the 25th Sept.

THE Viceroy is about to go on a shooting expedition in the hills near Simla.

LORD AND LADY REAY are now on a visit to Simla.

THE Bombay Municipality will present Prince Albert Victor with an address of welcome when he arrives at Bombay. On the return of his Royal Highness to Bombay in March it is intended to arrange several public functions in his honour.

THE Poona Fine Arts Exhibition was opened by H.R.H. the Duke of Connaught.

THE exhibits were not quite so large as on previous occasions, but the standard of excellence was greater.

A DESPATCH has gone home emphasising the Government of India's telegraphed protest against the proposed change in the mail day.

AT the meeting of the Legislative Council held at Simla, Sept. 19th, the Hon. Mr. Scoble introduced the Bill to indemnify certain witnesses who had given evidence before the Crawford Commission. He explained the circumstances which had rendered such action necessary, and the Legislative Acts under which it was impossible, notwithstanding the guarantee given by the Bombay Government, to retain in office persons who had purchased their positions by bribery. The Hon. Mr. Hutchins, following, dealt with the scope of the proposed Bill, and the Viceroy spoke at considerable length on the difficult position in which the Government had been placed. The Government of India were anxious to observe the guarantee given by the Bombay Government as far as possible, but in certain cases it was impossible to do so altogether. They agreed with the Secretary of State in the admiration he had expressed at Lord Reay's courageous attempt to stamp out corrupt practices from the administration. The Bill was to be passed on the 3rd October.

IT is not intended to introduce the Leprosy Bill into the Legislative Council during the Simla session, as the mass of opinions received will require to be carefully considered before the measure is finally framed.

THE answers by the Local Government to the queries sent by the Government of India in connection with the excise administration are not likely to be received for some time to come, as every point raised by Messrs. Smith and Caine has to be carefully examined and their various assertions verified—no easy matter.

THE Royal Artillery regimental dinner took place in the Simla Town Hall on Sept. 17th, between 30 and 40 gunners being present. The Commander-in-Chief presided, and Colonel Graham, who had just returned from Sikkim, was the guest of the evening.

THE Gwalior Durbar have revised their offer in connection with the North-West Frontier defence scheme, and instead of cavalry and infantry they will now provide 1,200 cavalry only, together with a transport train of 500 ponies.

THE Russians are actively proceeding with the laying of a railway line from Charjui to Kerki along the left bank of the Oxus. They are also building a tramway on the Decauville system from Merv southwards to Panjdeh.

THE Ameer, who is at Mazar-i-Sharif, will probably winter at Jellalabad, in consequence of an outbreak of small-pox at Cabul.

TWENTY FIVE prisoners have arrived at Cabul in fetters and chains from Turkistan, under charge of Captain Ali Muhammad Khan. They are said to be charged with complicity in an attempt to kill the Ameer. Their leader, named Barak, was put to death at Mazar-i-Sharif.

THE custom of suttee was recognised in the State of Tipperah, in Bengal, up to only four months ago. The Maharajah, at the interposition of the Bengal Government, issued an order forbidding suttee in his State only in May last.

THE Government have declined to accede to the request of the Calcutta Missionary Conference to reopen the Patna case.

SIX persons were burnt to death, and several seriously injured, by the destruction of a chawl by fire at Bandora.

THE 7th Dragoon Guards have won the Simultaneous Shooting Match, fired all over India, with 913 points. The Seaforth Highlanders were second with 905 points, and the Musketry School at Changla Galli third with 897 points.

IT is intended to arraign Tantia on charges of murder, mutilation, and dacoity.

IT has been decided to start a swimming club in Bombay.

THE seam of coal discovered near Quetta is 27 inches thick, and coal is of excellent quality.

THE autumn rice and jute crops in some districts of Bengal are expected to give fair results, whilst in others it is estimated that the outturn will be below the average.

THE Forest Branch of the Revenue Agricultural Secretariat will, while the new buildings in Hastings-street, Calcutta, are under construction, be quartered at Simla.

THERE is some probability of a programme of railway projects for the next five years being shortly drawn up.

THE Government of India has increased the pension of Prince Kamar Kadr, the eldest surviving son of the late ex-King of Oudh, to Rs. 4,000 per month.

A CENSUS of Simla was taken on the night of Sept. 25.

TYPHOID and small-pox have broken out in an epidemic form at Cabul, so that the Ameer will probably winter at Jellalabad, if he returns from Mazar-i-Sherif.

THE Government of India, it is reported, have recommended that the tenure of Secretaryship in the Public Works Department should be invariably for five years, with a view to securing a greater continuity of administration.

IT is intended to raise the status of the Under-Secretary in the Foreign Department.

THE Kattywar Times understands that one of the objects of Lord Reay's visit to Simla is that of discussing the advisability of placing the Native States in the Presidency under the direct control of the Foreign Office, and also to learn the views of the Viceroy on the subject of securing Dwarka and Porebunder ports for naval stations.

CAPTAIN MULLABY has been appointed field ensign of the Lushai Column, and Lieutenant Kingscote his assistant Dr. Seaman having declined the appointment of Principal Medical Officer, Surgeon-Major Murphy has been appointed in his place.

THE Anglo-Indian Mission is expected to commence work in the Shan country in the course of a few weeks.

OBITUARY.—Colonel Pemberton, R.A.; Major Stevens, 42nd Goorkhas; and Mr. J. Ross, Secretary of the New Club, Simla.

NOTES.

THERE is little of interest to record in the news received from India this week, either by wire or post. In Bombay and Rangoon Corporations and Committees are busying themselves about the preparations for the expected visit of Prince Albert Victor, whose trip to the East ought to be a pleasant one, considering the anxiety which is being displayed by Europeans and Natives alike to give him a cordial and loyal welcome.

RUMOUR is again rife in making guesses regarding the probable successor to the Duke of Connaught in the Bombay command. Major-General Sir George Greaves, who was formerly Adjutant-General in India, is freely named as the most likely man for the coveted post; but we believe that no steps whatever have yet been taken by the home authorities as to the filling up of the approaching vacancy. It should be remembered that his Royal Highness of Connaught has yet six months to serve before the tenure of his command expires, so there is ample time in which to consider the question of his successor.

IT is to be hoped that the agitation about the corrupt mamlutdars is being calmed down. The Indemnity Bill has now passed into law, and although it was impossible, in spite of the guarantee given by the Bombay Government, to retain in office persons who had purchased their position by bribery, yet the men who have been dismissed are not to go uncompensated, and they are not to be exposed to any future proceedings in law courts. An Indian contemporary therefore hopes that the patriots of Poona will rest satisfied, and pause before commencing their threatened legal proceedings against Lord Reay.

THE Times correspondent in Burma continues, of course, to wire anything evil he can find to bring British rule into contempt; but the quiet statements in Sir George White's report are the best answers to all the calumnies which have been telegraphed regarding misrule and anarchy in Upper Burma. Here is a single instance which a military contemporary specially points to. Sir George White mentions the district in which Brigadier General Lockhart commanded in 1886-87. Two years ago that officer was continuously engaged against strong and well organised bands of dacoits. To-day a railway runs through this district, and connects Mandalay in undisturbed and peaceful communication with the sea. Organised dacoity is at an end, and the whole country is practically at peace. Whether the annexation policy was moral or expedient, the fact remains that it is proving itself a blessing to those most interested—the inhabitants of the country itself.

PERSISTENT rumours are again abroad that Lord Connemara will vacate his Governorship of Madras, and return to England for good, in March next. Upon this point the Madras Mail, whose editor (Sir Charles Lawson) has special opportunities of knowing the truth, says:—"We have ascertained that this is unfounded, as also is another rumour that has been current in Madras lately that his Excellency will go from Simla to Kurrachee, and there embark for England after resigning his appointment. His term of office will expire one year and nine months from next March, and he has no idea of shortening by one day that official connection with Madras, of which he is very proud."

THE Statesman, writing of the necessity of railway communication in the famine-threatened districts, says:—"Now that the question of annexing Ganjam to the Central Provinces has been mooted a look at a railway map will convince every impartial observer that the whole country between the Godaveri and the Mahanadi should go to the Central Provinces. It will be observed that the whole of the seaboard has not a foot of railway. As neither Bengal nor Madras will feel the expense of bridging these rivers, if made over to the Central Provinces, this heavy expense will be avoided, for they will only be too eager to make feeders from the coast to their Bengal-Nagpore line, and so give themselves outlets to the sea from which they are now entirely excluded. This arrangement will equally distribute the coast between the three Governments. Madras will become a manageable Presidency, and can then advantageously be made, like Bengal, a Lieutenant-Governorship, a saving which will enable something to be done towards helping on the neglected districts of Vizagapatam, Ganjam, and Orissa. If this course be adopted the expensive and long East Coast line, which will be comparatively useless without bridges, may sleep for some years to come. Rice at Sonepore is said often to be left uncut because there is no market for it. It was procurable at twelve annas a bag when rice in Ganjam was Rs. 3-12 for the same quantity, there being no means of transporting it."

A CALCUTTA Native paper has a cartoon representing a burly Englishman and a fat Indian lady standing vis-a-vis, the latter handing over to the former a box having the word "Gratitude" inscribed over it. The following explanatory passage is given below the sketch:—Mother Indiana (to Mr. Charles Bradlaugh, M.P.): "Accept my heartfelt gratitude, my disinterested friend, for your noble advocacy for the cause of my poor sons. Tell your countrymen to treat them kindly, as they are of noble descent, though now fallen." The words are unfortunate, for Mr. Bradlaugh's sympathies were never yet on the side of "noble descent." He would shudder to think that in befriending Indians he might be assisting "bloated aristocrats."

The following is from the Lahore paper:—"In the Fine Art Exhibition, recently held at Simla, there was one water-colour sketch which scarcely received the notice it deserved, perhaps because it was by a Native artist. It was entitled 'A Hindu Widow,' and represented a comely young woman tastefully clad in white, and having bangles on her wrists. The picture was painted with a purpose, that purpose being to show what a Native widow in the North-West Provinces really is like. In a note the artist called attention to 'her well-nurtured frame,' her neat clothing, her jewellery, and her peaceful expression of countenance. She is supposed to have just finished her morning devotions, and is then engaged in tender thoughts of 'the dear departed.' The artist was moved to exhibit his skill by the desire to remove, as far as he could, the too common opinion that the Hindoo widow's lot is necessarily an unhappy one; and if he has not been guilty of gross misrepresentation, there would appear to be at least one widow in the North-West Provinces on whom Professor Max Muller's sympathy would be wasted. According to the artist, the only hardship under which she labours is that she is forbidden to wear rings on her toes; and this, as he naively remarks, is 'rather an advantage than otherwise.'"

WE have just heard a curious rumour as we go to press that Sir Richard Temple will be invited to take his seat at the India Council Board in lieu of General Strachey, who has accepted the more onerous and more lucrative position of Chairman of the East Indian Railway Company. There certainly would be a flutter in the quiet dovecot of the Indian Secretary of State were Sir Richard to settle himself there. But Sir Richard's ambition is, we fancy, made of sterner stuff. Besides, we imagine that he would be as much welcomed to the Council as would Sir Lepel Griffin.

THE Hon. Mr. Grinlinton gave a dinner recently at Colombo to celebrate the fall of Sevastopol. He had as a guest Major-General Massy, commanding the forces in the island, known as "Redan Massy" for the indomitable coolness displayed by him on June 18th, 1855, when he headed the troops that stormed the Redan on that day.

(Times Correspondents.)

INDIA.

CALCUTTA, OCT. 13.

At the last meeting of the Legislative Council the Cantonments Bill, as amended, was passed. The Legal Member introduced a Bill to prevent the disclosure of official documents and information. The Bill was simply a re-enactment of the English Act passed in the last session of Parliament.

The religious riots in the north on the occasion of the Mahomedan celebration of the Mohurrum have been repeated in the south during the Hindoo Dusserah Festival. In the former the Hindoos were chiefly to blame; in the latter the Mahomedans appear almost wholly responsible. For some time considerable friction has existed between the two communities in Madras, consequent on the erection of a certain mosque. The Hindoos had protested against the erection, but as the Mahomedans undertook to abstain from interference with Hindoo processions passing the mosque the authorities refused to intervene. For 100 years Hindoo processions from the neighbouring temple have passed through the street where the mosque has been recently erected. As the Dusserah procession passed the mosque on the evening of the 10th it was suddenly attacked by a large number of Mahomedans, who at first succeeded in driving it back. The police and military were then summoned to disperse the mob. Upon bursting open the doors of the mosque the police arrested over 100 Mahommedans. The magistrate will investigate the case on Monday. A religious affray also recently occurred between Hindoo and Mahomedan students at Rawul Pindi, when two Mahomedan boys were killed.

The principal traders in Mysore closed their shops during the Dusserah Festival as a protest against alleged illegal and excessive taxation. Ultimately the Rajah's Minister received a deputation and explained that the Maharajah was not responsible for recent taxation, and that the Municipality had exceeded its legal powers. He promised a redress of grievances. The traders accepted the explanation and undertaking, and proceeded forthwith to open their shops. Great inconvenience had been caused by the strike, as the food supply was stopped for the large numbers who had swarmed into the city to attend the religious festival.

On the 9th the Mysore Minister delivered his financial statement. The past year showed financial prosperity, with receipts Rs. 1,32,89,717, and expenditure Rs. 1,21,05,762, or a surplus of Rs. 11,83,955. He estimated the annual surplus at Rs. 16,00,000 for the next five years. He proposes as an insurance against famine, accumulating Rs. 1,00,00,000. The financial programme would be liable to alteration should the Government consent to accept the military aid offered by the Maharajah, who considers that such contribution to the defence of the Empire must outweigh every other consideration. It was stated, in conclusion, that the intended visit of Prince Albert Victor had excited the greatest possible enthusiasm in Mysore.

A grand State Council, held at Patialla on the 10th was the occasion of the assumption by the Maharajah of full powers of government. A Royal salute was fired, and the Maharajah addressed the Durbar in a graceful and sensible speech. As he is only eighteen years old, it seems rather a matter for regret that he should have been vested with full powers at so early an age. Most Native rulers are surrounded by parasites and flatterers, and are constantly tempted into evil courses by vicious provocations. If, therefore, the policy could be adopted of postponing the enjoyment of full powers until judgment became riper and the capacity for self-control were developed and established, it would frequently preserve both ruler and subjects from the disastrous effects, with which India is so familiar, of reckless and ruinous maladministration in the feudatory States.

A band of dacoits recently broke into the church at Umballa and stole the communion plate and other property. The police succeeded in arresting the robbers and recovering most of the property.

The Tripati Temple case is adjourned to Nov. 4th. The police have obtained important information which may possibly sustain the priest's alleged charges against subordinates. During the great Temple Festival the priest received a public ovation from the pilgrims.

Tantia Bheel was further charged, on Wednesday, with robbery and murder, and was committed for trial. The evidence as to the murder was weak.

The Secretary of State's despatch in reference to the Public Service Commission's report has been received by the Government, to the effect that no legislation is required. It is stated that the age for candidates will be raised to 25. It is pointed out in the Press that this will prove both inconvenient and prejudicial. All the new appointees, though considerably senior in years, will be junior in service to a large number of those appointed under existing rules. The special reasons which actuated Lord Salisbury, when Secretary of State for India, in reducing the age to 19 equally obtain now. An earlier age enables the candidate to compete direct from school and spend his probationary years at the University, affording an opportunity to those who have failed either to compete for the army or to prepare for professions or some other pursuit.

The Latest news from Hyderabad contradicts the reported resignation of Nawab Mehdi Ali, surviving brother of the late Sir Salar Jung. He will shortly be married to a sister of the Nizam. Preparations are being made for the Prince's visit. The official programme contains the following items:—A visit to Golconda Fort; panther hunt; a State banquet; a four-in-hand procession to Bolarum; a ball at the Residency; while a public hall and waterworks will be constructed at Secunderabad in commemoration of the visit. At Delhi the Prince will be invited to open the waterworks.

Lord Connemara leaves Simla to-day. He was entertained during his stay to various dinner parties and dances, and he joined the Viceroy's shooting party. He also witnessed the military manœuvres at Jutogh, in which the mountain batteries took the principal part, demonstrating the wonderful capabilities of their mountain guns for effective operation in apparently impossible and precipitous places. In view of the approaching Lushai expedition, Colonel Woodthorpe delivered an interesting lecture on the tribes and country, as the result of past experience.

Lord Reay reached Bombay on Saturday. The Council of the Native Presidency Association presented what purported to be an address of welcome. It was in reality, however, a severe criticism on recent Bombay administration. They stated that they were keenly disappointed at the omission of the Government to redress the legitimate grievances of the forest proprietors; they complained of the provisions of the Sanitation Bill for voluntary contribution and local cess; and they deplored the evident intention of the Government to starve liberal education in the interests of technical education. Lord Reay stated that he would reply fully by letter.

General Amir Ahmed, agent of the Ameer with the Indian Government, died at Simla on Tuesday. The Viceroy addresed a letter of condolence to his family.

The latest reports from Ganjam show that severe distress and cholera have almost entirely disappeared. Crop prospects are favourable.

The Government of Bombay have passed a resolution in reply to the protest against the Sunday mail. It states that the facts and arguments contained in the memorial furnish an additional strong reason against the proposed alteration.

In the second medical examination the Bombay list of sixty-two successful candidates is headed by a girl in open competition, she alone passing in the first class.

A Native Christian has been sentenced to six months' imprisonment for personating a student at the Madras Matriculation Examination.

The Indian Government have sanctioned a direct railway from Pondicherry to Cuddalore. The scheme is stated to have been disapproved by the Madras Government, the line having no claim for British financial support. The Indian Government are stated to be in accord with the Chamber of Commerce as to the necessity of resisting the sacrifice of commercial interests to the existing monopoly of the East Indian Railway.

AFGHANISTAN.

CALCUTTA, OCT. 13.

The latest native news from Afghanistan reports an encounter between the Sangu Khel Shinwaris and the Ameer's troops under General Gulam Haider. Several officers and soldiers of the Ameer's troops were killed. The Shinwaris are said to have fought bravely.

The Ameer has been celebrating the recent birth of a son by releasing some Turkestan prisoners, and by a distribution of money in charity. The principal Afghan cities were illuminated for three days.

BURMA.

RANGOON, OCT 12.

A crowded and enthusiastic meeting was held last week to consider the arrangements for Prince Albert Victor's reception. The Irrawaddy Flotilla Company will place one of their fine steamers at his Royal Highness's disposal during his stay.

Dacoity is reported from Yemethin, where a band armed with dahs were resisted by villagers armed with sticks, and a hand-to-hand fight took place. One dacoit was killed on the spot, and nine more were captured next day. The resistance of dacoits by villagers is a very satisfactory sign.

A daring raid was made a few days ago at Bhamo by some Kachyens who stole the European officers' ponies from the centre of the town, and retreated unchecked to the territory of the neighbouring Tsawbwa.

A serious charge has been brought against two young officers in the Shwebo district. Mr. Buchanan, extra Assistant-Commissioner, and Lieutenant Thatcher, of the Hampshire Regiment, were pursuing some dacoits, but on their arrival at a village where their information stated that the dacoits were concealed, none were found. Believing the information given them to be false, Mr. Buchanan and Lieutenant Thatcher are reported to have ordered the villagers to be beaten. One villager is said to have died three days afterwards. The inquest has not established any connection between the alleged beating and his death. Mr. MacDonnell, officiating Chief Commissioner, has ordered a formal inquiry, and, if necessary, a trial by a magistrate. This course will be generally approved, and will do much to give the villagers confidence in the justice and impartiality of British rule.

Orders have been given forbidding the forcible impressing of boats and labour for the Chin expedition.

THE SECULARISATION OF THE INDIAN SUNDAY.

(Madras Mail.)

The Bishop of Bombay and others have very properly requested the Sheriff of that City to convene a public meeting for the purpose of affording an opportunity for the consideration of the proposal of H.M.'s Postmaster-General, that in order to promote the convenience of Australia, the mail steamer shall for the future leave Bombay during the fair season on Sunday. The proposal concerns passengers by those steamers in all parts of India, for if it is carried out they will have to arrange to arrive in Bombay on Friday, if they have any financial or other business to transact in Bombay before embarkation, as on Saturday the banks, offices, and shops will close at 1 or 2 P.M. for the customary half-holiday. The Times of India states that India and China, under the new mail contract, pay an annual subsidy of £265,000 for a weekly mail service. The Australian Colonies, for a fortnightly service, pay only £85,000. The Indian contract, moreover, is for ten years, while that of the Australian Colonies is only for seven. "They seem to have taken advantage of the India and China contract to get a cheap Australian contract dovetailed into the Indian arrangements at Aden. We pay the piper, and they get the advantage, and that, probably, has encouraged the Australians to dictate the sailing day from India." India, in effect, pays more than her fair share of the cost of the service in order that Australia—the richer country of the two—may be allowed to pay less than her fair share. The P. and O. has a formidable rival in the Orient Company, and if as much were demanded in proportion of Australia as is paid by India, the Colonies would boycott the former, and reserve all their favours for the latter. It certainly is very hard that Bombay should be victimised in the manner proposed. Apart from higher considerations, a great city like Bombay has need of the physical rest of Sunday, and such rest is incompatible with the bustle and worry of mail-day.

In this connection it may be well to urge the Madras Hunt Committee to reconsider their proposal to have hunting on Sunday mornings. The innovation is quite uncalled for, and it would cause much pain to many people whose feelings merit respectful consideration. The Hunt is supported by voluntary private subscriptions, but it is to all intents a public institution, and it would be ill-advised to fly in the of face public opinion. Sunday is a dies non with hunting men all the British world over, not for sanctimonious reasons, but from a feeling of respect for tradition, opinion, and propriety, which does good sportsmen honour. The practice of observing the day by an abstention from sport is one that has hitherto been followed in Madras, and we cannot admit that there is any more excuse for departing from it now than there has ever been. There are six days in a week in which men may hunt to their hearts' content; and it is not unreasonable to ask them to let all their fixtures fall within those days. The introduction of meetings on Sunday must in the nature of things cause a divergence of opinion among sporting men that cannot be conducive to the abiding prosperity of the Hunt.

THE BURMA DESPATCH.

(Correspondent of the Times of India.)

Major-General Sir G. White's Burma despatch has been published. It is stated that the success of the operations, which involved great hardship and labour on the troops, and the satisfactory progress made towards the pacification of the country, is due to the skill, judgment and ability of Sir George White. The Governor-General in Council fully concurs in the high approbation expressed by the Commander-in-Chief, and endorses his praise of the ability and energy of the several commanders; also his approbation of the troops, officers and men of all ranks, British and native. Sir George praises Brigadier-General Symons for the operations in Sagaing, Ava, and Myingyan. Captain Knox, 4th Hyderabad Cavalry in Ava, achieved remarkable success. Mr. Scott, Political Officer, and Lieutenant Fowler, of the Beluchis, specially distinguished themselves in capturing a dacoit in the Sawbwa's palace. Major F. Howard, Rifle Brigade, with a detachment of the 4th Battalion Rifle Brigade, worked well against dacoits in the jungle round Popa. The casualty list from 1st May, 1887, to 31st March 1889, comprises: killed, British officers 6, wounded 6; killed, native officers 2, wounded 4; killed, British soldiers 10, wounded 35; killed, native soldiers 42, wounded 97. The casualties are the result of fatigue and exposure, which is out of all proportion to the losses sustained in the field. Over 6,000 officers and soldiers have been invalided since November, 1885. The following officers are named who have rendered specially valuable services:—Brigadier-Generals Collett, Faunce and Wolseley; Colonels Symons, Little, Major, and A. Ternan; Lieutenant-Colonels Skine, Macgregor, Clark and Kennedy; Major Shepherd, Norfolk Regiment; Captain Westmoreland, 6th N.I.; Lieutenant Wright, R.E.; Surgeon P. Doyle, for services in the Chin Hills; Captain Lambe, Norfolk Regiment; Surgeon-Major A. Strahan, 44th Goorkha Light Infantry; Second Lieutenant Faunce, Oxfordshire Regiment; Surgeon Rogers, 44th Goorkha Regiment; Lieutenant Campbell, Madras Staff Corps; Surgeon Robinson, Indian Medical Service. The despatch mentions the invaluable services rendered by Major Raikes, Political Officer, for specially valuable service with the Mogaing Field Force; Captains O'Donnell, 44th Goorkhas, and Macdonald, Hampshire Regiment, and Lieutenant Benson, Munster Fusiliers, for very useful work in signalling; Surgeon C. Cronin, Lieutenants H. Clements, Madras Staff, M. Tighe, 27th Bombay N.I., Colonel Sartorius, 27th Bombay N.I., Lieutenant Fowler, 27th Bombay N.I., Captain Pink, 2nd Queen's, with the Karenni Expedition, Major Norcott, Rifle Brigade, Captain Beaufort, R.A., Lieutenant Morris, Royal Irish Regiment, Captain Jackson, R.E., Lieutenant-Colonel Harvey, South Wales Borderers, Lieutenant Farrant, Royal Munster Fusiliers; also Lieutenant Minogue, Royal Munster, Captain Knox, 4th Hyderabad Cavalry, Lieutenant King, 33rd N.I., Captain Smith, R.A., Major Howard, Rifle Brigade, Major Spencer, 17th N.I., Major Hingston, 10th N.I.; and the following officers of the Divisional Staff:—Colonel A. Morgan, Major T. Cather, Captain B. Spragge; lastly, his Aide-de-Camp, Lieutenant Jackson, Hampshire Regiment.

THE COMING CAMPAIGN.

(Pioneer.)

Of the two columns the only one likely to encounter serious opposition from the tribes we dignify with the name of enemies is that operating from the Chin Hills. The Lushais and Kukis not only did not oppose the small force that entered their country last spring, but the frequent submissions that have taken place during the summer among their chiefs seem to show that they are even less likely to resist now. On the other hand, the Chins have developed unexpected pugnacity and resource under the pressure of the field force sent to subdue them. It was anticipated up to the end of the active season that General Faunce would have brought about the submission at least of Siyins, Tashons, and Kanhows; but with the stubbornness of mountaineers, the tribesmen, hard as they have been sometimes hit, have never been able to induce themselves to make the submission required of them, and show no sign of doing so. The Kanhow tribe have been very severely dealt with by our field force. Eighteen of their most valuable villages have been destroyed, in most cases being set on fire by the Chins themselves on the approach of the troops. The Kanhows have been in negotiation with our Political Officers, and at one time it seemed that they would accept the terms offered to them, namely, the payment of an annual tribute and the surrender of all the captives. To follow them up farther will involve an advance into an extremely difficult country, it may be in the face of considerable resistance, for the Kanhows can probably muster some 2,500 fighting men with 1,500 guns.

THE EAST COAST RAILWAY.

That it might reach the dignity of a line of useful local traffic by the interchange of coal and minerals generally from Telingana for coolies from the coast districts, and the prudent development of the N.E. districts of the Nizam's dominions to a measure of their former prosperity, is possible. Telingana has soil, sub-soil, and minerals. The opening up of that country depends greatly upon the opportunities for progress.

allowed to the new administration in Hyderabad. The administration is firm and honest, and needs only time to reach the high platform of utility. Masulipatam, we may say in passing, is claimed as a treaty free-port by Hyderabad for the people and trade of the Nizam's dominions. Whether it can be made into a harbour is a question. The Minister of Hyderabad might well move in the matter, but Coconada asserts superior claims, or some other port without greater natural advantages might step in and cut out both. The harbour is a main feature in the East Coast Railway scheme. Despairing of the Madras Port of Refuge, Sir Guildford Molesworth was credited with saying that if the Coconada anchorage could be made into a safe harbour, as he believed it could, it would cut out Madras, and attract the Burma trade for Bombay over the Nizam's State Railway. These matters often make or mar the fortunes of whole districts, as well as of railways, and deserve the closest and amplest consideration by statesmen.

LEPER LEGISLATION.

(Indian Mirror.)

We are glad that the object of the Bill is not simply the segregation, but also the amelioration, of the condition of the leprous community in India. The Government of India's Resolution calls the Bill "A Bill to make Provision for the Isolation of Lepers and the Amelioration of their Condition." It would be most inhuman were the Government not actuated by a generous motive for the amelioration of the most pitiable condition of the sufferers from leprosy, while forcibly segregating them from the general community to the latter's welfare. The Government should be strictly mindful of the expediency of letting the segregation of the lepers follow close upon the heels of the amelioration of their condition. Since the publication of the Leper Bill much curiosity and anxiety have been felt by the public if people suffering from what is called white leprosy would be subject to the operation of the Act. The question whether this particular form of leprosy is contagious or not is yet undecided. The Leper Commission will have to decide the matter.

CLEANER WHEAT.

(Times of India.)

The committee of the London Corn Trade Association have at length found the pressure brought to bear officially and by the English millers too much for them. They have yielded, but in such a reluctant and half-hearted way as to be almost useless. They have now decided from the commencement of next season to raise the standard of Indian wheat. The admixture, we are told, in the case of Bombay wheat will be limited to 3 per cent. for shipments made during the four months, March to June, and 3½ per cent. for shipments made during the eight months, July to January. At the India Office meeting the London Corn Trade Association had the temerity to assert that it was the natural condition of Indian wheats to contain about 4 per cent. of admixture on the Bombay side, and 5 per cent. on the Calcutta. To this statement the Committee of the Bombay Chamber of Commerce at once replied that even under the primitive mode of preparation hitherto prevalent, and without special cleaning machinery, the natural condition of the bulk of Bombay wheats as they could be delivered by the farmers would show less than 2 per cent. of admixture. The Committee of the Chamber proposed that London, like Liverpool, should adopt the 2 per cent. limit. No reform will be worth anything that does not teach, or, in a word, compel, the Native dealers and cultivators to see the necessity of sending wheat to market in a fairly clean condition. For years past the Bombay shippers have declared that they are able to keep to a 2 per cent. standard, and it is absurd of the London Association to fix it at 1 and 1½ per cent. higher, and especially absurd when the 2 per cent. standard is being satisfactorily worked in Liverpool. That the London Corn Trade Association have had to "climb down" is a good sign in itself, and we hope that the agitation will be continued until London and Liverpool have both the same standard of refraction.

PERSIA AND A EUROPEAN WAR.

(Pioneer.)

Persia indeed seems destined to be our next battle-field if we have again to meet the aggression of our old foe; no one indeed can fail to see that it must be the base for flank attack for either side. Writing in 1858, when Russia's position east of the Caspian was far less stable than it is now, the Austrian War Minister, Baron von Kuhnenfeld, predicted that Russia would steadily aim at getting an open seaboard on the Persian Gulf. "She may not," he says, "reach the shores of the Gulf in one stride, or by means of one great war; but, taking advantage of Continental complications, when the attention and energy of European States are engaged in contests more nearly concerning them, she will endeavour to reach the Persian Gulf step by step, by annexing separate districts of Armenia, by operating against Khiva and Bokhara, and by seizing Persian provinces." We need not stop to point out how completely this has been fulfilled so far. The "step by step" has now reached the point where Persia is practically at the mercy of her powerful neighbour, while in our direction we find a Russian railway reaching almost to the outer frontier of Afghanistan. Is it not time that we should make the one counter-stroke which would make our position in the Persian Gulf unassailable by putting in hand at last the construction of the Euphrates Valley Railway? Nothing can be more certain than that one of the first acts of a general European war will be the blocking of the Suez Canal and the closing of the Bosphorus with torpedoes so as to protect the shores of the Black Sea from naval attack. We have the high authority of Lord Wolseley for the view that "the Canal would easily be rendered useless for months and perhaps a year," and that "it would be perfectly ridiculous for us to depend upon the Suez Canal as a line of communication with our Eastern possessions in time of war." Can we contemplate without misgiving the issue of a struggle in Persia and Armenia, with the Suez Canal closed to our transports and ships of war, and our only lines of communication the long round by the Cape or transhipment across Egypt? The reply must surely be in the negative. We are not in fact ready for possible, or, rather, probable events that may come on us now any day while this railway—a need thirty years ago, a necessity to-day—is still unmade.

THE CLAIMS OF THE BENGAL CIVIL SERVICE.

A writer, signing himself "Fair Play," sends the following letter to the Statesman and Friend of India:—

"Permit me to draw public attention through your columns to the strange appointments made by the Government of India of late years to the prize offices in its gift. Although I admit the inequity of the monopoly which the members of the Bengal Civil Service once enjoyed of such offices, I think that in the public interests their claims should not be so completely set aside as they have been in some recent instances. It cannot be that our Bengal Civilians are, as a body, so inferior in abilities and aptitude for business to their brethren from other Provinces, that what appears to be their systematic supersession in the filling up of offices to which they have hitherto been almost invariably appointed can in every case be justified or is justifiable. Take, for instance, the Secretariats under the Government of India.

"Foreign Department.—Sir Henry Durand, a Bengal Civilian, is to be replaced as Secretary by Mr. W. J. Cunningham, a comparatively junior Civilian from Bombay; the Under-Secretary, Mr. H. S. Barnes, hailing from the North-Western Provinces.

"Financial Department.—Sir David Barbour was succeeded by Mr. J. Westland, both Bengal Civilians, but Mr. Westland has been succeeded by Mr. E. J. Sinkinson, a N. W. Civilian, with Mr. E. Lawrence from Bombay as Under-Secretary.

"Home Department.—Mr. A. Mackenzie was succeeded by Mr. A. P. Macdonnell, both being Bengal Civilians; but on Mr. Macdonnell's temporary promotion he is replaced by Mr. C. J. Lyall, a comparatively junior Civilian from the North-Western Provinces, the Under-Secretary, Mr. J. O. Hewett, having also been selected from the North-West.

"Revenue and Agricultural Department.—Sir E. Buck, the Secretary, is from the North-West, with Mr. J. Mackenzie from Bombay as Under-Secretary.

"Legislative Department.—Mr. D. Fitzpatrick, Secretary from the North-West, has been succeeded by Mr. S. R. James from the same Province, with Mr. J. Macpherson from Bombay as Under-Secretary.

"But it is not only that the claims of Bengal Civilians to the Indian Secretariats, which were almost exclusively manned by them before, have been practically ignored; they have of late been passed over even in the filling up of other offices, for which they may be reasonably supposed to possess special aptitudes. The Chief Commissionership of Burma was filled successively by three Bengal Civilians, namely, Sir Ashley Eden, Sir Rivers Thompson, and Sir Charles Bernard. It was then given to Sir Charles Crosthwaite, a N.W. Civilian; and it is now being restored to a Bengal Civilian in the person of Mr. A. P. Macdonnell.

"The appointment of Mr. J. W. Quinton, a member of the Allahabad Revenue Board, to the Chief Commissionership of Assam is inexplicable. It is true that the office has before been held by N. W. Civillians, namely, Sir Charles Elliot and Mr D. Fitzpatrick, but their appointment might have been justified by the absence of other thoroughly qualified candidates at the time of the vacancies. Such, however, is not the case now. It is almost inconceivable that Mr. Quinton, who has had no experience of the people and knows nothing of their language should be deliberately preferred for the Chief Commissionership of Assam, over such a man as Sir John

Edgar, than whom I am certain no member of the whole Indian Civil Service could be found better fitted for this particular office. It is not only that Sir John Edgar possesses an unrivalled knowledge and experience of the province and its people—which should be the first qualification for the Chief Commissionership—but, unlike most Secretaries to the Bengal Government, he has filled the most important Commissionership in Bengal, I mean the Patna division, with marked ability and success. Surely the ability and success with which he has assisted Sir Steuart Bayley in the administration of the Bengal Government should have singled him out in the judgment of the Supreme Government for the higher office for which he is so manifestly fitted. None can more strongly disapprove than myself of the monopoly of the highest offices which Bengal Civilians once enjoyed as such without the slightest reference to their individual merits and qualifications; but in passing over the indisputable claims of Sir John Edgar to the Chief Commissionership of Assam, apparently simply because he is a Bengal Civilian, the Government of India has done an act of great injustice, not only to Sir John himself, but even more to the people of Assam whose immediate interests are to be confided to a N.-W. Civilian, who can know nothing of the Province he is thus called to administer.

"One word more. It is probable that Mr. Westland before going on leave was consulted as to which appointment he would prefer on the shuffling of the cards which would necessarily take place on Mr. Howell's retirement from the Hyderabad Residency. How is it, then, that after accepting the office and having actually joined it he should so suddenly express his wish to vacate it, while distinctly disavowing the usual plea of ill-health? Unless some satisfactory explanation is given of these almost inexplicable arrangements the public belief will be that the new Viceroy has been hoodwinked into connivance at a grave jobbery perpetrated by the Government of India in the distribution of its official patronage."

THE KALKA-SIMLA RAILWAY.

(Civil and Military Gazette.)

There was never any doubt, or, it would be more correct to say, there has for several years past been no doubt, that one day the iron horse would go puffing up the Himalayas and into a terminus at Simla. When the Delhi-Kalka scheme is completed a long stride nearer the consummation, so often and so generally wished, will have been made. In the ordinary course of events the Government of India would have felt forced to continue the line from Umballa, if only in response to demands from the official world which has now to toil by tat and tonga fifty-eight miles within the mountains. Even the Kalka-Simla section has for long been the subject of discussion and of survey, of estimate and consideration from every point of view. We have reason to think it is at last near its realisation. Prophecy is rash unless you know beforehand; but we think it will be found that in two or at most three years' time the passenger who takes his seat behind a locomotive at Calcutta or Bombay will require no other means of travelling till he arrives within a mile of Viceregal Lodge, Simla. The questions raised by any proposals to make the Kalka-Simla line are familiar enough to the Indian public; but some of the more important of them will perhaps bear restatement. One of the most important is the military question; but another almost, if not quite, as important is: Will the railway pay? There is no question whatever as to the feasibility of the line. The engineering difficulties are indeed great, though not insurmountable; but if they are to be surmounted it must be at very large expense. Mr. Morris's estimate, when he surveyed the line in Sir Guildford Molesworth's time, five or six years ago, was that the railway would cost a lakh of rupees per mile to construct; and unless the Government of India is willing to give the existing road for the line—which they very certainly are not—the cost of construction will, in any Company's hand, not fall far short of Mr. Morris's estimate. A good deal will turn on whether the Government consents to let parts of the existing road be utilised for the line or allow it to be widened so as to admit of laying rails along it. There is a considerable body of troops quartered in the hills about Simla for whose passage up and down a road must be reserved. There are stations at Dugshai, Solon, Kasauli, Syree, Sanawar, and Jutogh, which contain a substantial portion of the British troops available in case of a sudden demand upon their services, and their transport must be with the Government a paramount consideration. The Darjeeling mountain railway runs practically on the road to that sanitarium; but then the gauge is a two-foot one, whereas the Simla-Kalka proposed line will have to be broader. The question of traffic is one that has yet to be more fully examined. The Government engineers believe that it will not be sufficient to make the section pay; but other and as competent authorities say that, as part of a Calcutta-Simla line, it will, and probably as much as the Darjeeling Himalaya, which returns from 6 to 7 per cent. There is no doubt, we imagine, that one result of building a line to Simla would be given an impetus to the passenger traffic thither. Once the line is in working order, Simla becomes far more the official capital of India than Calcutta, and moreover, a host of people from different parts of the country, who are now deterred by the dak journey of close on a hundred miles from Umballa, will spend their leave in Simla, or think little of running up there on business. Nearly every cold-weather visitor will take advantage of the line, for it would be unpardonable in such to confess to their friends at home that, with railway facilities in existence, they had neglected the famous Indian summer capital—the Capua, the Sybaris, the Saratoga—whatever they choose to call it in England.

Even should the inquiries now going on not result in a determination to extend the Delhi Kalka line, the State will sooner or later have to get the work done. It was very nearly being done when Mr. Nobel, the American oil-smeller and speculator, was trying to obtain a concession of the land a year or two ago; and had it not turned out that the astute Yankee possessed more audacity than silver, it would have been now on its way to completion. It is surprising that the Government has not made up its mind to build the line or cause it to be built without further ado. Although the expenditure, as we have shown, would be large—at a lakh a mile, say fifty eight lakhs or half a million sterling—yet, on the other hand, there would be considerable State savings in more than one direction. The postal system is at present carried on by an elaborate tonga service, which not only is dear in itself, but requires that a large sum should be spent on keeping the road in good order for the tonga traffic. The carriage of the post by rail would be infinitely less expensive, and the road might still be kept in fair order for a smaller sum of money, inasmuch as the traffic would be less trying. In the matter of travelling allowances, too, a considerable saving ought to be effected; for officers who now receive eight annas a mile from Simla to Umballa as travelling allowance, that is to say, a sum of nearly fifty rupees, would be carried by the railway for nine or ten rupees, or even fewer. The prospects and plans of the suggested line, we are well aware, have been considered from every point of view over and over again in private State papers and public official documents; and without having them before us we are content to suppose that, notwithstanding the reasons adduced in support of the line, the Government has excellent grounds for refusing to take an active part in making it. But with every year that goes over our heads India is making fresh progress, and new interests are coming into existence, whose convenience has to be consulted. We are drawing nearer to a bustling time of preparation for actual war, if not for a war within the country itself, and the fall in exchange is causing the European community affected to more and more seriously turn their thoughts to the hills instead of homewards. Every year sees Simla enlarged and still enlarging, and every year the cessation of its severance from the rest of India is becoming more and more imperative.

MILITARY EMEUTE AT LUCKNOW.

(Lucknow Advocate.)

Strange as it may seem, none of the provincial dailies, not to say our bi-weekly local contemporary, has yet chronicled the full details of the most sensational event in the station, though it is now more than a week old. The whole of the Cantonment, usually so quiet, was thrown suddenly into a state of the intensest excitement over what appears to have been a fierce mêlée between the troopers of the 17th Lancers and the soldiers of the Royal Horse Artillery. As it would appear an attempt has been made to suppress the matter, at least so far as to prevent its getting into the papers, the real cause of the affray has not transpired, though various versions are afloat throughout the city. To cut a long story short, it would seem the Lancers were the aggressors, and rode down in full gallop to the Artillery Lines, when the gunners turned out in force, and a terrible fight ensued. The latter could not hold out long against the assailants, who had the advantage of being on horseback, and further of using their long lances, which, of course, they did with good effect. When matters grew critical, and the spent and infuriated artillerymen called loudly for a battery to be got ready, the wise bugler, rising above the passion of the strife, gave the alarm—with the result that the Lieutenant-General Commanding the Station, with his whole staff, besides numerous officers of the garrison, were on the scene of action—now sanguinary—in a few minutes. By remonstrance, persuasion, and threats they succeeded in separating the combatants, although at one time it seemed as if these had entirely forgotten themselves, and would not listen to reason. A few deaths are reported to have occurred; and, altogether, a like conflict, with such bloody scenes, does not appear to have happened for many a long day in any cantonment in India. We shall await the result of the Court-martial which, we hear, is already sitting, and shall be greatly concerned to know if the blame of the whole fiendish affair is laid on the Native employés in the lines, who may have assisted in procuring arms, ammunition, &c., or fixed on the right shoulders.

BENGAL.

THE tenders for the Calcutta Municipal Loan were opened on Saturday by the committee. The amount advertised was Rs. 11,15,000, and the amount tendered Rs. 28,10,600. The Loans Committee were unwilling to accept any tenders below Rs. 103, at and above which amount Rs. 4,53,000 was accepted. The loan will be kept open for the balance of Rs. 6,62,000 at 103.

THE Englishman learns that the engineers for the re-survey of the Mogulserai-Purulia line have been nominated, and that Mr. Bell, the Chief Engineer of the survey, is now in Calcutta making arrangements for next season's work. We may, perhaps, infer from this that there is some probability that the survey of the "Grand Chord" will be abandoned, more especially as recent advices appear to indicate that there is but little chance of its being adopted. If we are to have the Southern Purulia route as the solution of the matter, there would seem to be room for Sir Bradford Leslie's northern route, the "Western Bengal," as a local line to serve those districts which are now said to be practically shut out from the trade of Calcutta by the want of railway communication.

MESSRS. OCTAVIUS STEEL AND CO. write as follows to the Bengal Chamber of Commerce:—Sir,—We are authorised to say, in regard to terminal arrangements in Calcutta, that the question being one of the greatest importance, Mr. Izat, should his proposal ultimately be adopted, desires to carry with him the approval of merchants and the public, and to settle details in accordance with their wishes, and those of the Government. He regards as essential to his project—(1) that the station arrangements be distinct from, and independent of, the East Indian Railway Company; (2) that they have good approach to the river, and afford ready access between the termini and the shipping; and (3) that they provide direct communication for his own waggons with the Kidderpore docks.

MADRAS.

THE High Court of Madras on Monday accepted an appeal by Mr. Nelson against Mr. Crole's decision regarding the Mahunt's bail, and ruled that the Mahunt might be allowed bail without conditions as to residence in the sum of Rs. 20,000 and two sureties of Rs. 10,000.

INQUIRIES made by the Port Officer of Madras have shown that the port dues at present levied at the ports in the districts of Godaveri, Kistna, Tanjore, and Ganjam were quite insufficient to leave any surplus for carrying out the necessary improvements at any of the ports. The Madras Government has, therefore, issued an order that, from the 1st of January next, the rate of port dues on foreign vessels calling at any of these ports is to be raised from two to three annas per ton, which is the maximum amount leviable under the Ports Act.

AN Ootacamund correspondent writes:—"The autumn races began badly, with incessant rain and stormy gusts, which cut up the Wellington Racecourse, made it very dangerous for those taking part in the events, and kept all the usual sightseers from Ootacamund and Wellington away. The last day's racing took place on the Ootacamund old racecourse, or 'Cocky's Course' as it is generally called, on Saturday, the 21st instant. It had rained all the previous night and morning, and the course (which is a very treacherous bit of ground, and will be soon abandoned for the new course) was as slippery as glass. The sun burst out about two o'clock, so great numbers of people assembled on the Downs. All went well until the pony hurdle race; one or two horses certainly nearly came down, but that does not count on these hills. Mr. McCartie, our sporting and most popular collector, had taken part in several of the previous flat races with indifferent success, but this time he was coming in an easy winner on Captain Preston's pony, when, at the last hurdle, the pony 'rushed his fence,' took off too short, turned a complete somersault, and came down with his jockey under him. Fortunately, medical assistance was at hand, for Dr. North was among the spectators. Mr. McCartie was picked up unconscious, and attention was promptly given to his hurts, which are of a very serious nature, viz., one leg broken in two places, and concussion of the brain, beside some injuries to the neck and shoulder. Terrible as the accident is, it is hoped that the unfortunate gentleman will eventually recover. This coming so soon after the late Captain Russell's fatal accident has cast an additional gloom over Ooty, which has this year witnessed an unusual number of accidents on the racecourse and hunting-field. Of course, everybody left the course, and the races ended most dismally."

BOMBAY.

(Sept. 27.)

MR. R. THOM, Assistant Collector of Salt Revenue, has been allowed furlough for one year.

MR. E. M. H. FULTON, C.S., on return from leave, will be appointed on special duty to hear certain cases connected with the Palitana State.

THE services of Major E. D. Newnham-Smith, Staff Corps, have been placed temporarily at the disposal of his Royal Highness the Commander-in-Chief.

A GOVERNMENT Resolution has been issued, which states that Mr. W. R. Hamilton, third Presidency Magistrate, has been allowed furlough for nine months, from the 20th of next month.

COMMANDER R. F. HOSKYN, it is stated, will succeed Commander Carpenter, whose term of service in charge of the Indian Marine Survey shortly expires. During the past five years the Investigator, under its able and popular commander, has done grand service on the Eastern coast of India.

FRIDAY was the last day for the reception by the Municipal Commissioner of nominations for a Councillor to take the place of Mr. Jalbhai Ardesir Sett of the Mandvie Ward, who has gone to Europe. Two nominations were received, one being that of Mr. Bomanjee Pherozsha, proposed by Mr. Fazulbhoy Visram and Mr. Ardeshir Bezonjee, and seconded by Mr. Rahimbhoy Alladinbhoy and Mr. Joosub Ismail Memon; the second nomination being that of Mr. Goverdhandas Goculdar Tejpal, who was proposed by Mr. Vundravan Purshotamjee and Mr. Currimbhoy Ebrahim, and seconded by Mr. Fazulbhoy Visram and Mr. Karsandas Natha.

THE following is a summary of the Bombay Presidency season reports for the past week:—Rain during week good throughout Deccan and Southern Mahratta Country and beneficial to crops; moderate or slight in other districts. More wanted in parts of Panch Mahals, Kaira, Broach, Surat, Khandeish, Nassik, Tanna, Kolaba, Kattywar, and Baroda. Standing crops damaged by rats, crabs, turtles, and locusts in parts of Kurrachee, by locusts in parts of Shikarpore, by rats, insects, locusts, drought and blight in parts of Hyderabad, by blight and locusts in parts of Upper Sind Frontier, and by insects in parts of Kattywar. Crops otherwise good except in one taluka of Surat and two of Khandeish. Reaping of early crops commenced in Hyderabad. Fodder scarce in parts of Kurrachee, Poona, and Ahmednugger. Drinking water scarce in Upper Sind Frontier.

THE Englishman says:—Bombay is crying out because one acting judgeship in the local Small Cause Court has been given to a Native; whereas in Calcutta we have no fewer than three permanent Native Judges in our Small Cause Court. The business men of Bombay are remonstrating, and when they remonstrate in Bombay something generally happens. "The business men who have placed Bombay in the foremost rank of Indian commerce, say the remonstrants, "are Europeans, and the more important and difficult legal questions which go to the Small Cause Court for decision are such as turn upon European business usage and English mercantile law." Something like this was said when the Calcutta Municipal Bill was under debate in Council, and it was treated by the representatives of Native opinion as a piece of insolent prevarication. And yet the Natives of Bombay stand far in advance of those of any other part of India in respect of intelligence, public spirit, enterprise, and munificence.

THE Maharajah of Puttiala left Simla on Sunday night.

THE Annual Staff College Dinner will be held at the United Service Club on the 30th inst.

THE Government of India have not yet decided by what title the successor to the late Maharajah of Benares shall be known. It will be remembered that for loyalty during the Mutiny the title of Maharajah Bahadur was conferred on the late Ishri Prasad as a personal distinction, and it is now under consideration whether or not this should be continued in the case of his successor.

THE cotton forecast for the North-West Provinces and Oudh is as follow:—The rains set in early throughout the Province and, except in certain limited tracts in Rohilkhand, have continued normal. Rain has been generally very well distributed with sufficient intervals for fine weather for weeding. Total area estimated at 16 per cent. more than last year's. Probably fully up to average cotton area for last five years, namely, 1,600,000 acres. Condition reported at 88, 100 representing a full average crop. This forecast relates to condition up to August 31, 1889.

A Lucknow correspondent writes to the Pioneer:—"An accident to a heavily laden brick-cart last week has been the cause of some stir among our local antiquarians. The waggon was passing over the roadway between the two buildings which compose the Lucknow Museum, when the pavement collapsed and brought to light the existence of one of those old brick drains of which there are so many in this city. The drain being opened out for examination revealed in its turn the existence of a tank completely filled in with fragments of fine old china, evidently the débris of the famous collection of the Kings of Oudh. To find that this was its end brings vividly to mind the turbulence and insecurity of those days. It is, however, by no means unlikely that things of more present worth than broken pottery may be discovered round the spot, as in the hurry and confusion which followed on the Relief, jewels and treasure were probably freely buried in the neighbourhood of the Museum—which was then the Royal Palace.

"THE RAISING OF COINS."

TO THE EDITOR.

Sir,—M. Cernuschi, the French champion of Bi-metallism, is offering a prize of £400 for the best essay on Bi-metallism, to be furnished by April next. On the 30th May, 1889, Mr. Goschen told the Bi-metallists who had an interview with Lord Salisbury, that it is the duty of Mono-metallists to contribute to the enlightenment of the public on the subject of money. This was a well-deserved hint. I am told that hardly any persons in the City of London know or care anything about the subject. Should not something be done to remove such a reproach? If no public body, such as the Bankers' Institute, the Chambers of Commerce and Agriculture, separately or combined, will contribute a prize of, say £500, could not one man, or a few public-spirited men, be found to provide such a sum for the best essay on some such subject as "The Debasing of Coins; Bi-metallism; the excessive issue of inconvertible paper; the mode and effect of each plan with reference to a country's

I. Internal interchanges of goods and properties;
II. International interchanges;
III. Deferred monetary obligations;
IV. The morality of such procedures;
V. The adequacy of the measures to produce the desired effect?"

The Birmingham School, and the advocates of both Bi-metallism and Mono-metallism could urge their views in striving for the prize.—Your obedient servant, J. H. Norman.

Drunkenness in Chota Nagpore.—The Englishman states that spirit-drinking has of late years been making considerable headway among the Kols of Chota Nagpore, and adds:—"A memorial from the Vorstand of the German Evangelical Lutheran Mission is now to be added to the evidence of the fact. Messrs. A. Nottrott, President, J. Betzler, General Treasurer, and F. Hahn, Acting Secretary of the Vorstand, bear witness to the spread of drunkenness, and ascribe it in a large measure to the outstill system. Formerly, in Singbhum district, there were only three distilleries and about eight grog-shops. In the Kolhan, the Bandgau and Porahat districts there was not a single grog-shop or distillery before the outstills were introduced, whereas now one can scarcely travel a few miles in any direction without coming upon a "kalal." A quart bottle of phuli is sold at four annas, and even less. The common stuff, daru, is sold for one anna a quart. The consumption of home-brewed spirit, handia, is at the rate of about four rupees a month for a well-to-do family; while in the case of a poor family it is seldom less than one rupee, which, small as it may seem, is about one quarter of their whole income. The German missionaries propose that the outstill system be entirely abolished, and the old central distillery system be revived. They would also raise the price of country spirits; limit the number of grog-shops; leave the opening of the same to the option of the people; levy a tax on all persons who wish to brew handia for home consumption; and impose a tax on those who brew handia for sale."

Major Henry Fitzgerald Stevens.—Major Henry Fitzgerald Stevens, of the 42nd Goorkhas, whose death has been announced by telegram as having occurred at Fort White, Upper Burma, from fever contracted during the military operations there, at the early age of 38, entered the Army as ensign in the winter of 1868. From 1871 to 1872 Major Stevens served with the Looshai Expedition, for which he received a medal with clasp. He also served in the operations against the Naga Hill tribes in 1879 and 1880, receiving for his services another clasp to his medal. Major Stevens had held commissions in the 3rd Foot, the 42nd Bengal Native Infantry, of which he was wing officer, the Bengal Staff Corps, and the 42nd Ghoorkhas. He had seen twenty-one years' service, and was made captain in 1880.

Mr. W. W. M'Nair.—The death is announced of Mr. W. W. M'Nair, a distinguished member of the Indian Survey, who expired at Mussoree of typhoid fever. He had been twenty-two years in the Survey Department, and had rendered signal service, especially during the Afghan War of 1878-9. In the disguise of a Native doctor he made a journey into Kaffristan in 1883, and this achievement gained for him the Murchison Grant of the Royal Geographical Society. This expedition was, up to the time, unpararelleled. Mr M'Nair ascended to the Dora Pass over the Hindoo Koosh Mountains, which he found to be over 14,000ft. high, but with an easy ascent, quite practicable for laden animals. The account of his adventurous and important journey was read by him before the Royal Geographical Society in December, 1883.

The following is the report of the condition of Ganjam for the week ending the 14th September:—Season continues very favourable. Numbers on large works 9,881, small 5,427; gratuitous relief, week ending 7th, 58,170, of whom 7,591 men, 13,792 women, and 36,787 children; cholera, deaths, 20.

New Government Offices.—The Englishman writes:—"It has been finally decided to demolish Loudon's Buildings, and rebuild offices on the same site on the model of the Finance Department buildings. The new piles will be four stories high, and will accommodate the Revenue and Agricultural, the Home and Public Works Departments, as well as the Board of Examiners, and possibly the Military Department. It is proposed to introduce lifts into the new quarters, a proposal which will no doubt meet with genuine approval."

An Important Discovery.—The following is from the Civil and Military Gazette:—"A really grand discovery has been made at Quetta, where the North-Western Railway boring operations in search of pure water have been crowned with unexpected success. A trial borehole was commenced last month, and after passing through the sandy surface soil, some 30 feet deep, which contained plenty of water that is injurious both to man and locomotive (this water was excluded from the borehole by means of casing pipes), a very stiff clay was met with, and did not vary until a stratum of shingle and gravel was reached at a depth of about 140 feet. The boring tools had not penetrated many feet in the gravel when water began to appear at the level of the ground inside the casing pipe, and as the boring continued the flow of water steadily increased, until the engineer in charge telegraphed to Colonel Wallace that the discharge had reached the highly satisfactory proportions of 15,000 gallons per hour. Samples of the water, which is said to be beautifully pure, have been despatched to Lahore to be tested by the Government analyst."

The "Muslim Herald" on the Native Press.—This excellent little Mahomedan paper remarks:—"We have said that the Native Press is falling into discredit and losing weight as a popular expositor. It criticises with needless asperity, and is a very niggard in its praise, when it reviews the policy of the Government, which, do what it will, fails to please journalism so ultrapatriotic that it cannot see a mite of good in aught bearing an official brand. The Government is always in the wrong, or must be made to appear so. If there were not readers of such clogging stuff it would not be written; and it is this that makes us fear that there is a deal of undefined disloyalty among educated Natives, which would grow more strongly and practically aggressive did not the men it moves feel their utter inability to do more than weakly rail at a power which, from a wrong conception of their duty to their country, they think it patriotic to nag at in a way that is revolting to all who see in their methods a skulking aversion, which is too impotent to go beyond the stage of vituperation."

PERSIAN ANTHOLOGY.*

It may be gathered from the preface to the pamphlet entitled "Persian Anthology" that the intention of the translator is merely "to show what a mine of wealth in the way of moral and proverbial sayings, similes, tropes, metaphors and Oriental imagery lies open to any one who will take the trouble to dig for them in the soil of Persian literature." In limiting his scope of action to this end Mr. Rogers has exercised commendable prudence, for he has amply made good his contention, as expressed in the above extract, that the Western sober imagination has much to learn from the writings, so rich and fertile in conception, of the peoples of the East, whereas had more than this been essayed failure would have been "writ large" over the portals of the attempt.

To make good this somewhat sweeping criticism an explanation is necessary. First of all, it is obvious that to transplant poetry from one language to another is by the nature of things all but an impossibility—is it conceivable that the writings of Shakespeare, Milton, Byron, Dryden, Pope and the such-like could be rendered into French, and still retain the impress of genius which has stamped them with immortality. What man born of woman could clothe in fitting language of another clime the famous soliloquy, "To be or not to be?" Thus much for the inherent difficulty of the task of poetic translation; but as regards the East there is a further difficulty, if not peculiar to Oriental tongues, at any rate notable as regards the Persian language. We allude not merely to the rhythmical versification, which is the basis of all poesy, save, perhaps, the solitary exception of English blank verse; but there is, if the expression may be used, a rhyme within a rhyme. To convey a practical idea as to what this means is difficult. To say there is a jingle of words detracts from the truth, and implies a want of dignity as regards style which is altogether foreign to fact. Now, to reproduce this harmony of words is altogether impossible. No one has ever succeeded in accomplishing the hopeless task. Even Sir William Jones—by far the most profound intellect which has ever attempted to lay open to the English speaking race the rich fancies of their brethren in the East—failed in a measure in this direction; and it is no disparagement to lesser rivals to assume that they are not likely to succeed where a genius of the highest flight was forced to strike his colours.

These remarks are not intended, and, it is hoped, are not likely to be taken, in depreciation of Mr. Rogers' labours. Whether success will attend his modest endeavours to interest others in what interests himself is, perhaps, open to doubt. The many-headed public care more for mental gratification than for intellectual improvement; but his "Persian Anthology", is a step in the right direction, and thoughtful readers owe him a debt of gratitude for the trouble he has taken in their behalf. A word of praise is also due for his further efforts, in conjunction with Mr. Griffiths, to draw attention, by the tale entitled "In Persia's Golden Days," to the land of the Lion and Sun, of which the ruler has recently been the guest of other nations. The Shah's acceptance of the dedication of this unpretentious volume is a fitting indication—if such were needed—that his Majesty is anxious to do all in his power to knit together the two peoples whose destiny has linked in with the bonds of common interests and common difficulties.

THE COTTON FORECAST.

The subjoined is the First Cotton Forecast of the Director of Land Records and Agriculture for early districts of Deccan only, estimates generally up to end of August:—

In Khandesh, which contains about 9½ lakh acres, or more than nine-tenths of the total area of the Deccan, season has been favourable. Sowing rain in most parts was timely, and caused considerable increase in area. Except in a few places where it is affected by a break, crop is good and flowering. Return for Amalner, which had 58,000 acres last year, not received. Nassik and Ahmednugger, where early rain was seasonable, have respectively 14,000 and 55,000 acres, or almost double of last year's acreage. Break in August injuriously long, and crop withering. In Ahmednuggur the recent fall between the 4th and 6th September has improved the prospect, but from Nassik no change for better has yet been reported.

In South Deccan districts the reported area is 7,100 acres, against 15,100 acres last year. Sowing rain was deficient, season late, hence decrease.

The same remarks apply to Deccan Jagirs, for which reported area is 2,100 acres.

Amalner area 59,000. Sowing rain good; subsequent rain deficient. Condition middling. More rain wanted.

THE MANUFACTURE OF QUININE IN INDIA.

It is now some little time since the plant and apparatus for the manufacture of quinine were procured, and erected at the Naduvatam Cinchona Plantation, and the public in general and planters in particular would be glad to hear what Messrs. M. A. Lawson and D. Hooper have to say about the working of the new method. These gentlemen have been ready to give every possible information, and in showing the details of the process to all interested in the subject; but a short report available to the public, would now be acceptable. It has often been questioned whether a factory for the manufacture of quinine could be profitably started in India, and up to the introduction of the process now in use at Naduvatam, the answer has been in the negative. Now however, tangible results have been achieved, as the 10lb. jars of sulphate of quinine, equal in purity to Howard's, which may be seen at the factory, should convince the most sceptical. The next question is, can the drug be produced in paying quantities; or is it—like most of the gold in Wynaad—undeniably there, but too expensive to produce? It has been asserted that Government is manufacturing quinine at a loss compared with the market price, but it must be recollected that Government, when it started the present enterprise, did so more with the view of proving a process than of making a commercial success. It does not follow because the manufacture on an experimental scale does not pay that it should not do so when properly conducted on a commercial scale. It may seem rather surprising that cinchona planters, or others interested, have not moved yet in the matter of starting a factory, but there is an explanation of this in the fact that Government will give no guarantee as to its future action, and it is obvious that, whilst this is the case, nothing can be done, and private enterprise is completely checked. With large supplies of bark at hand, a genuine factory in working order, which could be enlarged so as to meet any requirements at any time, and a congested market, it is obvious that Government could, whenever it chose, completely rule Indian prices for quinine; and, though at present we are assured that there is no intention of interfering with private trade, yet it is distinctly laid down that Government will not fetter itself by promises of any kind. To business men this is very unsatisfactory, and it is to be hoped that the Government will take the matter into reconsideration and resolve on its future course. There has been great discontent amongst planters, and we do not know that it has in any way lessened, at Government retaining a large interest.

THE Government of India have recently on more than one occasion shown the solicitude which they feel to prevent British soldiers from having any differences or misunderstandings with the villagers or the local authorities when they go out for a day or two's shooting. One very sensible precaution which has been taken is to forbid any party from taking the field unless at least one member of it has a colloquial knowledge of Hindustani.

MESSRS. GEO. WHITE AND CO.'S Tea Memoranda, From Oct. 4th to 10th, gives the following statistics regarding sales:—Indian: The total brought to auction has even exceeded that of last week, which was unusually heavy. Monday's sale alone consisted of 18,000 packages, represented by over five hundred samples, being the largest on record. The demand for all kinds up to 1s. per lb. has increased, and the comparatively moderate supply has met with spirited competition, a further advance having been established in these descriptions. For good medium to fine, with strength and quality, full prices have been obtained. The choicest liquoring lines of Assam and Darjeeling still command high rates, amongst these the following full figures being realised:—Assam Frontier Co. Broken Orange Pekoe, 3s. 3d. per lb.; Medla Estate, 3s. 1½d. per lb.; and Moran Tea Co., 3s. 0¾d. per lb. Tippy Teas, on the other hand, lacking quality, at from 1s. 6d. to 2s. per lb., have sold with great irregularity, and in some instance show a marked decline in prices ruling three weeks ago. Cachars and Sylhets continue to improve, whereas some of the Assams, Darjeelings and Dooars have somewhat fallen off. Kangras and Kumaons are still above those of last year, while Travancore and the Neilgherries are only sparsely represented, quality generally being, as a rule, below the average. Telegrams from Calcutta state that the large sale comprising about 20,000 packages, held to-day, passed without material change for fine and finest, but common to medium advanced ½d. to 1d. per lb. Ceylon: There has again been a good selection, the quantity offered being rather above that of the past two weeks. The quality on the whole has been fairly maintained. Fine and finest Orange Pekoes and broken Pekoes have met with less attention at the decline quoted last week, the demand being still concentrated on teas for price, which are again dearer, Pekoe Souchongs and Souchongs marking a rise of ½d. to 1d. per lb. The average for the week is about 1s. 1¾d. per lb., as against 1s. 1½d. per lb. last week

THE TRUE STORY OF DULEEP SINGH.—II.

COLONEL MALLESON, in his able Introduction to Lady Login's book, puts the case of Duleep Singh and the action of the British Government towards him, immediately after the close of the second Sikh war, in a very terse and clear manner, holding that the treatment then dealt out to him was alike impolitic and unjust.

"When that war broke out Duleep Singh was the ward of the British Government. He was a child of nine years old, and took no part whatever in the administration of the country of which the British Government had recognised him to be the Sovereign, but of which the English Resident and a council of Native nobles were the actual rulers. The revolt of Moolraj, and the outbreak of Sikh chieftains in the Hazarah which followed that revolt, were directed against the actual Government of Lahore, which, as I have said, was presided over by an English Resident, and which ruled in the name of Duleep Singh. Yet when those risings were suppressed on the field of Gujerat, the British Government, then absolute master of the situation, visited the sins of Moolraj and the Hazarah chiefs on their innocent ward, deprived him of his kingdom, and, he has always asserted—though this would seem to be denied—of the estates which his father had accumulated, and consigned him to the care of Doctor—afterwards Sir John—Login."

During the time he was under that guardianship Duleep Singh was loyal to the British raj, contented, and, it might be added, even happy. It would be a foolish waste of words and time to go now into the question of the policy pursued by Lord Dalhousie in annexing the Punjab. But the annexation having been made, we know to-day that the result has been a benefit to the people, and a strengthening of British power and prestige in India. The wisdom of the step taken can hardly be disputed now, and it is well that ethical scruples were not allowed at the time to over-ride what appeared to be the selfish policy of expediency. In a Manifesto which was read at the great Durbar, when the young Maharajah and the Sikh Chiefs were officially informed of the intention of the British Government to assume the sovereignty of the Punjab, the following plain-spoken declaration was enunciated:—

"The Governor-General of India unfeignedly regrets that he should feel himself compelled to depose from his throne a descendant of Maharajah Runjeet Singh, while he is yet in his early youth.

"But the Sovereign of every State is responsible for, and must be affected by, the acts of his people over whom he reigns. As in the former war, the Maharajah, because of the lawless violence of his subjects, whom his Government was unable to control, was made to pay the penalty of their offence in the loss of his richest provinces; so must he now be involved in all the consequences of their further violence, and of the deep national injury they have again committed."

It cannot be denied that there is some casuistry in the above argument. The annexation of the Punjab was not only a politic but a necessary measure for the British Government to take; but, then, it must be remembered that that Government had already solemnly engaged to protect Duleep Singh in his sovereign rights during his minority, and that he personally had done nothing to warrant his deposition, but, on the contrary, had throughout evinced the greatest confidence and trust in his British protectors. He, however, made no hesitation in affixing his signature (tracing his name in English letters) to this Manifesto, which deposed him for ever from the throne, and the alacrity with which he did so was a matter of remark with all present at the scene. Possibly he had been previously advised how to act; but in a Memorandum prepared for Her Majesty by Sir John Login he writes:—"Although the young Maharajah could not but feel that the terms which had been imposed on him were hard and severe, especially when the loss of his throne was occasioned by no fault on his part, but entirely from the treachery of those whom he had placed in power around him, the difficulties with which he had been surrounded in his precarious position, before he was received under the protection of the British Government, were too strongly impressed on his mind to cause any hesitation on his part to retire into private life, and he accordingly submitted to the force of circumstances with very becoming dignity."

He allowed that force of circumstances to have its due weight with him so long as he was under Dr. Login's control, but he appears to have had from his earliest years a very distinct remembrance of his position as the heir of Runjeet Singh. On his eleventh birthday—the first after his deposition—a fête in his honour was got up by Login with the sanction of the two Lawrences—John and Henry—and in the morning he was presented with a lakh of rupees' worth of his own jewels from the Toshkhana by order of Government. He appeared dressed most splendidly, but when his guardian congratulated him upon his appearance he quietly remarked that on his previous birthday he had worn the Koh-i-noor on his aim! It may be mentioned here that that emblem of sovereignty, which he now claims as having been illegally taken away from him by the British Government, he afterwards, of his own free will and accord, when he came to England, made over to the Queen. Her Majesty had asked Lady Login "if the Maharajah ever spoke of the Koh-i-noor, and, if so, did he seem to regret it?" observing at the same time that she had never mentioned the jewel to him, and would feel a certain delicacy about wearing it in his presence. Lady Login took an early opportunity of asking the Maharajah if he would like to see the Koh-i-noor again? "Yes," was his answer, "I would give a great deal to hold it again in my own hand." "Why? For what reason?" "I should like to have it in my power myself to place it in her hand now that I am a man. I was only a child then when I surrendered it to her by the Treaty; but now I am old enough to understand."

This answer was told to Her Majesty, and on the following day a scene occurred at Buckingham Palace, where the Maharajah, at the Queen and Prince Consort's wish, was sitting to an artist for his portrait, which is graphically described by Lady Login:—

"Unknown to the Maharajah, who was engaged with the painter at the further end of the room, Her Majesty at once gave orders for the Koh-i-noor to be sent for from the Tower. After some interval there was a slight bustle near the door; the arrival of the jewel and its escort was announced, and it was brought in and presented to the Queen. Taking the diamond in her hand Her Majesty then advanced to the daïs on which the Maharajah was posed for his portrait, and before the astonished young man realised what was passing he found himself once more with the Koh-i-noor in his hand, while the Queen was asking him if he thought it improved, and whether he would have recognised it again? At first sight, indeed, he would hardly have done so, the cutting and European setting had so altered its character; yet, in spite of these, it remained still the 'Mountain of Light,' and it was with some emotion and eagerness that he walked to the window and minutely examined it, making remarks on its diminished size and greater brilliancy, whilst the spectators could not help watching his movements with some anxiety. It was a nervous quarter of an hour for Lady Login!

"But when at length he had finished his inspection Duleep Singh walked across the room, and with a low obeisance presented the Koh-i-noor to his Sovereign, expressing in a few graceful words the pleasure it afforded him to have this opportunity of himself placing it in her hands, whereupon he quietly resumed his place on the daïs, and the artist continued his work."

It is well that Lady Login has told of this historic scene. It tells much in favour of the deposed Sovereign, through whose mind strange, sad memories must at the moment ran; but then Duleep Singh had accepted his fate like a wise man. Circumstances had not yet combined to make him a foolish one.

MILITARY INTELLIGENCE.

PREPARATIONS FOR THE CHIN EXPEDITION.

A Kalewa telegram, dated Sept. 16, says :—

Preparations for the Chin Campaign are now being pushed forward. Three months' supplies for the main column, which is to advance from Gungaw or Kan, consisting of 800 tons, has to be collected at one or other of those places before a single soldier can move from the main base, Pokoko. Unfortunately the rains in the Yaw Valley are very late; it is feared, therefore, that the cart-road will not be finished more than half way between Pouk and Htitin before the troops have to start.

A great effort is to be made to get the first lot of stores, or a large portion of them, to Kan by water. They will have to be taken in steamers up the Chindwin as far as this place, and there they will be put into boats and poled, and dragged if possible as far as Kan up the Myittha river.

Captain Holland, of the I.M.S. Irrawaddy, has been exploring the Myittha in a small but powerful launch. He reports the river to be a difficult one to navigate, especially a line of rapids ten miles from Kolwa; but he believes boats carrying about six tons each can be got up for certain, and perhaps boats carrying twenty tons if the former only can be taken over. One hundred and thirty boats will be required, and it is doubtful if there are as many of this kind on the Chindwin. It is possible that they may be able to make two or three trips in the time.

All stores will have to be hand-ported over the rapids. Some 350 of the Punjabi coolies who are coming over to work on the Burma-Bayal road will be engaged on this work, no local labour being available. In addition to this the garrison of Fort White has nearly eaten out its monsoon supply of rations, and supplies will soon have to be moving up the ghat again from Kalewa and Kalemyo.

By the orders of the Chief Commissioner no Burmans or Shans of the Kale State are to be employed on any work, nor are their carts to be taken. These were pressed in large numbers last season, and though liberally and regularly paid that numbers of them have left the principality may be imagined; this increases enormously the difficulty of rationing the troops. It is feared that the greater part of the coolies coming from India, instead of being employed as transport and on the roads, will have to be employed by the Commissariat.

LIEUTENANTS BYTHELL AND ATKINSON, R.E., will probably be told off for survey work with the Chittagong column.

MAJOR MELLISS visits Mysore and Hyderabad in October and November, to arrange for the reorganisation of the armies of those States.

SOME further changes have been proposed in the scheme of mobilisation, particularly as regards the composition of the two army corps; but until the details have been worked out it is impossible to say whether the alterations are practicable.

THERE is a probability that the proposed new full-dress tunic for the Bengal Cavalry will not after all be adopted. The difficulty, of course, is to secure finality in such things, which are under the control of successive Commanders-in-Chief, and no man who is in a position to do so can refrain from ordering alterations in uniforms.

AN Army circular notifies as follows :—"Under instructions from the Secretary of State for India, the grant of the four extra pensions of £100 per annum each to senior officers of the Indian Medical Service sanctioned in Clause 91 India Army Circulars, 1886, will be discontinued as regards all officers who may be appointed to the service after the examination held in August, 1889."

MAJOR-GENERAL SIR CHARLES GOUGH intends to vacate his command of the Oudh District next spring, and there will thus be an Indian vacancy available for Major-Generals. It is highly probable that it will fall to Major-General Æneas Perkins, who belongs to the old Bengal Engineers, and who did valuable service in Afghanistan as Commanding Royal Engineers at Kabul and on the march to Kandahar.

THE arrangements are now in train for the extension of the Military Works Department to the whole of India at an early date. The Government of India are in communication with the local authorities of Madras, Bombay, Burma, and the Central Provinces, who have hitherto executed their own works, regarding the details of the transfer.

COLONEL DEANE, the head of the Remount Department, has just been visiting Ahmednagar, where he was met by Major Webb, recently in charge of the Babugarh Depôt, and Mr. Grainger, in charge of horse-breeding operations in the Bombay Presidency. All the arrangements for starting the new depôt were settled on the spot. The disused cavalry quarters, last occupied by the 3rd Hussars, will be utilised for the young stock, being converted into stables and surrounded with paddocks. The depôt will be under the charge of Major Webb, who has already been some time at Ahmednagar engaged in the business of taking over land in the neighbourhood for grass runs.

CAPTAIN MULLALY has been appointed field engineer of the Lushai Column, and Lieut. Kingscote assistant engineer.

LIEUTENANTS HARRISON AND ATKINSON are the two extra officers posted to the Sapper companies.

SURGEON-MAJOR MURPHY, 2nd Goorkhas, has been appointed Principal Medical Officer, as Dr. Seaman has declined the appointment.

CAPTAIN IND, R.A., and Captain Burton, 8th Madras Infantry, have been appointed Staff officers to General Symons with the Chin Column; Captain Clark-Kennedy, Principal Commissariat Officer; Lieut. Norie, Middlesex Regiment, Intelligence Officer; and Surgeon-Major Mouat, Principal Medical Officer.

THE collection of miscellaneous Central Asian articles and coins made by Captain de Laessoe when on duty with the Afghan Boundary Commission has been presented to the Indian Museum, Calcutta, and a duplicate of the coins to the Lahore Museum.

COMMANDER R. F. HOSKYN, it is stated, will succeed Commander Carpenter, whose term of service in charge of the Indian Marine Service shortly expires. During the past five years, writes the Englishman, the Investigator, under its able and popular commander, has done grand service on the eastern coast of India, and the mercantile community of Calcutta might well mark its sense of the value of that service before Commander Carpenter's retirement.

DR. SPENCER'S ASTHMA CURE.

Mr. D. FITZPATRICK, of Drumcree, Killucan, Westmeath, Ireland, writes:—"Thank God the two bottles of Dr. Spencer's Asthma Cure got from you cured me of the Asthma. I am over sixty years of age, and for the last twenty-five years I have suffered as much from Asthma (I believe) as any other Asthmatic could suffer, often for nights without ever lying on a bed, but I thank the good God I can now sleep as comfortable as I could wish for. I only wish every poor Asthmatic sufferer would give your cure a trial, for it is a great boon."

The public are hereby notified that the above remedy is prepared from a recently improved formula of Dr. Spencer (which has nothing to do with any other formula) and is sold, under his name, by us, who are the sole proprietors, and in no way connected with any other person or firm. We will send our Pamphlet "Asthma, its Treatment and Cure" (Third edition) by E. Edwin Spencer, M.A., M.D., &c., post free, on application

EVERY SATURDAY. PRICE SIXPENCE.

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" has acquired a reputation for early and exclusive intelligence as to Appointments and other service News, for the high character of its articles, the independent course of its staff of writers, and for its earnest support of all measures for the good of the Services. Articles on specially interesting subjects appear from week to week written for the most part by officers of rank and experience, or by men of note in literature who have made the Naval and Military affairs of the country their special study. A series of Illustrated Articles is appearing weekly on Regimental Badges and History. Illustrations with descriptions are also given of new Service inventions.
"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" freely opens its correspondence columns to all grades in the Services. By this means an opportunity for interchange of opinion is afforded, such as is offered by no other Service Journal. Its ordinary weekly issue contains fully one-fourth more matter than the other Service Journals, even with their frequent "supplements."
"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" circulates largely throughout India and the Colonies. It is supplied direct to the Army and Marine bureaux of the French, Russian, and other Governments, and it is read extensively by Officers of Foreign Services, especially of the German, French, and American Armies, who desire to acquire a true impression of facts and public opinion in England regarding Military affairs.

COORG SAUCE.
The Universal Appetiser,
PRICE ONE SHILLING.

This delicious Sauce is prepared from the receipt of a Nobleman, whose perfect knowledge of the culinary art has obtained for him the nom de plume of the "Modern Lucullus."
The name of this celebrated Sauce—
THE UNIVERSAL APPETISER—
Has been given to it because, in addition to its remarkable flavouring qualities, it possesses the singular property of
CREATING OR RESTORING THE APPETITE,
In fact, it practically realises the French saying—"L'appétit vient en mangeant."
Since the introduction of THE UNIVERSAL APPETISER it has been said, both in Society and at the Clubs, how rarely is the mauvais quart d'heure noticed, every one being so much interested in discussing and enquiring about the new Sauce—

OPINIONS.

The Calcutta Review for October reached us a day or two ago, and a glance at its contents shows that the number more than sustains the reputation which this old and favourite publication is again achieving. The Review is rapidly regaining the position which it . . . . there is no fear of the Indian Review, or the Asiatic Quarterly rivalling it in public favour.—Statesman, October 1886.

. . . . The best service which I ever rendered in India, or, indeed, for India, was the establishment, single-handed, of the Calcutta Review, which has done far more for Indian literature than anything I have written under my own name.—J. W. KAYE, Athenæum Club, une 28, 1872.

The Calcutta Review has given us valuable articles on the army. Some from the pen of Sir Henry Lawrence, who wrote with the spirit of prophesy, of the coming storm of which he was one of the noblest victims.—Address of the C.-in-C. at the U.S. Inst. of India

. . . . The Calcutta Review has not only throughout its career reflected the highest honour on its public-spirited promoters and its well-known distinguished contributors, but has done much to help forward the reconstruction of our system of governing India.—Westminster Review.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

MONDAY, OCTOBER 21, 1889.

General Intelligence.

[By Overland Mail.]

The Overland Mail brings us letters and advices from Bombay to the 4th Oct.; from Allahabad and Madras to the 2nd Oct.; and from Calcutta to the 2nd Oct.

Mr. Scoble, at the Legislative Council at Simla, Oct. 3, moved the further postponement of the Mamlatdars' Indemnity Bill. It is possible the Bill may be further modified. The Cantonment Act also came before the Supreme Legislative Council for final reading.

Major Mellis is about to visit Rajputana to reorganise the armies of local chiefs.

In the new army mobilisation scheme the two army corps will be known as the North and South, and it is probable the Punjab Frontier Force will be more extensively employed along the frontier.

The Championship at the Simla Rifle Meeting has been won by Captain Hayden, of the Duke of Wellington's Regiment.

Lieut. Farquharson, of the East Surrey Regiment, was killed on the 26th ult. by falling out of a railway carriage during the night, presumably while in a state of somnambulism.

The 17th Lancers will in all probability go from Simla to Mhow in December, relieving the 5th Lancers, who go to Lucknow, while the 18th Hussars go direct to Meerut.

The Bengal and North-Western Railway have obtained the working of the Tirhoot Railway.

Sir Mortimer Durand is recovering, but will be unable to join H.E. the Viceroy on tour.

At Mian Mir cholera has not proved so severe as was expected, but fever is making many gaps in the cantonment amongst both British and Native troops.

Claims amounting to no less than forty-five lakhs of rupees have been made on the estate of the late Sir Salar Jung.

The question of the Simla allowance is to remain unaltered till April next.

The petroleum wells of Baku are said to be showing signs of exhaustion.

A bad form of enteric fever prevails amongst the first battalion of the Rifle Brigade at Bareilly.

The Meteorological Department, it is understood, means to establish observatories at Mozufferpur, Cawnpore, Kushah, and Montgomery.

A Female Hospital in connection with the Lady Dufferin Fund is proposed to be established at Nasik.

Cholera and malarial fever of a severe type are prevalent in Hyderabad.

The Bengal Chamber of Commerce suggested the expediency of constructing an alternative line of railway between Calcutta and the North-West Provinces.

A delicate point is likely to arise in fixing the compensation to be paid to such corrupt mamlatdars as are dismissed the services under the new Bill. They cannot be awarded full pensions which have not yet accrued to them, and their attitude shows they are not prepared to accept mere compassionate allowances. The matter rests entirely with the Secretary of State, who will have to decide what is reasonable compensation in each individual case.

The required copy of the English Official Secrets Act has not yet reached India. On its receipt the Indian Bill will be drafted, and possibly passed before the Government leaves Simla.

The Anglo-Siamese Mission will probably not begin actual work in the Shan country until November is well advanced, as the climate is malarious in the early autumn.

There is no intention of adding a Deputy Secretary to the Foreign Department; but proposals have been made to raise the status of the Under-Secretary. These have so far not received the sanction of the Government of India, and must in any case be submitted to the Secretary of State for approval.

The Viceroy will probably hold levees at Rawalpindi, Peshawur, Quetta, Dera Ismail Khan, and Lahore during his tour.

The Commander-in-Chief's second tour has been slightly modified. Leaving Bombay on October 25th Sir Frederick Roberts will arrive at Lahore on Monday, the 28th.

Sir Frederick Roberts being unable to preside at the Staff College dinner in Simla the chair was taken by Sir Sir Thomas Baker.

Mr. Clogstoun, late Accountant-General, Madras, will be appointed to the Madras Board of Revenue, vice Mr. Wilson, retiring. Mr. Clogstoun returns from furlough in December, up to which time Mr. Crole will act on the Board.

Dr. Vincent Richards, Port Health Officer at Calcutta, and an authority on snakes and snake-poisoning, died on the 24th ult.

The coal seam lately discovered near Quetta proves on examination to be twenty-seven inches in thickness and to dip at an angle of 50 deg. The coal has been already worked, and is said to be of very good quality.

A synopsis of transactions in connection with Guaranteed Railways down to the end of the year 1888 is published in last Gazette. The annual result in the last five years has been turned from a loss of nearly 25 lakhs to a gain of nearly 24 lakhs. The actual loss to the State due to sterling payments has risen from 10½ lakhs to 103 lakhs.

A meeting of the shareholders of the Egerton Woollen Mills was held at Simla on the 25th ult. After a long discussion the meeting again adjourned to the 7th inst. to enable further reference to be made to the debenture-holders. The majority of these are willing to accept the proposal that three lakhs of preference shares should be raised and the Mills worked by the Cawnpore Woollen Mills. The interest on the debentures would in that case be reduced from 8 to 7 per cent. Some definite conclusion must be arrived at within the next fortnight, as otherwise the liquidation proceedings will take their course.

Lady Roberts distributed the prizes to the successful competitors at the Simla Rifle Meeting.

Sir Frederick Roberts addressed the men, and remarked that it was of the utmost importance that soldiers should become good shots.

The desire to become a good shot, his Excellency said, is in a soldier or volunteer more or less synonymous with the desire to excel in his profession. Inborn courage, added to a sturdy physique, is doubtless the first essential for a valuable fighting man, after which we must place discipline, the pride of arms, and last, but not least, skill in the use of those arms.

THERE are occasions, he further observed, when the most stubborn valour must perforce succumb to the superior shooting of an otherwise inferior enemy; and there are occasions when a courageous and well disciplined force can feel its energies stimulated, and its morale raised, by the consciousness of its possessing a superior technical education—that is to say, its being able to put more bullets into a specified object in a shorter time than its adversary.

DEPEND upon it, he added, the best infantry and the best artillery, also, is that which fires steadiest, straightest, and on occasions most rapidly.

NOTES.

THERE is little news of interest to record to-day from India. The Times telegrams will be found in another column, giving the latest intelligence up to yesterday. The news by post is of a quiet dull character, which argues well that India is enjoying what she most wants—rest.

THE arrangements are now in train for the extension of the Military Works Department to the whole of India at an early date. The Government of India are in communication with the local authorities of Madras, Bombay, Burma, and the Central Provinces, who have hitherto executed their own works regarding the details of the transfer. It seems obviously right, observes an up-country paper, that the same central authority, which has all the real initiative and responsibility of getting works sanctioned and settling their design, should have the control also of their execution.

UNDER the modified mobilisation scheme the Punjab Frontier Force will be more extensively employed, in case of war across the North-West Frontier. The two army corps which would be the first to advance across that frontier will possibly be known as the North and South, but where the line of division will be drawn is not yet settled. Major Melliss, preparatory to visiting Mysore and Hyderabad, will proceed to Rajpootana, where the reorganisation of the armies of the local Chiefs is being carried out.

IT would appear there has been some looseness in the management of the financial department of a battery of Artillery in Bombay. The Adjutant has been placed under arrest, and the Commandant, who is in England on leave, has been ordered to return to India. Until thorough inquiry is made into the matter, it would be unfair and premature, says a Bombay contemporary, to mention names. It will, no doubt, come as a great relief to all in Bombay, civil and military alike, if the questions which arise are satisfactorily answered.

CHOLERA is practically endemic in the city of Hyderabad, whilst malarial fever of a very severe type is master of the situation. Sanitary improvements in that large and uncleanly city are, therefore, matters of prime importance. The Nizam's Government has had plans prepared by the Assistant Engineer, Mr. Davis, under the supervision of the Engineer-in-chief, Mr. Palmer, for a public water supply to be distributed by a pipe system from the Meer Alum Lake; but, as with most sanitary schemes, the chief difficulty is, not in obtaining plans, but in getting the cash to carry them out. The Nizam's finances, unfortunately, seem unequal at the present moment to a demand of thirteen lakhs, which the estimate amounts to, and thus this important scheme is in abeyance. It is, however, rumoured that Sir Asman Jah, the Minister, intends to bestow the waterworks as a gift to the city at his private cost. This would, indeed, be a princely gift, and one whose benefits will extend to the meanest fakeer and the highest noble.

THE outbreak of typhoid fever and small-pox at Kabul will give food for reflection to those medical officers who were with our troops at Sherapur in 1879-80. It will be remembered that the city was found in a most insanitary state, but, curiously enough, inquiry failed to show that typhoid was common among the people. In fact, the evidence rather proved that the disease was unknown, and it was thought that Kabul, placed, as it were, in a funnel between the Asmai and Sherderwaza heights, was so swept by strong currents of pure air that the foul gases arising from the middens about every house were effectually dissipated. Cholera, it is true, had appeared from time to time, but cholera is a disease which has such an eccentric history that no conclusions could be deduced from its ravages in epidemic form in Kabul. Our troops, it may be noted, were practically entirely free from typhod during their occupation of Sherpur and the Bala Hissar.

COLONEL GRAHAM, lately commanding the Sikkim Field Force, has just sent in a despatch to army headquarters, in which the whole of the operations are passed in review from the first advance upon Lingtu to the withdrawal of the troops a few weeks ago. This, coupled with the despatches already published, will provide a complete record of the expedition, so far as the troops were concerned; the political part of the story may perhaps hereafter be told in a blue-book, and perhaps we may have a quaint narrative given in some Chinese official despatch. The latter would be interesting, especially if the Amban were allowed to explain his tortuous policy at Gnatong. "For ways that are dark" this representative of China was certainly "peculiar."

HIS ROYAL HIGHNESS THE DUKE OF CONNAUGHT, writes the Englishman, shows much of his eldest brother's aptitude for appropriate speech-making. His remarks in opening the Poona Fine Arts Exhibition were simple, direct, and apposite, affording a striking illustration of the complete success with which the speaker has in a short time succeeded in identifying himself with the pursuits and pleasures of Bombay Society. It will not escape observation that he made a passing allusion to the prospect of his departure. This, he said, was his fourth Poona exhibition, and he feared it might be his last. When the time of separation comes, not only Bombay, but all India will regret to lose the Anglo-Indian Royal Prince—if indeed it is the case that we are to lose him. The Duke has shown himself a thorough soldier at heart, and during his residence in India has borne himself in very trying positions with a perfect dignity and a manly modesty which have endeared him alike to soldiers and civilians.

A NATIVE paper, ever heedful of sayings and incidents pointing to danger to British rule in India, and, therefore, the importance of conciliating the Native (of Bengal), with much satisfaction and dark meaning, reproduces a story from a medical journal to the effect that Russia is endeavouring to "undermine British influence in India by means of well-trained and discreet medical ladies, sent here on the plea of giving professional aid to Indian women." The Indian Mirror says that the Medical Press "very pertinently" raises a voice of warning; in order, of course, that we should prepare against any attempt to undermine. Now, this fashion of alarming is somewhat pitiful, besides being monotonous; and it is very clear that the Native of India, properly so considered—which does not necessarily mean the educated Native of Bengal—is too appreciative of British rule to cause any misgiving; and as regards the educated Native of Bengal, he is perhaps more than anybody else convinced of his blessings—in the way of abusing his Governors with impunity—to wish for the inconveniences of Russian intoleration. It would not do for that Native to recognise this; but it would save much absurd and senseless writing if he did.

COLONEL G. C. GRANT, Acting Judge and Sessions Judge of Hyderabad, has been allowed privilege leave for three months.

(Times Correspondents.)

INDIA.

CALCUTTA, OCT. 20.

News has recently been received at Fort Lungleh, through messengers sent by a friendly chief, that the Shendus intend attacking the fort in large numbers before the Lushai expedition begins operations. The garrison, though small, is believed to be fully able to maintain the position. The main object of the expedition is the construction of a military road from the Chittagong Hills to the Myit'tha Valley, thus establishing through land communication between Bengal and Upper Burma. This would bring Calcutta nearer Mandalay by some 600 miles. Eventually a line of railway may follow this road and the Bengal surplus population be gradually attracted into Burma, where cultivators are greatly needed to develop the resources of the country.

Tantia Bheel has been convicted of a murder committed at Bhinpal in 1879 and sentenced to death. The murdered man was killed by Tantia and two others for having given evidence against Tantia. Further charges were abandoned.

The Indus bridge of boats over the Indus at Dera Ghazi Khan was opened for traffic yesterday.

At the last meeting of the Legislative Council the Bombay Native Officials Indemnity Bill was passed.

The Legal Member said that since its introduction numerous telegrams and other communications had been received by the Government, urging that British prestige required that the indemnity promised by Lord Reay's Government should be maintained in its integrity. One point, however, was entirely suppressed—that the indemnity was conditional on the witnesses making full disclosure. As the Indemnity Bill passed before the Commission began, he doubted whether the necessary certificate could have been given by the Commissioners. He scarcely understood the moral attitude assumed by the apologists of the incriminated officials—that promises of whatever kind, if made by the Bombay Administration must be adopted by the Imperial Government, whilst a free hand must be granted to the Mamlutdars to break the laws and violate their duty with impunity. Indeed, they were actually held up to admiration as patriots and martyrs. It had been urged that a feeling of dumb helplessness pervaded the Native official class, but this constituted no valid defence for official corruption. If the moral fibre of these Native officials was so weak that it needed strengthening, it was very unlikely that it would be strengthened by indiscriminate retentions in office of men proved to be deficient in honour and moral courage. The action of Government would inspire the best sort of confidence—namely, that the ear of Government was always open to truth so as to render corruption impossible.

The Viceroy said the Government had never represented the measure as more than the most hopeful settlement of a question full of difficulty, and rendered still less easy of solution by the fact that the Government of India was not called upon to intervene until the eleventh hour. All they claimed was that the solution proposed was on the whole the most reasonable one of which the circumstances admitted, and the most just in regard to the various interests affected. If he criticised the criticisms made on the Government he should be inclined to say that most of them were made entirely with reference to the interests of one of the parties concerned, whilst the interests of all the rest were ignored. The Government of India had not only to uphold the reputation of the Bombay Government, but it also owned a duty to the people of this country, whose interests were largely involved in the maintenance of the purity of the public service. Those who contended that the conduct of which the dismissed officials had been guilty did not unfit them for the discharge of important judicial functions were striking a serious blow at the standard of public morality. The argument was, that what would be regarded in other countries as complete disqualification for the tenure of a position of public trust was not so regarded in India, and that the Government should be content that it should be so. The Government of Bombay must be given credit for the manner in which it attempted to deal with corruption when the person suspected only was a high English official. He trusted that the Government of India would at least not be censured for having declined to tolerate the continued presence in the public service of Native officials who had been proved beyond all doubt to be tainted with corruption.

Official corruption is apparently a paying profession in Bombay, as it is now announced that these venal officials, or venial offenders as they are euphemistically described by Native sympathisers, are to be actually retired on full pay The taxpayers of Bombay ought to feel grateful to Lord Reay and his advisers for the heavy financial burden imposed through the unstatesmanlike administration of local Government throughout the whole of this business.

At the same Council meeting the Official Secrets Bill was passed.

The Viceroy referred to the recent publication by a Calcutta Native paper of a confidential document relating to Cashmere, and said that the extract, except the first line and a-half, was a sheer impudent fabrication. Important passages were suppressed and words falsely ascribed. Not content with persistently misrepresenting the Government, the publishers had not scrupled to present the public with a garbled version of a confidential note written a year ago in order to distort the account of the present views and action of the Government. Neither then nor now did the Government desire to promote their own interests at the expense of Cashmere. He was not without hopes, however, that the sincerity of their motives would be eventually understood even by those who were now misled by persistent misrepresentation. The new law was intended to meet such cases. Those who published official documents without authority came within the penalties of the Act whether the documents were published in their entirety, or, as in the present instance, were reproduced in garbled and truncated form.

An interesting episode of military good fellowship occurred at Meerut on Wednesday on the occasion of the 8th Hussars leaving the station en route for England. The native non-commissioned officers and men of the 19th Bengal Lancers expressed a wish to present the regiment with a memento of their five years' loyal comradeship at Meerut. The friendly offer was accepted gratefully, and a silver cup will be forwarded to the sergeants' mess in England.

A telegram from Quetta states that two British officers have been shot near Chaman while attempting to arrest a Pathan robber, and one has since died.

All the Punjab Feudatory States will send their reorganised cavalry to the camp of exercise at Mundki. The Bhurtpore selected force, consisting of a regiment of infantry and a regiment of cavalry, has been already disciplined and equipped.

The Puttiala-Bhatinda Railway was opened on Tuesday by the Maharajah. In the course of his speech he thanked the Government for constructing the line.

The Calcutta Trades' Association have addressed the Government, strongly urging the advisability, in the interests of commerce, of sanctioning without delay an alternative railway route to the North-West.

Two members of the Jain community have recently been outcasted by their co-religionists for visiting England.

In the Madras religious riots twenty-five of the prisoners were wounded. The case is being investigated by a magistrate. The first batch will comprise five Hindoos and forty-two Mahomedans.

Heavy floods have occurred in Madras, caused by the recent rains. The railway has been breached near Gooty.

The Viceroy leaves Simla for the cold weather tour, en route to Calcutta, on the 22nd inst. He travels direct to Kohat.

The Duke and Duchess of Connaught will visit him in Calcutta in January.

The Government offices open in Calcutta on November 1st.

Prince Albert Victor leaves Madras on December 16th for Burma, and arrives in Calcutta on January 4th.

BURMA.

RANGOON, OCT 19.

Another daring dacoity is reported from Bhamo. The dacoits, who came down the river in boats, burned the house of a Burman Myooke, capturing and carrying off the Myooke himself and two relatives. The house is situated inside the town stockade. The Myooke subsequently escaped. Part of the gang were captured, but the rest are still at large. A village near Yenangyoung has also been plundered. The military police are pursuing the dacoits.

Boh Thai, who murdered Mr. Glehon near Mingin about a year ago, has been captured at Mawradan, on the Chindwin river.

The Mandalay Herald reports the death of a Burman prisoner from torture by police during the investigation into a dacoity. The unfortunate man is alleged to have been taken into the jungle, where pressure was applied to his neck by two pieces of bamboo, his spine being broken. It is further stated that a certificate of death from heart disease was issued. An inquiry into the case is now proceeding.

The local and Indian Press unite in warmly recommending advantage being taken of Prince Albert Victor's visit to Burma to release many prisoners now undergoing imprisonment for dacoity. It is pointed out that those whom we call dacoits were in many instances, for the first two years at least of our occupation, really waging war against us. The real resistance to our troops only began after Thebaw was deposed. At the time it was necessary for the public peace to incarcerate all persons found in open rebellion. Many of those who were sentenced to long terms of imprisonment were, however, men who were fighting, as they believed, for their country, and whose offence was, to a great extent, political. They can hardly be blamed for not at once recognising our power, especially considering that many Burmans in the lower province refused to believe for a long time the reports of our success. Their leaders were men of influence in their districts, in some cases with pretensions to royalty. Many convicts, of course, were guilty of atrocious crime, but now that our position is better established, and dacoity has become mere lawlessness with no pretensions to patriotic motives, a large proportion of the earlier prisoners might safely be released. Such a course would be extremely popular, and no better opportunity than the Royal visit could be taken.

The escort accompanying the Siam Boundary Commission will probably include half a European battalion and one mounted battery, the object being to impress the Shan and Siamese chiefs and provide against any outbreak, as the smaller tribes still carry on internecine warfare. The debateable ground is very extensive, and adjusting the claims of the rival Tsawbwas will be a long and delicate operation. The Commission will probably not return till March.

Eight officers and 300 men of the Cheshire Regiment now quartered in Rangoon leave for the Chin expedition this week.

ANGLO-INDIAN PRESS.

THE INDIAN SORCERER.

By a Hindoo.

(Statesman.)

The zemindar of a village in Northern India is harassed with the fear that he may die without leaving an heir, which is the greatest curse that can befall a Hindoo. His former wife died, leaving him but two daughters, and all his children by his present wife sickened and died soon after their birth. No doctor or physician, neither the costly offerings to the deities and Brahmins could save the lives of the tender ones. The zemindar is quite in despair. At last the villagers begin to whisper to one another that there must be some evil spirit in their landlord's house who kills the young babies. The whisper soon reaches the ear of the zemindar, who, however, takes very little notice of it; but his wife, who expects to bring him an heir soon, persuades him to listen to the people for her as well as for his family's sake and do the needful to please the evil spirits. The zemindar helplessly consents, and sends for the Ojha, the great sorcerer of the village, who will act as the mediator between him and the malicious creatures.

Soon after nightfall next Saturday the zemindar's house becomes crowded with people, all anxious to have a good look at the horrid beings who have made their beneficent landlord so unhappy. But they are all left either in the courtyard or outside the house and strictly forbidden to make any noise whatever, lest they should disturb the ghost séance which is being held upstairs.

In a large dark room, with all its doors and windows shut except the one furthest from the assembled party and nearest the roof, there sit on one side the zemindar and a few friends, and his wife, with one or two strong-minded female companions; behind the screen in a corner, in the centre, squats a grey-haired man, with a huge turban on his head—the mighty Ojha himself—and his two young disciples, with bundles under their arms, in front of a very low fire with smoke continually issuing from it. The sorcerer, muttering charms, dribbles into the smoking fire butter or oil and incense, just enough to keep alive its lurid light and produce more and more smoke, which at last makes the atmosphere of the room so thick and dark that you can hardly see what is going on before you. This preliminary operation occupies nearly three hours, by the end of which time most of the people waiting about the house have departed home, and the men in the dark room have all but gone to sleep, and the women huddle together shivering with fright. Midnight approaching the Ojha, bidding the people in the room shut their eyes, shouts, coaxing the spirits thus:—"My masters, my lords, ghosts! You are my only friends, be once more merciful to your slave, and come down here and tell the zemindar that he will have a son soon, who will live long and continue his great name." . . . The sorcerer goes on in this fashion for half-an-hour. At last there appear, amidst considerable noise, near the open high window at the further end of the room, two forms shrouded in white, whom the Ojha entreats to partake of the food provided for them by the zemindar. At the name of food the two ghosts jump down with delight and despatch the dishes in less than three minutes. The repast over, they again climb up to the window, wherefrom they reply to the sorcerer's questions. "My lords, my parents, my friends, ghosts!" asks the Ojha, "will you now kindly tell the zemindar if he will have a son and heir?" To which the spirits reply, in a nasal twang, "Yes, yes, we are satisfied with his kind treatment; his wish will be fulfilled. He shall have a son who will live long." Perhaps in the middle of the conversation one of the frightened women utters the name of "Ram," who is said to be the mortal enemy of the spirits. The two ghosts disappear in a twinkling; the low fire burns up; and the sorcerer, accompanied by his two disciples with bundles under their arms, go home, carrying the remnant of the offerings and a purse containing about twenty rupees.

The Ojha is called in by the superstitious when anything valuable is lost, in cases of incurable diseases, and when children are believed to be bewitched. The sorcerer, sitting in front of his patient, with flowers in his hand, and a lamp and incense burning before him, gives burnt turmeric and charmed mustard seed to the bewitched person to smell, and dashes cold water with violence upon his face. It is said that, in one instance, upon the sorcerer squeezing the juice of a certain plant into the eyes of a bewitched child, the witch immediately complained of pain in her eyes, which she lost, and the child was cured.

The common sorcerers in India are a people of very low caste, or no caste at all, belonging mainly to the aboriginal races who are still outside the pale of Hindooism, though they may all call themselves Hindoos or Mahomedans. This is clearly shown by their name "Ojha," which is, however, now applied to all kinds of India sorcerers—aboriginal, Mahomedan, or Brahmin. The true Ojha is so called because he examines the Ojh—a non-Sanskrit word meaning "entrails"—of the victim of evil influence immediately after it has been slain. This the other sorcerers do not; the title Ojha, nevertheless, has fastened itself upon them, including even the holy Brahmin wizard. As a matter of fact, sorcrey in India originally belonged to the aboriginal races, from whom the Brahmins and others have acquired the art.

There is a class of sorcerers called "Devotees," or "Wise Men," who also belong to the lower and menial castes. These confine themselves to divination, and generally work under the inspiration of a snake-god, and sometimes under that of a Mussulman saint. Inspiration is shown by the man's head beginning to wag, and he then builds a shrine to his familiar, before which he dances, or "sports," as it is called by the people. He is consulted at night, the inquirer providing tobacco and music. The tobacco is first waved over the body of the invalid, and then given to the "wise man" to smoke. A butter-lamp is lighted, the music plays, and the diviner lashes himself with a whip. He is at last seized by the afflatus, and in a paroxysm of dancing and head-wagging declares the name of the malignant influence, the manner in which it is to be propitiated, and the time when the disease may be expected to abate.

By far the most formidable magical powers are, however, attributed to a class of Brahmins called the Ojha Brahmins. They are versed in the practice of the spells and charms which, with the accompanying rites, are described in the Sanskrit books, called tantras. The key-note of these is struck in a well-known sentence, which runs thus:—"The whole world is in the power of the gods, and the gods are in the power of magic; magic is in the power of the Brahmins, and therefore the Brahmin is himself the god." The author of this oracular deliverance is of course the Brahmin, who, however, merely systematised the magical spells and charms, having himself learnt them from the aboriginal tribes. The Sanskrit treatises on magic explain the various modes in which the human mind can be subjugated and occult powers exercised to produce miraculous results. This is accomplished in three ways:—(1) Through the agency of spirits, or lower deities, who are made subservient to the will of the magician; (2) through natural causes, intensified by the agency of the occult powers of the magician; (3) by herbs and other plants charmed by means of incantations. Of the six modes in which the Brahmin sorcerer can influence his neighbours four are malignant, one is doubtful, and only one is beneficial. The four malignant operations are the causing of death, the destruction of property, the stoppage of physical and mental action, and the causing of feuds between friends. The neutral operation consists in bringing an individual completely under the control of the expert. The only branch of white magic discussed is the power of relieving a sufferer from disease or from the hostile influence of the stars and planets.

The neutral art of "subjugation" is the one most frequently practised in modern times. Certain ingredients are prescribed for this operation. A small piece of the frontal bone of a man, the fruit of the poisonous plant dhatura, camphor, and honey are to be taken in proper proportions and well mixed together, and the forehead is to be painted with the compound before the wearer may bring under his influence and control the mind of any person whom he fears or loves. Other nostrums, of which some idea can be formed from the ingredients in the witches' cauldron in Macbeth, becoming more and more complex and gruesome as the higher departments of the Black Art are reached, are to be found in the original treatises. The office of sorcerer is generally hereditary among all the Indian Ojhas, but strictly so with the conjuring Brahmins, who form a special caste by themselves. A severe and prolonged probation must be undergone before a Brahmin is considered competent to commence the practice of the magical art. He must go through a course of recitation of unintellgible Sanskrit roots, and of repetition of the name of the deity to be conquered about a million times. Special hours are assigned for this performance, special postures of the body, special diet, and a specially-appointed space beyond which the probationer must not go until the process of initiation is finished. Of course all this has to be accompanied with handsome offerings to the deities and the Brahmins, and substantial feasts to the latter. The deities invoked are merely variations of the same dreaded goddess, Kali, who is the presiding deity of both the Brahmin and non-Brahmin sorcerers in India. The former, as well as the latter, undergo a rigorous course of physical and mental discipline before the goddess will consent to use them as the instruments of her power; both indulge largely in flesh diet, in intoxicating liquors, and in lewd practices; both shed the blood of animals before the idol which they worship; both profess to expel evils from the sick, or to bring them into the healthy: both use magic, spells, and charms. All this leads one to the conclusion that the Brahmin sorcerers not only learnt their art from the aboriginal Ojhas, but that a great many of them are descended from the non-Hindoo priests, specimens of whom abound even at the present day among the wild and casteless tribes of Northern India.

PRUNING FROM THE TOP.

(Bombay Gazette.)

"Pray you, look not sad,
Nor make replies of loathness: take the hint
Which my despair proclaims."

—ANTONY AND CLEOPATRA.

Anybody who takes the trouble to ascertain what sort of salaries are paid to Government officials in India must be immediately struck with the very high rates allowed to those not only at the top of the tree but half-way up. It is only those at the bottom who are moderately recompensed for their services, and in some instances it is observable that a good deal of hard work of a responsible nature is performed for a very small wage indeed.

Spasmodic applications of the pruning-knife in the name of economical reforms have now and then been made, considerable vigour being displayed in cutting, or rather hacking, at the lower branches, whilst as the arm had to be raised for higher execution all energy seems to have died away, and the result has been that the topmost boughs have wholly escaped. A true economist (and by a true economist I mean that earnest, conscientious spirit which is bent on discovering how the resources of the country can best be nursed so as to provide the greatest happiness for the greatest number) would laugh to scorn these half-demented efforts, feebly conceived and as feebly carried out. A great deal of dissatisfaction has been aroused, and that in the breasts of honest, hard workers, who naturally feel aggrieved at having their scanty allowances docked, whilst the enormous salaries of the privileged ones remain untouched; and in the name of all that is considered justice or ordinary intelligence, where is the sense of decreasing the expenditure by cutting down small but often very necessary expenses and leaving the bigger and often unnecessary ones alone?

Now, in dispassionately considering the question of relieving the Government of India of its present financial difficulties, it seems only right and proper that it should be dealt with and disposed of, if possible, by the Government of India itself. Some may say that it is hopeless to expect such disinterestedness and self-sacrifice to be shown by the very individuals who at this moment may be drawing the gigantic sums shown further on, and that they cannot, therefore, be expected to support the idea of such reduction; but we will suppose that the Viceroy himself leads the van and calls upon his Councillors to rally round him.

Are those Councillors going to refuse to follow and to endanger the prosperity of India, which is all the while keeping them in unheard of official health? I do not say that the Government of India should not be conducted on the very highest scale of intellectual intelligence. That, I consider, is most necessary in a country where the rulers in their hundreds have to deal with the ruled in their millions, and with education of a high order making itself felt in many ways throughout the length and breadth of the land.

But what I do say is, that even intellectual ability may at times be too highly rated at the pay-master's office, and the economist will here tell us that we should not offer more than enough. Circumstances are changing rapidly, and the requirements of civilisation are exercising a strong and natural pressure on those who control expenditure. Every day we see the necessity of the public funds being not only carefully but fairly apportioned, so that legitimate wants may, as far as possible, be provided for, and useless or extravagant payments avoided.

Who is he who could honestly declare that the Indian Services would at all suffer if the salaries at present given to the higher officials were reduced all round? The civil lists of the several Presidencies if referred to will show at a glance the ruinously high rates at present being disbursed. I would en passant note the following which strike one as abnormally high. It might at the same time, with a view to preventing hardship to actual incumbents, be notified that the reduced scale of pay will only come into operation on a change occurring in the permanent holder of an appointment:—

The only wonder is how India can stand such a gigantic and continuous drain on her resources, for it must be remembered that not only does a very large proportion of these salaries find its way out of the country, but a considerable number of the recipients of the sums named having made their pile, retire with it, and a handsome pension paid in England in sterling by the Government of India, and are at once succeeded by others who follow their example very readily. This will continue until the hand of economical justice checks such ruthless spoliation of the public revenues, and the granting of such enormous and preposterous emoluments.

Let the knife be applied vigorously and without delay to the topmost boughs; let the salaries of all mentioned in the lists be cut down to such figures that the fortunate recipients even then may accept their pay without the blush of shame.

A reduction of 25 per cent. would not be at all too much to impose. Depend upon it, the work done for the sum spent will be just as well performed as hitherto, and whilst there will be no loss in the efficiency of the public service, there will be a most decided gain to England, both as regards her prestige as a British Government and in her position from a pecuniary point of view. Of course, everybody who thinks knows that this is what is really needed, but nobody seems particularly anxious to propose it. It is supposed to be "delicate ground," and the dread of offending the powers that be is a very real thing in India, where so much is done by "khutput" and "mehrbani." If, however, it is evident that such reform will never originate from within, then it can only be brought about by pressure from without. Good, honest pressure, admitting of no hanky-panky tricks to evade. Already do the echoes of distant groanings reach our ears. The "voice of India" is a lamenting voice, and with reason. Let us be up and doing, then, and in lieu of well-deserved reproaches we shall be greeted with the grateful acclamations of our fellow-subjects of all ranks. Is not this a fitting theme for well-wishers of England and India to take up in Parliament, and for the powerful advocacy of the Press to bring home to the consciences and minds of those who are directly responsible for the purity, the intelligence, and the financial soundness of the administration of India?

In a matter of national importance, such as this is, half-hearted measures of reform are not only useless but injurious, for they cannot fail to be unfair. What is necessary is, not that a lot of wretched peons should be given 7 rupees a month instead of 8, or that the travelling allowances of some hard-working policemen should be reduced one-third, or that petty karkoons who have been struggling patiently on for years, hoping for promotion in due course of time, should suddenly find themselves stranded, or that State officials, unless of a certain grade, should be denied the use of ink which is supposed to stand the test of time. No, these and scores of other actions of Government are only irritating and absurd, and do not materially improve the financial situation at all. What is needed is that the whole system of salaries paid to Government officials in India, from the Governor-General down to those drawing, say, Rs. 1,000 per mensem, should be recast or reduced 25 per cent. all round on all amounts over Rs. 1,000 per mensem, e.g., a man at present drawing Rs. 1,200 would receive Rs. 1,150, or if he drew Rs. 2,000 he would get Rs. 1,750, 25 per cent. being in each case deducted from the amount in excess of Rs. 1,000 per mensem. Let the Accountant-General tell us what such a reduction throughout India would amount to. It would be something enormous, and I have no hesitation in saying that it would, under the circumstances, be perfectly justifiable.

Those who object to so sweeping a measure of reform can keep their objections to themselves, or retire from the service. There are plenty of others equally capable, and certainly more conscientious, who would consider themselves fortunate indeed if given the chance of succeeding to the decreased but still liberal emoluments of office. A clearance of such ill-disposed malcontents would be an obvious advantage to India. Relegated to Asia Minior, Bath, or Cheltenham, they would have every opportunity of airing their grievances; but I doubt if ever in those places of retirement they would in these bustling times find many sympathetic souls willing to waste their leisure in listening to their lugubrious tales. Let our new Viceroy take the subject into his most serious consideration, and if he favours the proposal, let him boldly head the movement for bringing it about. It would be one of the grandest achievements ever attempted by an Indian administrator, and would earn him the heartfelt blessings of the millions over whom he has been called upon to rule. It is quite certain that at last, thanks in a great measure to the ever-increasing knowledge of Indian affairs which Secretaries of State, members of the Houses of Lords and Commons, and the British public in general are now gathering in, the period for the tide to turn is rapidly approaching, and justice will, it is devoutly hoped, be meted out to all concerned. We are told that at times we do well to be angry, and if righteous indignation is at all dominant in the hearts and minds of earnest, conscientious, and unbiassed legislators, it is a sure sign that the end of all this frightful blundering over Indian finance is drawing near. That such may, indeed, be the case is the sincere wish, amongst many, of Mr. Bow-Wow (who himself draws considerably over Rs. 1,000 per mensem).

OUR HIMALAYAN BORDER TRADE.

(Statesman.)

We received some days ago the official report "On the extent of trade of Bengal with Nepal, Tibet, Sikkim, and Bhootan for the year 1888-89." Official publications of this nature, though not very interesting pabulum for the average reader, are useful, as showing how any complications on our frontiers interfere with trade, and the necessity of treating the semi-civilised States on our borders with tact and discretion. We are told in this report that the total value of our trade with these States fell off 15·13 per cent. in 1888-89 in comparison with the trade of the two preceding years, the largest decrease occurring in the imports, which were below the aggregate of the two years by 23·21 per cent. and 10·8 per cent. respectively. As to Nepal, the report tells us that "the chief feature of the past year's trade was a falling-off of 16·35 per cent. and 8·56 per cent. in the imports from Nepal, in comparison with the figures of the two previous years, respectively, while there was an increase in the exports to that State of 1·07 per cent. and 40·46 per cent. as compared with 1887-88 and 1886-87 respectively. The total value of the trade from and to Nepal was 9·46 per cent. less than in the preceding year, but 8·09 per cent. greater than in 1886-87. The imports of cattle, raw cotton, and the exports of rice and other rain crops, and European piecegoods show a satisfactory increase, but the imports of grain and pulse, and rice, have fallen off largely." A further increase is noted in the import and export of cattle, and there was also a considerable expansion of the export trade in European piece-goods. A heavy falling off is recorded, however, in the imports of food grains into British territory from Nepal, which, from 27,51,874 maunds in 1887-88, fell, we observe, to 12,63,780 maunds in the year under review. The decrease is very noticeable in the rice trade, which had fallen from 9,99,770 maunds in 1887-88 to 3,76,922 maunds for 1888-89. The collector of Chumparun explains the decrease, however, in the following words:—"Food grains were not imported on the usual scale, in consequence of the short harvest in Nepal. Crops were as bad in Nepal as in our territory, and for some time its Durbar laid an embargo on the export of such articles." A continued improvement is noted in the import of cattle hides, which exceeded the trade of 1887-88 by 6,559 pieces. In the important article ghee we are told that the import trade continued active, the increase during the year amounting to 3,948 maunds, compared with the previous year. The greater part of this import was for Calcutta, which received 2,832 maunds against 621 maunds in 1887-88. The import trade in the skins of sheep, goats, and other small cattle showed a large falling-off; but the exports of brass and copper continued to increase, although the export trade in iron showed a decrease of 12·76 per cent. Under the head of all other kinds of provisions, we notice that the imports and exports together aggregated 1,26,804 maunds against 100,544 maunds, and 68,252 maunds in 1887-88 and 1886-87 respectively. The returns for the export trade in salt show an increase of 6,693 maunds on those of the previous year; but a decrease is recorded in the import of linseed and mustard seed. The export of spices to Nepal was about the same as last year, and in regard to tobacco we are informed that the total trade amounted during the year to 95,778 maunds, showing an increase of 44,724 maunds and 62,734 maunds respectively on the returns of 1887-88 and 1886-87. The Commissioner of Bhagulpore remarks:—"The Nepal tobacco commands a higher price than country tobacco. The leaf of this tobacco is stated to be very coarse and succulent, dark in colour and blunt at its apex." There was a decrease of 29,041 maunds in the imports of timber, and an increase of 4·63 per cent. in manufactured wool exported during 1888-89. The value of silver imported from Nepal during the past year fell off by Rs. 86,828 on the return of the previous year.

Thus so far as Nepal is concerned, the returns are not unsatisfactory, but under the heading of trade with Thibet and Sikkim we read that the trade with the former place "had practically ceased, owing to the present complication on the frontier." The imports from British territory into Thibet amounted in 1888-89 but to Rs. 3,168, against Rs. 1,90,427 in 1887-88, and 2,18,143 for the preceding year. The exports from British territory to Thibet were but Rs. 4,181 in the year under notice, against Rs. 1,74,799 for 1887-88, and Rs. 3,40,462 in 1886-87. The aggregate import and export with Sikkim fell from Rs. 2,50,870 in 1887-88 to Rs. 2,00,359 for 1888-89, but the fall in the case of Thibet was from Rs. 3,65,226 to Rs. 7,349. In every item under the head of imports from Thibet, the fall was tantamount to extinction. Thus the import of horses had fallen from Rs. 43,290 in 1887-88, to Rs. 990 in 1888-89; yak-tails from Rs. 58,596 to Rs. 842; manufactured wool from Rs. 25,883 to Rs. 707, and raw wool from Rs. 51,154 to Rs. 358. The figures for 1887-88 had been much in advance of those of 1886-87. In regard to the imports from Sikkim, a decrease is noted in every item except raw cotton and Indian cotton piece-goods, in which the increase is but trifling. The statement showing the total value of the principal articles in the export trade between Bengal and Tibet is to the effect that the total value of European cotton piece-goods exported to Tibet had dropped from Rs. 77,772 in 1887-88 to Rs. 2,256 in 1888-89; manufactured European wool from Rs. 6,753 to Rs. 1,862; and tobacco from Rs. 21,794 to Rs. 61. The trade in indigo, horses, jewellery, dyeing materials, brass and copper, European cotton twist, iron, Chinese and Japanese ware, and manufactured Indian silk had entirely ceased, while the exports to Sikkim show that there was an increase in the quantity of tobacco exported to that country husked rice, cattle and salt, a slight decrease only being noticeable in the case of European cotton piece-goods, provisions, brass and copper, and animals other than horses, ponies, and mules.

The returns for the trade between Bengal and Bhootan show an increase in the imports of Rs. 19,795, the figures for 1888-89 being Rs. 1,48,708, but there was a slight decrease in the exports. The increase in the imports from Bhootan fall under the heads of manufactured Indian wool, musk, and fresh fruit and vegetables. The report concludes with some remarks upon the uncertainty and irregularity of the customs duties imposed by the Nepal Government, but concerning which there seems to be no exact information. On one side it is reported that the duties were discontinued altogether on the Chumparun border, for the collector of Mozufferpore states that "with the exception of a duty on hides, the Nepalese authorities now levy no duty on imports and exports." The collector of Bhagulpore also reports that the Nepalese authorities had since September, 1888, stopped the levying of imposts on trade. A single paragraph deals with the falling-off in the quantity of untaxed salt imported into British territory from trans-Himalayan sources which is said to be due to political complications, and the cheapness of the salt from the plains.

TOMMY ATKINS AS A SHIKAR.

(Bombay Gazette.)

The Government of India have recently, on more than one occasion, shown the solicitude which they feel to prevent British soldiers from having any differences or misunderstandings with the villagers or the local authorities when they go out for a day or two's shooting. One very sensible precaution which has been taken is to forbid any party from taking the field unless at least one member of it has a colloquial knowledge of Hindustani. Some new rules have now been added to the Army Regulations under the head of Discipline, which provide for notices of the grant of shooting passes, extending every three days, being sent to the magistrate in every case, i.e., whether or not the passes are granted to shoot in a district other than that in which the station to which the men belong is situated. Representations have been made that the rules, as they have hitherto stood, did not provide for any notice of the advent of a shooting party being sent to the military authorities of the district concerned, the consequence being that sometimes soldiers wander about in the hot weather away from good food and shelter to the detriment of their health; moreover, as was actually the case recently, a shooting party from a distance might arrive at a place where the close season having set in, the shooting of game is prohibited for the time being under the game laws of the district, and thus undergo inconvenience and fatigue to no purpose. It is now ordered that when shooting passes are granted to non-commissioned officers or men, a notice is to be sent to the magistrate of the district to which the men are about to proceed, stating the rank and the names of the party, and as nearly as possible the part of the districts to which they are going. Care is to be taken that passes are only given for localities where shooting can properly be pursued. The time for which such shooting passes may be given is limited to fourteen days on each occasion. Officers granting passes are to take care that all rules regarding the close season of the district concerned are explained to the men and in order to prevent men from proceeding to districts where sickness is prevalent due notice of the grant of passes will be made to the officer commanding the station concerned. Soldiers on furlough for shooting, who may proceed to districts where there are military stations, will be required to report themselves to the station staff officer on arrival at their destination, and they will be attached for rations and quarters to some corps at the station. The authorities, both civil and military, will thus be enabled to exercise a sufficient control over Thomas Atkins when he is engaged in shikar, to prevent any fracas with the ryots, or any contravention of the forest and game laws.

SIMLA SYBARITES.

The Englishman harps on the right string concerning the Exodus question: –

"When the Viceroy reads the story of flood and famine which he has just received from Bengal we wonder whether it will occur to him that the time devoted by the Lieutenant-Governor to the arduous and anxious work of inspecting the afflicted districts covered a great part of the Simla season. We are told by the Simla sybarites that work in the plains is well nigh impossible during the hot season; and that it is little short of madness for anyone to remain in India who can get away to the hills. High Court Judges, merchants, and district officials, we learn, are to be pitied because they cannot help themselves. But how about the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal? It will not be denied that Sir Steuart Bayley has it in his power, equally with the heads of the Postal and Telegraph Departments, the Director of Indian Marine, and the host of young Assistant Secretaries, to take his work to the hills, if he chooses. According to the Simla theory, he might have inspected the stricken districts equally well from Darjiling. While enjoying the blessings of a delightful climate, he was free to issue his orders to subordinate officials, and to receive their reports by telegraph. Nothing could be simpler or more charming; but evidently Sir Steuart Bayley has other ideas regarding the duties and responsibilities of his position, and, strange as it may seem, there are many who are glad to see a Lieutenant-Governor, albeit a man who is no longer young and who might plead long years of Indian service, still clinging to the old-fashioned conviction that the work of administration is best done on the spot, and that there is something after all in the force of example. Lord Connemara was recently thanked by the Queen for having gone on a tour of inspection through Ganjam during the hot season, and in these absentee days such thanks are deserved. But in Bengal it is not merely on the occasion of great calamities that our rulers remain in the plains; the custom has been kept up year after year, and by a succession of Lieutenant-Governors, as one of the traditions of the office. It is not to be denied for a moment, however, that the Simla arrangement is the more enjoyable one, whatever else may be thought of it. Certainly the delights of touring in the Indian solstice are not to be compared with the pleasures of life in the hills, and yet, as we see, there are those who extend to them a perverse preference."

THE SUPERANNUATION QUESTION.

(Pioneer.)

In England the superannuation question and the fixing of the age at which enforced retirement should come into force have been giving rise to as much controversy almost as the fifty-five year rule in India. Finally in a new set of rules just brought out for the Home Civil Service a limit has been fixed at sixty-five; or at any rate the difficulties in the way of procuring an extension after that time which have to be overcome by a special declaration couched in very high terms as to the value of the applicant's services are such that in ninety-nine cases out of a hundred the new rule will be absolute. Looking to the easy character of the existences which men are generally supposed to pass in the English public offices and the climate in which they pass them, sixty-five is certainly not more than a fair equivalent for fifty-five years in this country. But there are many men who will maintain that a public servant is past his best at either age, and that the State should cast him out. Looking at it purely as a matter of fitness we should say the very opposite is the case. Among the Cherokees or Zulus the rule might hold good no doubt; but when we see the most influential speaker in England, still more conspicuous for his restless activity than his speaking, showing no symptoms of abating force at the age of eighty; when we remember Lord Beaconsfield in the zenith of his reputation as he approached that age; when we reflect upon the extreme unlikelihood that any one will suggest that Lord Salisbury should be disqualified for directing the affairs of the nation after he has lived another five years; when we call to mind Lyndhurst, Palmerston, Brougham and a score of others, it seems rather absurd to say that a man cannot retain a humdrum post in Government service beyond this age or that without the public interests suffering. The fact of course is that superannuation does not rest upon any of these high grounds, but is a device for ensuring a reasonable flow of promotion. In the English Civil Service heretofore the plan adopted to get rid of an inconveniently long lived and tenacious officer was to abolish his office, and after giving him a handsome special pension, to create it afresh for his successor. If the same plan could be adopted in India we should no doubt hear little of the mental deterioration which sets in at fifty-five according to the opinion of those who are still below that age.

BENGAL.

(Oct. 2.)

THE Meteorological Department means to establish observatories at Mozufferpur, Cawnpore, Kushab, and Montgomery.

THE Indian Mirror wishes it had the Bishop of Bombay in Calcutta to plead with the eloquence he displayed at the meeting held to protest against the change in the mail day, "against the interference by a Christian Government and a Christian mercantile class with the Durga Puja holidays of the Hindoos."

THERE is, a contemporary hears, a probability that the proposed new full-dress tunic for the Bengal Cavalry will not after all be adopted. The difficulty, of course, is to secure finality in such things, which are under the control of successive Commanders-in-Chief, and no man who is in a position to do so can refrain from ordering alterations in uniforms.

LAST year there were forty-six mill factories and presses at work in the Calcutta Presidency Division, which gave employment to upwards of fifty thousand persons. The principal additions during the year were a new bone-crushing factory and two new cotton mills, while one of the older mills had doubled the number of its spindles. There was a large increase in the outturn of manufactured jute, the total value of which was estimated at upwards of twenty-one crores.

ACCORDING to the Commissioner of the Calcutta Presidency Division, the general tone of the Native Press is loyal, though some of the papers not unfrequently "exceed the limits of moderation." In support of this opinion, he adds:—"I am myself inclined to think that there are signs of gradual improvement in the tone of the Press. With the increased facilities for obtaining accurate information which the spread of education and the gradual opening out of the country by roads and railways, steam communications by sea and river, post and telegraph are affording, there is, I think, a growing sense of responsibility, especially among the more influential organs, for the accuracy of the facts published. There is noticeable, too, a sensible abatement of exacerbation of race animosity which was so noticeable a feature a few years back."

THE idea of establishing a dhobikhana for Calcutta, similar to that which has been in existence for several years past on "the Flats" at Bombay is, thinks the Indian Daily News, an excellent one, and Sir Henry Harrison deserves the thanks of the whole community for having induced the Municipal Commissioners to take up the subject and consider what looks like a workable plan of operations. The Bombay example shows that the dhobis may be brought under supervision and control without imposing any financial burden on the town; in fact, the Bombay dhobiwada, as it is called, is understood to yield a clear profit of ten per cent. on the outlay. This institution is in the form of a circular enclosure, situated some little distance out of the town, and containing 331 separate compartments, which are rented to dhobis at Rs. 3 per month. Washing stones are provided, and water is laid on from the Municipal main. We fully agree with the chairman that the proposed improvement is one of great importance. In fact, this is a matter in which the Corporation has neglected its duty as conservator of the public health. The only question seems to be the proportion in which the cost should be divided between the town and the suburbs, and this ought not to prove a serious obstacle. The total cost is roughly estimated at only some Rs. 66,000. If the town paid the whole amount, it would be money well invested, apart from any prospect of direct profit.

WE quote from the Madras Mail:—Cholera is practically endemic in the city of Hyderabad, whilst malarial fever of a very severe type is master of the situation. Sanitary improvements in that large and uncleanly city are, therefore, matters of prime importance. The Nizam's Government has had plans prepared by the Assistant Engineer, Mr. Davis, under the supervision of the Engineer-in-Chief, Mr. Palmer, for a public water supply to be distributed by a pipe system from the Meer Alum Lake; but, as with most sanitary schemes, the chief difficulty is not obtaining plans, but in getting the cash to carry them out. The Nizam's finances, unfortunately, seem unequal at the present moment to a demand of thirteen lakhs which the estimate amounts to, and thus this important scheme is in obeyance. It is, however, rumoured that Sir Asman Jah, the Minister, intends to bestow the waterworks as a gift to the city at his private cost. This would indeed be a princely gift, and one whose benefits will extend to the meanest fakeer and the highest noble."

THE Madras Club has resolved to invite H.R.H. Albert Victor, K.G., to a ball at the Club House, on his return to Madras from his sporting expedition to Travancore. Wednesday, the 18th December—the anniversary, by the way, of the embarkation at Madras of the Prince of Wales, K.G., in the Serapis for Calcutta, in the year 1875—is the date that has been conditionally selected for the ball. The Club gave a ball in honour of H.R.H. the Duke of Edinburgh, K.G., on the 25th March, 1870, and it also gave a ball to the Prince of Wales on the 16th December, 1875. The Madras Mail, from which we quote, adds:—The "best Club in Asia" distinguished itself greatly on both occasions, and so pleased was the Heir-Apparent by its reception of himself that he asked the President to allow him to take lunch with the Committee on the day following the ball. His suggestion, we need hardly say was most proudly complied with, and a tiffin worthy of a King was set before his Royal Highness in the Club Library. The Club is now lit throughout by electricity, and effects in illumination and decoration are practicable which were not dreamt of in 1875. The maxim that what the Club undertakes to do at all it should do thoroughly well, which governed its proceedings when entertaining the Prince Albert Victor's uncle and father, is sure to animate the Club when his Royal Highness becomes its guest.

AN important question of law regarding privilege of insolvents from arrest has been decided by Mr. Justice Shephard at Madras. Messrs. Parry and Company obtained a decree against one Samarapoory Chetty for Rs.2,897, and the debtor was meanwhile arrested by other creditors and incarcerated. During his confinement he filed a petition schedule in the Insolvent Court, which was opposed by several creditors, including Messrs. Parry and Company. Mr. Justice Wilkinson directed that the insolvent should not be discharged till he had been in custody in the Parry suit for one year. Against this order the insolvent appealed, and a Full Bench held that the order of Mr. Justice Wilkinson was incorrect in form, and the case was remanded to him to pass fresh orders on the judgment of the Full Bench. The insolvent, was allowed to leave the jail, and on attempting to do so was arrested on a warrant obtained by Messrs. Parry and Company, on the ground that he was under so much of Mr. Justice Wilkinson's order as had not been reversed, and was still liable to be detained in custody for one year. It was argued for the insolvent that he was privileged, and could only be arrested after an opportunity had been given him of returning home from the detention which the Full Bench considered unlawful. Mr. Justice Shephard held that the arrest was legal, refused to discharge the applicant, and committed him to jail. He said here was a sentence of imprisonment which was declared illegal, and the insolvent was arrested while going home from such illegal imprisonment. The privilege was the privilege of the court to have before it all persons whose presence was necessary, and not the privilege of the individual, and as the insolvent was not arrested while returning from any court or tribunal which he attended, but while returning from the jail from which he was discharged, his lordship could not see that any question of privilege arose. The insolvent was committed to jail for six months under Messrs. Parry's warrant.

SURGEON-MAJOR J. S. WILKINS has been appointed superintendent of Matheran.

MR. P. J. FITZGIBBON has been appointed Executive Engineer, Bijapore, during the absence of Mr. E. Pinhey.

Mr. E. HOSKING, Acting Judge and Sessions Judge of Kurrachee, will act for him in addition to his own duties.

THE Pioneer says:—The eminent Bombay barrister, whose reputation at the bar is only equalled by his reputation as a Nimrod, having exhausted India in the way of big game, is starting next week on an expedition to the Somali coast, where the lion and elephant are still to be found in some numbers. It is to be hoped that the adventurous sportsman will not be forced to turn his rifle upon the Arabs, who seem to be in a decidedly unquiet mood, in certain parts, at any rate.

THE President of the Municipal Corporation has laid before that body a Government resolution he had received on the subject of the Sunday mail question, stating that the memorial sent by the President would be forwarded to the Secretary of State, with an intimation that the Government entirely concur in the views expressed by the Municipal Corporation regarding the undesirability of the proposed change of the day of departure of the homeward bound mail steamers.

THE following is the summary of the Bombay season reports for the past week:—Rain during week throughout Presidency Proper, and standing crops benefited by it. Total fall still insufficient in parts of Guzerat, Khandeish, Tanna, and Kolaba. Standing crops damaged by locusts, crabs, and rats in parts of Kurrachee, and locusts in parts of Shikarpur, Hyderabad, Upper Sind Frontier, and Ahmedabad. Crops are otherwise good. Reaping of early and sowing of late potatoes progressing in several districts. Probable outturn of early crops in Baroda from 14 to 16 annas. Fodder scarce in parts of Poona and Dharwar.

A SENSATIONAL case of dacoity has just been tried by the Judge of Hooghly, Mr. McLaughlin. A notable robber-chief, no less redoubtable than Tantia, was made Queen's witness in a case in which some eleven men were charged with having committed dacoity in the house of a Native doctor in the village of Khanpur, near Tarkeswar. The Bengali Robin Hood, Kristo Chowdhury by name, who is now an old man of about three score years of age, is said to have committed no fewer than a hundred dacoities in Lower Bengal. In his youth he was convicted and sentenced for this crime to ten years' transportation to the Andaman Islands. While there he signalised his captivity by arresting the notorious Mahomedan assassin, Shere Ali Khan, who, in a fit of fanaticism, stabbed and murdered Lord Mayo. The Government, pleased with his bravery, remitted the remaining three years of his captivity and awarded him a reward of Rs. 1,000. He then returned to his native village, not a whit cowed by his late incarceration. He commenced a series of dacoities of a most daring nature, and became the dread and terror of the people of Lower Bengal. He continued his depredations until quite recently, when he was again arrested at Midnapore, and sentenced to life long transportation.

OBITUARY.

COLONEL HANS GARRETT MOORE, V.C., C.B.

Colonel Hans Garrett Moore, V.C., C.B., was drowned on the 6th inst., in Lough Derg, during a gale. Colonel Moore, who was fifty-four years of age, entered the army as ensign in 1855, purchasing his lieutenant's commission in the same year. In 1857 he served with the 88th Regiment in the Indian Mutiny, and was present during this campaign at Bhognapore, the siege of Lucknow in March, the siege of Calpee, the action of Selimpore, where he was slightly wounded, the action of Jamoo, and the storm and capture of the Birwah Forts, where he was again slightly wounded. For his services he was mentioned in despatches, and received a medal with clasp for Central India. He next served in the Ashantee War of 1874, and assisted the troops by raising a force from the Wassan and Denkera tribes. On the return of the troops to the coast he was employed in the transport service. In return for his valuable services during this campaign he was made brevet-major, and received a medal with clasp. From 1877 to 1878 Colonel Moore served in the Caffre War, and commanded at the affairs near Draaisbosch, being severely wounded and having his horse shot under him three times. He also commanded small columns in the subsequent operations in the Komgha and Chichaba districts. He was three times mentioned in despatches, and received the brevet of lieutenant-colonel, substantive majority, the Victoria Cross, and a medal with clasp. Colonel Moore was awarded the Victoria Cross for his gallant conduct in risking his own life in endeavouring to save the life of Private Giese, of the Frontier Armed Mounted Police, during the action of Gaikas, near Komgha, on Dec. 29, 1877. It is reported that when a small body of Mounted Police were forced to retire before overwhelming numbers of the enemy, he observed that Private Giese was unable to mount his horse, and was at the mercy of the Caffres. Colonel Moore rode back alone into the midst of the enemy, and did not desist in his endeavours to save the man until the poor fellow was killed. He shot two Caffres, receiving in the course of the struggle an assegai wound in the arm. Colonel Moore next served in the Egyptian war of 1882 as Provost-Marshal at headquarters (Assistant-Adjutant and Quartermaster-General). He was present at Kassassin on Sept. 9, and at Tel-el-Kebir. For his services during this campaign he was created a Military Companion of the Order of the Bath, besides being mentioned in despatches, and receiving a medal with clasp, the third class of the Osmanieh and Khedive's star.

ANNUAL DINNER OF THE CALCUTTA NAVAL VOLUNTEERS.

A dinner was given on Oct. 3 by the commander, officers, and members of the Calcutta Naval Artillery Volunteers to celebrate the sixth anniversary of the Battery. The dinner took place in the Dalhousie Institute, and 136 persons were present, including a number of guests. A string band played selections during dinner, after which there were some speeches and songs. Captain Petley, in an excellent speech, traced the record of the Battery, which has grown steadily in numbers and efficiency since it was instituted in 1883. He paid a high compliment to Captain Brebner, under whom the Corps came into existence; traced the various stages in its development; and stated that the Government of India had just sanctioned its separation from the volunteer land forces, and its conversion into a naval corps. The Battery, he said, would now be under the direct command of the General Commanding the Presidency District, and he hoped yet to see it incorporated with the English Naval Reserve. The naval manœuvres at home had directed attention afresh to the importance of their defences on the sea, and the question was apt to arise, whether the manhood of the navy was worthy of its traditions, or whether the men in their great iron ships had not become mere manipulators of mechanical contrivances. But for his part, he believed that their sailors were worthy of the glorious name handed down by their forefathers. For courage, loyalty, and devotion to duty he knew of no class of men who were their superiors. Captain Petley gave several striking instances of the dash, the readiness, and the sea-craft which marked the sailors of our time, and showed them to be true sons of the men who had made the naval fame of England. The speech was delivered with great spirit, and every point was cheered to the echo. Sub-Lieutenant Blaker, with point and humour, proposed the guests, and Lieutenant E. J. King, in the name of the Battery, presented Captain Petley with a large, handsomely-framed photograph of the corps. Among the vocalists were Mr. Eastty, Mr. George, Mr. Burke, and D. T. Robertson, the last-named being a distinct acquisition to the comic brotherhood of Calcutta. Mr. Burke gave his clever sketch of the "Bengali Babu," which was received with roars of laughter. The dinner, it may be added, was purveyed by the Great Eastern Hotel Company, and was worthy of the hospitality of the occasion. The menu card was cleverly illustrated by Gunner W. George, and the design might well be adopted for permanent use; it is too good to be thrown aside.—Englishman, Sept. 27.

THE FIGHTING IN ACHEEN.

From the Rangoon papers we learn that the N.I. steamer Kongsee, which recently arrived at Rangoon from Acheen, brought some details of a sanguinary battle between the Dutch and Achinese. The Achinese have been very bold for some time past, and recently erected a sort of fort near the Dutch Kota Pohama, the garrison of which they harassed greatly by their fire. The garrison applied for assistance, and three battalions, numbering altogether 1,800 men, were despatched from Kota Rajah. They left at night with Native guides. Early on the following morning, the 26th ultimo, they discovered that they were surrounded by Achinese, who attacked them from all sides. They had, in fact, been betrayed into an ambush. It was not yet daylight, and a fearful scene of confusion ensued. The Dutch fought desperately against overwhelming numbers, and ultimately, after a terrible struggle, drove the Achinese back, attacked their fort, and took it. On the Dutch side three officers, Captain Van Geusow of the staff, Lieutenant Hagerman of the Engineers, and Lieutenant Veerman of the Infantry, 20 non-commissioned officers and soldiers, were killed during the battle, and 3 officers, Lieutenant Piera, Lieutenant Schmidt auf Altenstadt, and Lieutenant Tromd and 99 non-commissioned officers and men were wounded. Of the last, 25 are reported to have since died, and it is also stated that two other officers, Lieutenants Kist and Vier, are badly wounded. The Achinese managed to carry off most of their killed and wounded, only 21 dead and 20 wounded having been found by the Dutch. The search for bodies was continued by the Dutch till nearly midnight. It is impossible to state with any certainty the number of Achinese engaged, but the Dutch estimate them at 5,000.

MONDAY, OCTOBER 21, 1889.

THE TRUE STORY OF DULEEP SINGH.—III.

THE most serious troubles of Duleep Singh with the British Government seem to have commenced when he obtained his majority. Sir John Login had then to relinquish his charge as guardian; but up to that time Lady Login states that there was not a more contented, loyal subject to be found within Her Majesty's dominions than the Maharaja, and that had Sir John Login's advice been followed the Government would not have got into their present difficulties, and their trusting ward would not have developed into an angry and discontented rebel.

Sir John Login, as Lady Login tells, brought up the boy to accept with entire satisfaction the provisions of the Treaty of Lahore, as understood by those who signed it for him, and by Sir Henry Lawrence, Sir Frederick Currie, and John Lawrence, in whom the Sikhs had every confidence. Login advised that a liberal interpretation should be given to the treaty instead of naming the very lowest sum allowed by the letter of that document, and instead of interpreting in a sense which neither the Maharaja nor his Minister who signed it for him understood at that time. He agreed that £25,000 a-year should be considered a fair income for the Prince, but that a provision should also be made for his family and descendants from moneys which had been saved during his minority. With this arrangement it was said that the Maharaja would have been perfectly satisfied, and the matter have been closed for good. At that time the private estates inherited by him from Runjeet Singh as a Sikh Sirdar had never been thought of, nor was any claim made to the personal property and jewels as distinct from State property. Even the Koh-i-noor, which the Maharaja now claims, was considered as State property, which, by the Treaty of Lahore and by the Maharaja's own action in England afterwards, was made over to the Queen, and became Crown property. Had the Government of the day met the Maharaja in a fair and equitable way on his coming of age it may be said with truth and justice that he would have remained a loyal subject. But on his coming of age the Government ignored Sir John Login altogether, and dealt direct with the Maharaja in a spirit of higgling huckstering regarding money. Lady Login explains the position very clearly:—

"Sir John, on finding that the Government were determined to deal with the Maharaja alone, without any aid or counsel from a friend, and were tempting him to give a discharge in full, by offering him large sums of ready money to deal with as he liked (while they allowed no inquiry into the use to which they applied the Pension Fund, though debarred by treaty from employing it for any other purpose), would take no further prominent part in the matter, but contented himself with merely giving advice to the Maharaja from time to time on specified points.

"It was a great risk to which to expose a young lad, ignorant of English life, to place a large income at his disposal, and large sums of ready money as well; and, while discouraging him from consulting the counsellor he had chosen, allowing him none other in his place! Hitherto no Indian prince had ever been left so entirely to himself; there was always an officer appointed as agent to the Governor General, to help and advise him, and why should they be so resolved on the dangerous experiment of throwing a youth, for whose moral welfare they were doubly responsible (in that he was the first Indian prince to embrace the religion of the Paramount Power), alone and unaided, into the temptations of a London life, at an age when no English lad would be considered fit to stand alone?"

Of course Lady Login writes somewhat in the spirit of a partisan, and she is very indignant with the India Office for its treatment of her husband; but whatever Departmental errors were committed, we would be slow to believe the accusation which Lady Login brings forward to the effect that the Government, presuming on Duleep Singh's profession of Christianity, had "imposed upon him a continued system of petty slights and injustice which they would not have dreamt of offering to a Hindoo or Maho-medan prince in the same position." It is unfair to honourable gentlemen, such as those composing the Secretary of State's India Council are, to print such a sweeping charge as the above. We do not suppose that the India Council was swayed at all by any personal motives in the matter. Sir Charles Wood seemed to be afraid of incurring the pecuniary responsibility which the Maharaja asked for, and no doubt he was influenced also by the very strong memoranda which Lord Dalhousie had placed on record against Duleep Singh, to the effect that he as a minor ought to be held responsible for the hostile action of his nation in the second Sikh War. His Lordship's views in justifying the annexation of the Punjab are excessively forcible, and the casuistry with regard to Duleep Singh is excessively clever, too, but it is casuistry nevertheless. The Government had, we think, a very simple matter for consideration—namely, how to give the most liberal interpretation to that Treaty which placed Duleep Singh in our power. On the 20th of January, 1860, he put before Sir Charles Wood's Council a document signed by himself to the following effect:—

"The Maharaja asks for £25,000 a-year for life, and also the sum of £200,000 to be settled on him for life and on his heirs after him; and in the event of no heirs he is to be at liberty to devise it for any public purpose in India. This to be in full of all demands."

Duleep Singh may not have been well advised in writing this letter; but, when one considers the advantage which the annexation of the Punjab has been to British power and prestige in India, it would seem to have been a wiser policy for the Government to have submitted to even a more extortionate demand rather than to have allowed the present scandal to have gone before the world regarding its treatment of its prisoner ward. But we hope that in justice to itself the Government will tell to the public its own version of this wretched business. Lady Login does not attempt to palliate or excuse Duleep Singh's later utterances. She deplores that a dawn of such promise has been clouded by the darkness of bitter and revengeful passions. She hopes, however, that the aberration which has betrayed him into this course is only temporary, and that ere long his veneration for the Queen will yet manifest itself in all its former intensity. We cannot say that we think the hope altogether well founded; but at the same time we think that a scandal has been unnecessarily created, and is to be regretted for the good name of British justice and generosity.

MILITARY INTELLIGENCE.

THE two army corps which would be the first to advance across the frontier will possibly be known as the North and South, but where the line of division will be drawn is not yet settled.

AN Adjutant of Artillery in the Bombay Presidency is under arrest pending his trial by court-martial on charges of embezzlement of public money. The officer commanding the battery, who is at home on privilege leave, has been ordered back.

MAJOR MELLISS, preparatory to visiting Mysore and Hyderabad, will proceed about the middle of next month to Rajputana, where the reorganisation of the armies of the local Chiefs is now in course of being carried out.

UNDER the scheme referred to the other day that is now being considered at Simla, which modifies in some respects the existing mobilisation arrangements, the Punjab Frontier case of war across the north-west frontier.

A CONTEMPORARY hears that the proposal to issue arms and accoutrements to ward orderlies, in view to enabling them to defend themselves as well as to guard a hospital or a convoy of sick, has just been sanctioned by the Government of India.

UNDER instructions from the Secretary of State for India the maximum amount of advances of pay and allowances which will be made in future at the India Office to military officers returning to India for duty will be £100. This arrangement will apply to all officers taking furlough on and after the date of this notification.

OPPORTUNITY is to be taken of the 5th Lancers moving up in relief from Mhow to Meerut to change the Persians and Arabs belonging to the 8th Hussars for the Walers which the 5th now have. In future British Cavalry regiments in Northern India are to be mounted on Walers only, while the regiment at Mhow is to have none of these in the ranks.

AT the close of the Simla Veterinary class the following gentlemen successfully passed the test examination, and obtained a certificate:—Surgeon-Major C. W. Owen, C.I.E., C.M.G., his Excellency the Commander-in-Chief's Staff; Lieut. M. W. Norman, 2nd Punjab Cavalry; and Mr. F. W. Grey, the two former very creditably, whilst the latter is marked as creditable.

AT a general court-martial assembled at Secunderabad, on the 30th August, 1889, Private James Allgood, 2nd Battalion Bedfordshire Regiment, was charged with having in a place without Her Majesty's Dominions committed the offence of murder in that, at Secunderabad, in the Territories of his Highness the Nizam, on the 6th of June, 1889, he feloniously, wilfully, and of malice aforethought, did kill and murder one Jaffer Khan. The court found the prisoner not guilty of murder, but guilty of manslaughter. The prisoner was sentenced to suffer penal servitude for the term of five years. In confirming the finding and sentence of the court H.E. the Commander-in-Chief commuted the punishment to imprisonment with hard labour for two years.

THE Inspector-General of Cavalry in India having brought to light the serious want of skill displayed by the sowar of the Native Cavalry in India in the use of the lance and sword, both when mounted and dismounted, more particularly in the handling of the lance in which no skill whatever was displayed, his Excellency the Commander-in-Chief lost no time in pressing the matter on the notice of the Government of India, and pointed out the great desirability that exists for the encouragement of every cavalry soldier to make himself proficient in the use of his arms; and as prizes for efficiency in the use of the carbine have been allowed, it has been decided by Government to allow lance and sword prizes to the Bengal and Punjab Cavalry, and local cavalry under the Government of India, from the 1st of April, 1890, as follows:—

1st Prize.—To the best lancer or swordsman in the regiment: Rs. 25 and a badge of crossed lances or swords worked in gold.

2nd Prize.—To the best lancer or swordsman in each squadron: Rs. 15 and a badge of crossed lances or swords worked in gold.

3rd Prize.—To the best lancer or swordsman in each troop, of which at least two-thirds, excluding recruits, must have competed: Rs. 10 and a badge of crossed lances or swords worked in gold.

"THE FIELD OF THE CLOTH OF GOLD" ON THE SIMLA STAGE.

SIMLA, SEPT. 24.

The burlesque of The Field of the Cloth of Gold, if I am not mistaken, was first played in London about 1868 at the Strand Theatre, the home at that time of the class of play which has since transferred its affection to the "Gaiety," and given rise to the pieces now known all the world over as Gaiety plays. Indeed, the farce now being performed on the Simla stage has been said to have originally given the taste for the burlesques which are now so popular among playgoers, and which, though they cannot compare for a moment with the graver and higher class plays, have a distinction which is all their own, and seldom fail to please. A Simla audience is, as all actors who have ever succeeded or failed on the local boards well know, a truly critical and severe one; but on this occasion the popular verdict is, as it ought to be, very favourable, and Captain Thorneycroft has the satisfaction of learning that his efforts to amuse have been thoroughly successful. No small amount of time, thought, and patience has been displayed in preparing the theatrical dish now served up, and the whole company deserve the greatest praise for the energetic manner in which they have mastered the difficulties of the play.

There is no plot to speak of, for, being a burlesque, it goes without saying that absurdities are numberless, and, as everyone knows the historical allusion in the title, there is small need to explain it.

The curtain rises on the Quay at Calais, and introduces us to a group of citizens, amongst whom Tete de Veau, the High Constable (Captain Williams), stands out prominently, all awaiting the arrival of King Henry from England. Earl Darnley (Mr. Holland), a banished English Peer, who puts in an appearance somewhat suddenly, creates a certain amount of amusement until the arrival of the Royal barge, which eventually arrives amidst the loud applause of the assembled multitude. King Henry (Captain Thorneycroft) and his wife Katherine (Mr. Eicke) are by no means cheerful after their voyage, which, judging from appearances, has evidently been a rough one, but nevertheless are not too ill to quickly convulse the audience with laughter. Katherine and Anne Boleyn (Mrs. Crozier) at once begin to display their jealousy of one another, the former accusing Miss A. Boleyn of continually "a bowlin" her out, while King Hal, not to be outdone in punning even on the Sabbath, remarks that after the sic transit he longs for the gloria mundi (glory o' Monday). Darnley having discovered his love Constance de Grey, who by the way is a ward in Chancery and also a fugitive in France, the first act closes with an exhibition of some of the best dancing which has yet been seen on the Simla stage. The citizens of Calais especially the ladies, kept perfect time and step, and fully deserved the hearty encore accorded to them; nor must the clever performance of the four "sailors" (men of the R. S. Fusiliers and K. R. Rifles) be unmentioned, for it very rightly brought down the house. Queen Katherine's song and chorus, "Oh I'm ten times as naughty as when I was forty, I'm naughty, I'm naughty, I am," was received with shrieks of laughter, and the curtain drops on as picturesque and well arranged a group as the most fastidious playgoer could wish to see. The dresses were all in excellent taste, the colouring good, and the choruses went with a swing which reflected much credit on the musical conductor, Mrs. Ford.

Here are the words of Darnley's song given in the middle o the act:—

Calcutta papers still remark the exodus is wrong,
It may be so, but yet we are going particularly strong.
They swear we never work at all, and tho' it is grotesque,
In fact, official life up here is nothing but burlesque.
If they'd seen us all rehearsing, though amazed they would be
At the labours of a worn out acting A.D.C.

Now the rains are done and over, we can have some ripping fun
Down at Annandale on Saturdays—Gymkhanas have begun.
There are jumping competitions, and before all the élite
On the flat and over hurdles, horses, mules, and cows compete.
When the rifle meeting's over we shall all be glad,
For the popping on the ranges nearly drives us mad.

Now one scarcely realises how the months go gliding by,
Yet it's scarce upon a year ago we bid some friends good-bye.
I call them friends, for so they were to folks of every age,
And from that box Lord Dufferin cheered the actors on the stage.
O! twas hard to fill their places and to them succeed,
But, they've been replaced, I hear you say—THEY HAVE INDEED.

In the second act we are treated to a really lovely piece of forest scenery, and the opening chorus of the hunting party is one of the prettiest melodies of the play. King Francis (Captain Legh) appears on the glade, having lost himself out hunting, and the house is once more brought down by his song and dance. The former, alluding to certain Simla peculiarities, touches on the fashion of young men wearing "Annandale bouquets" in their buttonholes, and the latter is a very clever imitation of E. J. Lonnen's famous dance in Faust up to Date, recently played at the Gaiety. Constance, who is also wandering in the forest, sings a charming little song, and surprises Sir Guy the Cripple (Colonel Woodthorpe) in the concoction of a little plot to murder the King of France himself. Sir Guy, who is the villain of the burlesque, is madly in love with Constance himself, and, needless to say, is frustrated in his wicked scheme by Constance and her lover, who save the King's life. The acting and dance of Sir Guy's associates—the three robbers—was a clever wind-up to the second act.

The meeting of the monarchs in the third act is preceded by a well executed march by the chorus, as also by a sweet little song from Rose de la Foix (Mrs. Dallas), the chief maid of honour to the French Court, and who with Anne Boleyn accuse their respective monarchs of paying them too much attention. The embrace of the monarchs on meeting is very touching, and the remark of Francis to Henry on being introduced to Queen Katherine, "I feel for you sincerely," was a very successful hit. "Bluff King Hal" continues to flirt with Anne Boleyn until Katherine becoming jealous once more favours the audience with a ditty, called "They're always after Harry," which has the effect of bringing that capricious monarch repentant to her side. The dances which conclude the scene are excellent. Indeed, so well do all the company perform that it is hard to make a distinction. King Harry himself goes through a dance with the English and French maids of honour, kicking his legs over the heads of each as if it were quite as easy as waltzing, and the whole group eventually disappear while dancing amid thunders of applause.

The next scene is laid in the anti-chamber of the King of England's pavilion, and Queen Katherine appears in a costume which at once suggests repose. The frills of her nightcap are as irresistible as the manner in which she sings, "Love, love, love, you find it in every station," and the shower of bouquets and the treble encore with which she is greeted proves conclusively that a Simla audience can after all enjoy a hearty laugh. The amusing scene between Henry and Francis, when the latter insists on robing his royal brother, quite prepares the audience for the topical song which follows, the principal verses of which I give you:—

I think the time has come now for the usual duet,
Do you think so, Sir?
Unless I'm much mistaken,
It's the sort of thing that's looked for, and we've never missed it yet.
And they like it too!
Unless we're much mistaken
Of course one never knows until a thing is fairly tried
If it's going to be a great success, or mercilessly guyed.
But if there's anything with which they're not quite satisfied,
We'll apologise,
And say, we've been mistaken!
There's an artist with a studio where ladies all agree,
Do they really?
No, my meaning you've mistaken,
To gather on a Saturday, to paint-brushes and tea,
Oh! how charming!
Well, I hope they're not mistaken!
He's very fascinating, and it cannot be denied.
But, ladies! ladies! pray beware before you step inside
He looks like Dr. Jekyll, but he may be Mr. Hyde,
So be careful.
Oh! I hope you are mistaken!
Some people say that Simla folk are up to curious games,
Do you think so?
No, I'm certain they're mistaken.
But there's Mrs. ——?
No, you really mustn't mention names,
Don't you think so?
No, you might be quite mistaken!
Still there's Mrs. What-ye-call-em flirts with Mr. So and So
While he is grilling in the regions down below.
But if any one should hint at it or say I told you so,
You can tell them—
What?
They must be quite mistaken!
A Big Masonic Ball took place up here the other day,
Did it not, Sir?
You are right!
I'm not mistaken!
With uniforms and aprons, too, it looked so very gay,
Did it not, Sir?
Always right!
We're not mistaken!
One nasty pushing party from the gallery got up,
And insisted with the dancers that he was going to sup;
But a certain gallant Captain there soon caused him to shut up,
And he found that—
What?
Why he was much mistaken!
They say that merit governs all promotions in the East,
Do they really?
Well, that's where they are mistaken!
That female intervention doesn't matter in the least,
Do you think so?
Well, they may be mistaken!
But if you seek promotion, I can tell you what to do,
That kissing goes by favour is a proverb old and true;
And if favour goes by kissing, what is that to me or you?
Thank you so much, I'll try.
You won't be much mistaken.

Before the act is over Constance and Darnley sing a charming duet, and Sir Guy appearing once more on the stage is recognised by the former as the would-be assassin of the French King, and is challenged by the latter to mortal combat. On showing much unwillingness to accept the offer, he is kicked out unceremoniously by the assembled crowd.

The closing act of course sees the tournament between the two monarchs, and, in the words of the elaborately decorated programme, "Henry and Francis, to prove that they'll be friends unto death, endeavour to kill each other as speedily as possible. Each falls at the first charge in the tilting, and then follow two rounds of boxing, which so exhaust the rival sovereigns that they embrace, and are combatants no longer.

Sir Guy meets the valiant Darnley, and is, of course, easily overthrown, confessing, when about to die, the many sins he has committed. That he really does not depart this life is only owing to the fact that King Henry assures him it is against the rules to do so, and that he will be wanted on the morrow, and so the play ends with a final dance and song.

To describe at length the performance of each actor I fear I have neither time nor space; but perhaps a few words may be given to the principal characters.

Mr. Eicke as Queen Katherine was excellent, and made his points with great success; his singing was telling in the extreme. Both Captains Thorneycroft and Legh (Henry and Francis) were capitally got up, and acted with plenty of spirit and "go." The dancing of the former was remarkable, and reminded one very much of Freddy Vokes, and both Kings deserve much praise for working so hard in making the play a success. Captain Williams's performance as High Constoble of Calais could scarcely be improved upon, and both Messrs. Townshend (Le Sieur de Boissy) and Mr. Wintle (Duke of Suffolk) were well at home in their respective characters. Mr. Holland (Darnley) sang faultlessly, but was scarcely so good in his acting as we have seen him, while Colonel Woodthorpe (Sir Guy) was a good villain.

Mrs. Porter as the fair Constance was very bright and graceful; her singing was sweet and true, and her dress one which, maybe, many among the audience looked at, and broke the Tenth Commandment in consequence.

Mrs. Dallas and Mrs. Crozier were sufficiently charming as chief maids of honour to have turned the heads of wiser men than those of their respective sovereigns, and while the former was especially good in her duet with Le Sieur de Boissy the latter danced gracefully with King Henry of Engiand. Finally, the citizenesses looked so charming that if Henry's followers had run away with them on the spot no one would have been surprised.

One word more and I have finished.

It is always well to be truthful even when anxious to praise so just a remark as to the fault of the play. The popular verdict appears to be that the first act is far the best of the four, that the dresses are especially good, the dancing all round excellent, but that the dialogue in parts is somewhat weak.

The topical songs in verses might perhaps be a little improved on, provided sufficient care be taken to hurt no one's feelings. However, these are minor points: the play is a brilliant success.

THE Lahore paper reports that on the night of the 8th ult. a party of Shinwaris, who are still in revolt, attacked the Amir's post at Debbala. The garrison were, however, on the alert, and no casualties took place, but a great deal of firing took place on both sides.

MR. ROCKHILL, the adventurous American who thought to reach Lhassa in the disguise of a Chinaman, seems to have fared rather badly at the moment of success. When within thirty days' journey of Lhassa he was summarily turned back, all his heavy baggage being impounded. He reached China after suffering great hardship.

THE BROAD ARROW AND NAVAL AND MILITARY GAZETTE

EVERY SATURDAY. PRICE SIXPENCE.

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" has acquired a reputation for early and exclusive intelligence as to Appointments and other service News, for the high character of its articles, the independent course of its staff of writers, and for its earnest support of all measures for the good of the Services. Articles on specially interesting subjects appear from week to week written for the most part by officers of rank and experience, or by men of note in literature who have made the Naval and Military affairs of the country their special study. A series of Illustrated Articles is appearing weekly on Regimental Badges and History. Illustrations with descriptions are also given of new Service Inventions.

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" freely opens its correspondence columns to all grades in the Services. By this means an opportunity for interchange of opinion is afforded, such as is offered by no other Service Journal. Its ordinary weekly issue contains fully one-fourth more matter than the other Service Journals, even with their frequent "supplements."

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" circulates largely throughout India and the Colonies. It is supplied direct to the Army and Marine bureaux of the French, Russian, and other Governments, and it is read extensively by Officers of Foreign Services, especially of the German, French, and American Armies, who desire to acquire a true impression of facts and public opinion in England regarding Military affairs.

DR. SPENCER'S ASTHMA CURE.

MR. D. FITZPATRICK, of Drumcree, Killucan, Westmeath, Ireland, writes:—"Thank God the two bottles of Dr. Spencer's Asthma Cure got from you cured me of the Asthma. I am over sixty years of age, and for the last twenty-five years I have suffered as much from Asthma (I believe) as any other Asthmatic could suffer, often for nights without ever lying on a bed, but I thank the good God I can now sleep as comfortable as I could wish for. I only wish every poor Asthmatic sufferer would give your cure a trial, for it is a great boon."

The public are hereby notified that the above remedy is prepared from a recently improved formula of Dr. Spencer (which has nothing to do with any other formula) and is sold, under his name, by us, who are the sole prorietors, and in no way connected with any other person or firm. We will send our Pamphlet "Asthma, its Treatment and Cure" (Third edition) by E. Edwin Spencer, M.A., M.D., &c., post free, on application

ORIGINAL AND ONLY GENUINE.

IS THE GREAT SPECIFIC FOR CHOLERA.

COUGHS, COLDS, ASTHMA, BRONCHITIS.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE.—Dr. J. C. BROWNE (late Army Medical Staff) DISCOVERED a REMEDY to denote which he coined the word CHLORODYNE. Dr. Browne is the SOLE INVENTOR, and, as the composition of Chlorodyne cannot possibly be discovered by Analysis (organic substances defying elimination), and since the formula has never been published, it is evident that any statement to the effect that a compound is identical with Dr. Browne's Chlorodyne must be false.

This Caution is necessary, as many persons deceive purchasers by false representations.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE.—Vice Chancellor Sir W. PAGE WOOD stated publicly in Court that Dr. J. COLLIS BROWNE was UNDOUBTEDLY the INVENTOR of CHLORODYNE, that the whole story of the defendant Freeman was deliberately untrue, and he regretted to say it had been sworn to.—See The Times, July 13th, 1864.

DIARRHŒA, DYSENTERY. GENERAL BOARD of HEALTH, London, REPORT that it ACTS as a CHARM, one dose generally sufficient. Dr. GIBBON, Army Medical Staff, Calcutta, states: "2 DOSES COMPLETELY CURED ME of DIARRHŒA."

From SYMES & Co., Pharmaceutical Chemists, Simla, Jan. 5, 1880.
To J. T. DAVENPORT, London.
DEAR SIR,—We congratulate you upon the widespread reputation this justly-esteemed medicine has earned for itself all over the East. As a remedy of general utility, we much question whether a better is imported, and we shall be glad to hear of its finding a place in every Anglo-Indian home. The other brands, we are happy to say, are now relegated to the native bazaars, and, judging from their sale, we fancy their sojourn there will be but evanescent. We could multiply instances ad infinitum of the extraordinary efficacy of DR. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE in Diarrhœa and Dysentery, Spasms, Cramps, Neuralgia, the Vomiting of Pregnancy, and as a general sedative; that have occurred under our personal observation during many years. In Choleraic Diarrhœa, and even in the more terrible forms of Cholera itself, we have witnessed its surprisingly controlling power. We have never used any other form of this medicine than Collis Browne's, from a firm conviction that it is decidedly the best, and also from a sense of duty we owe to the profession and the public, as we are of opinion that the substitution of any other than Collis Browne's is a deliberate breach of faith on the part of the chemist to prescriber and patient alike.—We are, Sir, faithfully yours, SYMES & CO., Members of the Pharm. Society of Great Britain, His Excellency the Viceroy's Chemists.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE is the TRUE PALLIATIVE in

NEURALGIA, GOUT, CANCER, TOOTHACHE, RHEUMATISM.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE is a liquid medicine which assuages PAIN of EVERY KIND, affords a calm, refreshing sleep WITHOUT HEADACHE, and INVIGORATES the nervous system when exhausted.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE rapidly cuts short all attacks of

EPILEPSY, SPASMS, COLIC, PALPITATION, HYSTERIA.

IMPORTANT CAUTION.—The IMMENSE SALE of this REMEDY has given rise to many UNSCRUPULOUS IMITATIONS. Be careful to observe Trade Mark. Of all Chemists. 1s. 1½d., 2s. 9d., and 4s. 6d.

COORG SAUCE.

The Universal Appetiser,

PRICE ONE SHILLING.

This delicious Sauce is prepared from the receipt of a Nobleman, whose perfect knowledge of the culinary art has obtained for him the nom de plume of the "Modern Lucullus."

The name of this celebrated Sauce—

THE UNIVERSAL APPETISER—

Has been given to it because, in addition to its remarkable flavouring qualities, it possesses the singular property of

CREATING OR RESTORING THE APPETITE,

In fact, it practically realises the French saying—"L'appétit vient en mangeant."

Since the introduction of THE UNIVERSAL APPETISER it has been said, both in Society and at the Clubs, how rarely is the mauvais quart d'heure noticed, every one being so much interested in discussing and enquiring about the new Sauce—

OPINIONS.

The Calcutta Review for October reached us a day or two ago, and a glance at its contents shows that the number more than sustains the reputation which this old and favourite publication is again achieving. The Review is rapidly regaining the position which it . . . . there is no fear of the Indian Review, or the Asiatic Quarterly rivalling it in public favour.—Statesman, October 1886.

. . . . The best service which I ever rendered in India, or, indeed, for India, was the establishment, single-handed, of the Calcutta Review, which has done far more for Indian literature than anything I have written under my own name.—J. W. KAYE, Athenæum Club, une 23, 1872.

The Calcutta Review has given us valuable articles on the army. Some from the pen of Sir Henry Lawrence, who wrote with the spirit of prophesy of the coming storm of which he was one of the noblest victims.—Address of the C.-in-C. at the U.S. Inst. of India

. . . . The Calcutta Review has not only throughout its career reflected the highest honour on its public-spirited promoters and its well-known distinguished contributors, but has done much to help forward the reconstruction of our system of governing India.—Westminster Review.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

MONDAY, OCTOBER 28, 1889.

General Intelligence.

[BY OVERLAND MAIL.]

THE Overland Mail brings us letters and advices from Bombay to the 11th Oct.; from Allahabad and Madras to the 9th Oct.; and from Calcutta to the 9th Oct.

H.E. THE VICEROY was to leave Simla on Oct. 22nd for a frontier tour of a little over a month's duration. His Excellency will visit Pinjore, Rawal Pindi, Kohat, Peshawur, Attock, Bannu, Dera Ismail Khan, Quetta, and Lahore, and will arrive in Calcutta on Nov. 30th. The Viceregal party accompanying his Excellency will include the Marchioness of Lansdowne, Colonel Ardagh, C.B., Private Secretary: Lord William Beresford, Military Secretary; Surgeon-Major Fenn, and Captain the Hon. C. Harbord, A.D.C. During portions of the tour his Excellency will be accompanied by the Commander-in-Chief and three staff officers, the Lieutenant-Governor of the Punjab, and one staff officer, Mr. H. S. Barnes, officiating Foreign Secretary, Captain Streatfeild, and Mr. G. P. Brasier-Creagh, A.D.C.'s.

IN the Legislative Council at Simla, Oct. 3rd, General Chesney moved that the passing of the Cantonment Bill might be postponed till the next meeting. Mr. Scoble also moved to postpone the passing of the Mamlatdars' Indemnity Bill, as certain communications, expected from Bombay, had not arrived.

AT the meeting of the Legislative Council on Oct. 10 the Cantonment Bill was to be passed, and the Official Secrets Bill introduced.

AN extra meeting of the Legislative Council was expected to be called for Oct. 21st, the day before the Viceroy was to leave Simla, as several Bills were not far enough advanced to be passed on Oct. 17.

A DESPATCH goes home to the Secretary of State shortly regarding the taxation of beer in India. A duty of an anna a gallon is the maximum that the Government of India are prepared to think of.

INSPECTING VETERINARY SURGEON RUSSELL succeeds Principal Veterinary Surgeon Oliphant as chief of the Department in India.

REPORTS from the different Local Governments regarding the measures to be adopted for securing increased efficiency in the police are coming in but slowly. No action in the matter will therefore be taken until the cold weather session of Government.

THE Government of India have expressed high appreciation of Sir Charles Crosthwaite's work in Burma, as recorded in a report which the Chief Commissio ner recently submitted.

THE Punjab Government have sanctioned a project for improving the water supply in the Khyber by utilising a perennial spring at Shipola, four miles from Lundi Kotal. The work will be completed this cold weather.

THE Secretary of State's orders on the Public Service Commission's Report have at last been received in India—it is just three years since the Resolution appointing the Commission was issued—and are now in circulation among the members of the Executive Council in the ordinary course of routine. The despatch lays down that there is to be no legislation, it being considered possible to do all that is desired in the way of extending the employment of Natives of India in Government service under the existing law.

PRINCE ALBERT VICTOR will visit Mandalay during his stay in Upper Burma. A public meeting has been held at Rangoon to consider the organisation of a fitting reception for his Royal Highness, Mr. A. P. MacDonnell, the Chief Commissioner, presiding.

THE Lieutenant-Governor of the Punjab, with Lady Lyall and staff, has left Simla for Lahore.

MR. HARVEY JAMES proceeds shortly on two months' privilege leave, Mr. Macpherson acting as Secretary to the Government of India in the Legislative Department.

WHEN Mr. Woodburn, the Chief Secretary to the N.W.P. Government, took leave last spring it was generally understood that on returning in the autumn he would take the Commissionership coming vacant by the retirement of Mr. Daniell. It is now settled that Mr. Woodburn will remain on in the Secretariat for the present.

MR. LUMSDEN, on return from privilege leave, enters the Board of Revenue, which, by Mr. Quinton's departure for Assam, loses both its members almost simultaneously. Mr. J. C. Robertson and Mr. Lumsden will constitute the Board through the winter, when Mr. Robertson's retirement will make a fresh vacancy. The place has been offered to Mr. J. R. Reid, if his health should allow him to decide on returning to India. The succession to the Benares Commissionership is still unsettled.

COLONEL GATACRE, Deputy Quartmaster-General, commands the Mandalay Brigade during Brigadier-General Wolseley's absence on six months' leave. Lieut.-Colonel Elles, R.A., late Secretary to the Defence Committee, will act for Colonel Gatacre; Colonel Elles is due back from England at the end of the month. Major Ridgeway has taken over charge meanwhile from Colonel Gatacre, who starts at once for Burma.

LIEUT.-COLONEL C. STRAHAN officiates for Colonel Sconce as Deputy Surveyor-General, Major Gore acting for Colonel Strahan. Lieutenant Renny Tailyour will be in charge of the survey party with the Chin expedition column starting from Gungaw.

CAPTAIN W. J. BIRD will probably act in the Military Department during Captain Barrow's absence on the Siam frontier.

CAPTAIN DURAND left Gilgit for Chitral on the 17th September. There is no truth in the statement of Native correspondents across the frontier that he or any of his party have visited Badakshan.

THE latest reports from Mazar state that the Amir has been suffering from another of his sharp attacks of gout. He has now somewhat recovered, but refuses to accept the medicines prescribed by Dr. Gray or by his hakims, preferring to trust to his own recipes.

GENERAL AMIR AHMED KHAN, Agent for the Amir of Afghanistan in India, died at Simla on Oct. 8.

DURING the year ending June 30, 15,686 snakes were killed in the Punjab, and 146 persons were killed with snake-bite.

CAPTAIN MOBERLEY, R.A., Adjutant at Colabo, has been placed under arrest, and will shortly be tried by court-martial on a charge of embezzling Rs. 9,000, the property of the battery.

IT has been decided to float a company in Calcutta to carry out gold mining operations in the Sonaipet Valley, Chota Nagpore.

THE trial of the notorious dacoit Tantia Bheel was commenced at Jubbulpore on Oct. 5.

WHEN the Railway Bill comes before the Select Committee in Calcutta the question of appointing permanent Railway Commissioners for India will be reconsidered.

THE Bengal North-Western Railway have not, as was announced, obtained the working of the Tirhoot State Railway.

THE erection of a Hindu mosque in a street in Madras, occupied chiefly by Mahomedans, was on Oct. 5 the cause of serious riots between Mahomedans and Hindus.

SUKKUR has been visited by a plague of locusts, which have destroyed the crops. Cholera is also severe.

THE Bishops of Allahabad and Lahore consecrated the new Roman Catholic Church at Simla on the 29th ult.

AN official return of the trade of British India shows last year to have been the highest on record by almost six and a-half per cent., and in the past five years to have been about sixteen per cent. in excess of the previous five. The imports of the last five years were in excess of those of the previous period by twenty-one per cent.; the increase in the exports in the same period being about twelve and a quarter.

NOTES.

FROM the intelligence received by telegram it would appear that the seditious wire pullers of the vernacular Press are again giving trouble to the Government. The statement given by the Times Calcutta correspondent will be found in another column, and is confirmed by a wire received on Sunday night by the Daily News from its correspondent in that city.

IT appears that a vernacular paper called the Prajab Dandhri, published at Chandernagore, has been prohibited from circulating in British India, in consequence of scurrilous and seditious writing. Its proprietor was a Native assistant in the office of the Director of Public Instruction for Bengal, and on being asked for an explanation he severed his connection with it. The Government of India have, however, directed his dismissal from the service on the ground of gross misconduct and disloyalty to the Government whose pay he was enjoying.

SOME time ago, it may be remembered, a Bengali Babú made Chandernagore his headquarters for the purpose of issuing therefrom a weekly newspaper printed in English, and filled with gross abuse of the British Government and of English officials in India. The enterprising sedition-monger failed, however, to get subscribers enough to pay his printing bill, and after attempting to make money by a lottery, which looked very much like a swindle, the whole affair, we believe, collapsed. The present enterprise of spreading sedition in the vernacular seems, however, to be more serious; but surely under our arrangements with the French Government it ought to be an easy matter to prevent British Native subjects from availing themselves of the little French territory of Chandernagore, in order to attempt making mischief against us in any way.

THE Mahommedans of Lahore are keeping pace with the enlightenment of the day in India as regards foolish customs and prejudices. It is telegraphed that they have just held a meeting to take steps to reform the present system, under which they are forced to incur extravagant outlays on marriage and funeral ceremonies—an extravagance which has been known to plunge whole families into debt for years. The Hindus, it is to be hoped, will try and imitate their rival religionists in this wise economy.

ANOTHER telegram tells of another Native community being alive to their own interests. The Bombay mill hands have held a meeting, and resolved to petition the Viceroy regarding holidays and hours of labour. They ask for complete rest every Sunday, and for half an-hour's break at noon every working day. They further demand that work should commence at half-past six and cease at sunset, that the wages for each month be paid not later than the 15th of the following month, and that workmen injured in mills should receive full wages until recovery, and if maimed for life should have a suitable provision made for them. Similar proposals were submitted to the Factory Commission some years ago, and the Bombay Government recommended their adoption.

OUR Allahabad contemporary the Pioneer has some very sensible remarks regarding the discontent which is being felt in several quarters by officers on the matter of privilege leave:—"At present an officer's leave begins from the day on which he is struck off duty in his station, and this without the least consideration as to whether he is within five hours or five days of the port of departure for Europe. He may have only two months in which to visit Europe, and if he chances to be in Burma, or on the confines of Assam, or at some distant point on the North-West Frontier, he must needs sacrifice many days 'out of the sixty' in journeying to and from Bombay or Karachi. The officer who is quartered at or near these seaport towns can start for home straight away, and so time his return as to lose little or nothing of his leave. What is now asked is that privilege leave should begin to count only from the actual day of sailing, and should end with the arrival again in port. This would be only a small concession, and as great liberality is shown in the matter of "joining time" when civil officers are transferred from one post to another there can be nothing extraordinary in changing the present regulations. The new rule should apply to all departments, civil as well as military, Bombay and Karachi being made the ports from which the leave should count. If a Sunday mail departure is decided upon yet another day will be lost in the case of Bombay, as many must needs arrive on Saturday to transact their business with their agents or bankers. The case seems a strong one, and as the State would really suffer but little in pocket the concession might well be granted."

IT is very sad to hear of another military scandal in India in connection with the alleged embezzlement of public money. A court-martial will sit for the trial of Captain Moberley, commanding the battery of Royal Artillery at Colaba, on this serious charge, on the return of Colonel Shortland, who has been recalled from furlough in England, as his evidence is required. A Bombay correspondent says that so far as have yet been elicited the following are the facts of the case:—As Adjutant Captain Moberley had charge of the battery accounts, and these, when Colonel Shortland proceeded home on three months' leave, were passed as correct, showing, as expected, a balance of Rs. 12,000 in the Bank of Bombay. When Major Stopford took over the command the accounts were submitted to him in the ordinary way, and he asked to see the bank book, as it had not been produced Captain Moberley asserted that it was at the bank. Major Stopford wrote, asking that it be at once returned, the reply being that it had been sent to Captain Moberley several days before. On the book being examined, it was found that there was a balance only of Rs. 3,000. A court of inquiry was held, and it was decided to charge the adjutant with embezzling Rs. 9,000. Captain Moberley was then placed under arrest, and Colonel Shortland recalled. No explanation as to the cause of the deficit has been as yet made known. There is no falsification of accounts, and Captain Moberley is spoken of as a steady officer, not addicted to either gambling or betting. The greatest sympathy is felt for his wife and child, who are now in Bombay.

WE learn by telegram that at the annual meeting of the "Murree Brewery Company, Limited," held at Murree on the 19th inst., a dividend at the rate of 12 per cent. per annum was declared. This will be satisfactory intelligence to many of our readers who are interested in the above flourishing concern.

INDIA.

CALCUTTA, OCT. 27.

The Simla season, which has been almost unprecedentedly gay, has now virtually closed with the departure of Lord and Lady Lansdowne. On Tuesday last an address was delivered by the municipality at Rawul Pindi. On Thursday the president presented the station with a free library, open to all classes, to be called the Lansdowne Library, in commemoration of the Viceroy's visit.

The Viceroy, in the course of his reply, congratulated the municipality upon the good feeling existing between the military forces and the civil population, and upon the successful endeavours of the municipality to secure an abundant supply of pure water for this large and important military station. He desired to express his sincere appreciation of the compliment of naming the free library after him.

The Imperial Legislative Council held its last Simla meeting on Thursday, when the Central Provinces Land Revenue and Tenancy Bills were passed and the reports of the Select Committees on the Central Provinces Municipal and Village Sanitation Bills were presented. The Council then adjourned sine die, to reassemble in Calcutta. Most of the Government offices close at the end of the month and reopen some time in November.

The despatches of the Government of India and the Secretary of State on the report of the Public Service Commission have been published, but apparently excite very slight public interest. Both the European and Native Press have passed them over without comment. Lord Cross adopts certain of the recommendations. The age of candidates is raised to twenty-three. The terms "covenanted" and "uncovenanted" are converted into "Civil Service" and "Provincial Civil Service"; simultaneous examinations in India and England are disapproved. No legislation will be required to carry out the intended changes.

A portion of the Native Press has bitterly attacked Lord Lansdowne for his recent speech in Council on the occasion of the passing of the Official Secrets Act. Certain of these articles are not only intemperate, but most insolent in tone. For some time past a considerable traffic in the sale of State secrets and confidential documents has prevailed, and, in any event, to put an end to the systematic corruption of Government clerks by those wrongfully trading in the purchase of confidential State documents, some form of legislation in India would have become indispensable; but in the present case the Government were in no way responsible, as the English Act equally applied to India, and its conversion into an Indian Act was merely formal and technical. But here again, as in the case of the corrupt Bombay officials, the championship by the Native Press of the moral turpitude of this gross breach of primary and honourable official obligation, and the shameless approval of the successful results of these corrupt practices appear to evidence a condition of public morality which must have struck Lord Lansdowne almost in the light of a revelation, more especially in view of the clamorous agitation maintained by the Press for increased Native official preferment and enlarged political privileges.

The Native Press generally has been growing very intemperate in tone, and has become wantonly hostile in its acrid criticism of Government. In a recent case, so scurrilous and seditious were a series of articles contained in a certain Native Paper published at Chandernagore, but owned by a Native Government official employed in the Education Department, that the Government of India have been forced to intervene, and have instructed the Bengal Government to dismiss the proprietor from the Government service, and have interdicted the paper from entering India. The Government letter states that these articles were of such a character that, if the paper had been published in British India, the editor would have been liable to prosecution under the Penal Code; that this newspaper is used for the purpose of publishing scurrilous attacks on the Government which the proprietor serves, and for promoting sedition; that he has been guilty of gross misconduct and disloyalty to the Government whose pay he draws, has contravened the standing orders, and must be dismissed.

The Mahomedans, in emulation of the recent Rajpoot marriage reforms, held a large meeting at Delhi on Thursday to discuss the existing ruinous custom of incurring heavy expenditure on marriages and funerals, which causes perpetual indebtedness.

A large meeting of Native mill hands has been held at Bombay to memorialise the Government of India on the subject of remedial legislation; they desire shorter working hours and other concessions.

General Roberts and the Duke of Connaught have inspected the Bombay harbour defences. On Thursday they visited the new forts at Mahaloxmi and Colaba and the island batteries; a day was devoted to gunnery practice at floating targets.

The Borebundar Railway has been opened for goods traffic.

Lord Reay will visit Kathiawar in December to open the Vankaner Rajkote section of the Moroi Railway. At the same time the Duke of Connaught will present colours to the 24th Bombay Infantry.

It is stated that the Nizam proposes spending £200,000 in entertaining Prince Albert Victor during his visit to Hyderabad. There will be a military review of 9,000 men of all arms.

Mr. Ney Elias, the able and experienced chief of the Siam Commission, is now in Calcutta completing the preparations for the expedition. He will travel through a wild country, where it will be impossible to procure supplies, and it will be requisite, therefore, to travel with a larger baggage-train than would be otherwise necessary. The Shan levies will supply an escort of sixty men. The Siamese Commissioners meet the British Commission on the frontier. Rather serious pretensions have been put forward by Siam as to the allegiance of certain tribes claiming British protection. Mr. Elias possesses wide Mongolian experience, and is especially qualified to conduct successfully the present delicate mission.

A Madras paper reports an alleged mutiny of a Native regiment of Trichinopoly, and states that the matter is being investigated under orders from the Commander-in-Chief.

The Hindoo Re-marriage Association of Madras contests the correctness of the recent decision of the Native Judge, holding that existing custom must overrule the law, and have resolved to support an appeal and to agitate for remedial legislation.

The religious animosities in Madras have taken a new phase. The magistrate at Trichinopoly has been engaged in hearing a charge against a number of Hindoos of having deliberately wounded the religious feelings of certain Native Christians by performing a drama in which Christianity was obscenely ridiculed.

The Pathan who recently shot Lieutenant Harris near Chaman has confessed, but expresses great satisfaction at having killed a British officer.

The Shendus' threatened attack has not yet been delivered. It is uncertain what direction it may take. Colonel Tregear's force has been further strengthened by the 2nd Battalion of the 4th Ghoorkas. This will enable him to despatch a strong column to the north to punish Sukpilal's sons.

BURMA.

RANGOON, OCT. 26.

The Mingoon Prince, who recently escaped from Pondicherry, is the son of Mindoon Min, a former King of Burma, who died in 1879. The Prince, when young, rebelled against his father, and was driven from Upper Burma, taking refuge in Lower Burma. Here he plotted against the British authorities, by whom he was subsequently expelled from Burma. Since then he has existed as a pensioned hanger-on of the French at Chandernagore and Pondicherry. If he now makes good his way to the Shan States he will probably give some trouble. There are still many adherents of the old dynasty who have not yet given up hopes of successful resistance, and the presence of a prince of the blood will encourage and unite these and other elements of disaffection which are at present kept down, but are not eliminated.

The local Government have been engaged for some time past, under instructions from Lord Lansdowne, in considering the advisability of releasing the prisoners sentenced for dacoity committed during the period after the annexation. More than 500 have, in fact, been released. Mr. MacDonnell, who has given this permit special attention, hopes it will be possible to largely increase this number.

A successful reconnoissance against the Chins was carried out on the 17th, 18th, and 19th inst. by Captain Bolton, with 150 of the 42nd Goorkhas. Several of the enemy were killed. Many houses were burned, and a quantity of grain was destroyed.

The Tashon Chins, acting fully up to the arrangement with us, have seized the Saggilian and Ourbyin Chiefs, and refused to release them till the captives have been surrendered. The result is that the captives are being sent in, seventeen out of the supposed total of 100 having been brought in in two days.

The police charged with causing death by torturing a villager in Kyauksai have been found guilty. One constable has been sentenced to transportation for life, and another to seven years' rigorous imprisonment. The Burmese inspector has been sentenced to one year's simple imprisonment only. This is only one of many instances of police oppression and corruption all over the country. The police in Rangoon are now charged with making groundless arrests for the purpose of extorting money, and meetings have been held by the Native community demanding reform. The leading European firms are memorialising on the same subject. Searching inquiry, followed by thorough reorganisation, is believed to be necessary. The police do not make up for their high-handedness by efficiency; for criminals not caught in the act are seldom detected at all.

REGIMENTAL INSTITUTES.

(Pioneer.)

The new Regimental Institutes, which owe their origin to the present Commander-in-Chief in India, have been placed on as sound a basis as possible, and a special section of Army Regulations has been devoted to them tentatively. In this it is officially notified that "in order to promote the comfort and provide for the rational amusement of the non-commissioned officers and men a regimental institute is to be maintained in every British Regiment, battery and depôt, and temporarily, when possible, in every detachment of British troops whose strength is equal to a company." The institute includes all existing institutions which are devoted to recreation purposes: and, most important of all, the canteen and "coffee shop" have been absorbed into it. It is divided into five branches, the refreshment department, library, reading and recreation rooms, Army Temperance Association room, and Theatre. The management of each institute is to be entrusted to a committee appointed by the Commanding Officer, a major or senior captain being president, and two subalterns members. These are to be specially selected, and one member is to be placed in charge of the refreshment branch and another is to attend solely to the library and recreation rooms. Sub-committees of three non-commissioned officers will assist each officer, but will have no concern with money payments or contracts. The institute committees are to be made to understand that their duties are extremely important, the main object being to promote orderly conduct and good behaviour among the men by providing them with rational and attractive amusements. The bad characters in a regiment or battery may be absolutely excluded from any or all of the branches on occasion of misconduct, a punishment which should be highly effective. The Adjutant-General, speaking in the name of the Commander-in-Chief, states further that "every endeavour should be used to suppress the use of profane and obscene language, and, without drawing the reins of discipline more tightly than is necessary, to make the institute a means of raising the tone of the less orderly characters in the regiment to that of their well-conducted comrades." The Government have made grants of money to ensure the various rooms being made comfortable, and thus to secure the popularity of the institutions as now reorganised. The reforms which are being carried out are based on the assumption that the individual soldier is, as a rule, willing and anxious to take his recreation in a rational and sensible manner, and his co-operation is the first essential to make the scheme a success. Sobriety and steadiness undoubtedly tend to create that self-respect which it is desirable to secure among the rank-and-file, and the standard of conduct has the best chance of rising when the men see that a high premium is placed upon good behaviour.

LORD REAY'S UNFORTUNATE ADMINISTRATION.

(Pioneer.)

We are ready to believe that Lord Reay is personally a man of benevolent instincts, high aims, and actuated by a sincere desire to do good. But these qualities are not enough for a Governor. Lord Reay is anything but a man of business. He very rarely holds meetings of his Executive Council; seldom or never sees any of his Secretaries, one alone excepted; and, suspicious as weak men generally are, he is for ever seeking counsel on public matters from the editors of Native newspapers and from private and often very far from disinterested persons. Not satisfied with disposing of questions as they arise, his restless spirit tempts him to meddle with every branch of the administration. The pledges given to graded officers by the Secretary of State are broken, and officers of inferior calibre supersede the specially selected University men; while the salaries of appointments are so hacked about that at the present moment a suitable officer cannot be found to take charge of the most important educational institution in Bombay—the Elphinstone College. And, strange to say, Sir Raymond West, who ought to have some traditionary ideas of how a Presidency should be governed, has allowed his genius for special pleading and manœuvring to master him, and apparently rather abets Lord Reay instead of endeavouring to keep his chief steady; while as for the Revenue Members of Council, they seem, from all we hear of them, to have become mere ciphers. Work in Bombay therefore is now work against the grain. There is a general feeling of unrest and dissatisfaction, coupled with a total want of respect for the Government: such a feeling in fact as saps all healthy cheeriness for work and damps the energies of the most zealous. The loser is the public, for whose sake the departments exist and whose interests must suffer if its servants become disheartened and careless. And now that Lord Reay, towards the end of his career, has, with apparent willingness, accepted the "indeliable grace," to use Sir Raymond West's language, of eating his own words and breaking his own promises to men who, however blameworthy, were induced by his express promise of pardon to incriminate themselves, the disgust, for no milder term applies, is general and expressed without any pretence at concealment. When the Secretary of State's orders arrived there were two courses open to Lord Reay. One was to obey orders and throw the blame on his superior; the second, and honourable course, was to resign. His faults would then have been forgotten in the chivalrous effort to atone for the wrong he had unwittingly done. Apparently he has done neither, but has adopted a middle course satisfactory to neither the public, nor the mamlutdars, nor the services: and the end of it all is still far to see. Six months hence Lord Reay will go home carrying with him the reputation of an amiable and well meaning man, but a thoroughly mischievous and withal a dishonoured Governor. "The evil that men do lives after them." Lord Dufferin did much to repair Lord Ripon's follies. It will take a long time and an able successor to repair Lord Reay's.

A CASE OF CONFLICTING EVIDENCE

(Pioneer.)

An interesting example has just come to hand from Central India of that kind of litigation so common in India in which enmity and malice combine with "strong conflicting evidence" on both sides, until the grain of truth is so completely wrapped up and hidden away that it requires the wisdom of a Solomon to find it. The facts of this typical case are briefly these. Acting on the information of an Inspector in the Thuggee and Dacoity Department, the Political Assistant at Goona surrounded a small village with 100 sowars of the Central India Horse, expecting to find it full of dacoits and booty. The report had grossly exaggerated facts. Kanti is a wretched village in the Raghogarh State with, fifteen or twenty inhabitants all told. Half-a-dozen of the men, however, and all the cattle were seized and taken away; and the Inspector was left with a handful of men and an elephant to make further inquiries in the neighbourhood. So far there can be no doubt as to what took place; what happened afterwards is open to conjecture. According to the prosecution, the Inspector, with whom were two officials of the Gurrah State, after going a little way came back and entered the house of the leading inhabitant of the village, one Piara Bhil, during his absence and dug up the floor and appropriated Rs. 1,700. Not content with this, they ordered some chamars with them to fire the village, and actually burnt down two houses. Twenty-one witnesses came forward and swore to these facts, and came out of a searching cross-examination without being shaken on the main points. The Sub-Inspector on his side told a wonderful story. After visiting some neighbouring villages he proceeded towards Kanti, where fifty armed men appeared threatening mischief. Deeming it unsafe to proceed he made a detour, taking in his route several other villages, [with the result that, after marching four or five hours, he arrived at a spot only three miles distant from his original starting-point. As for the dacoity alleged to have been done by him he did not go near the village; and as for the mischief caused by fire, it was done by Piara Bhil himself with the intention of laying the blame on the Police Inspector with whom he had cause to be angry. Although this story was sworn to by an equal number of witnesses, which included persons who said they were present when Piara Bhil committed the arson, the Magistrate, naturally enough, perhaps, refused to credit such an improbable tale, and convicted all six prisoners, giving them terms of rigorous imprisonment varying from seven years to six months, for burning the houses, though on the charge of dacoity there was not enough evidence to warrant a conviction. The prisoners naturally enough appealed from the sentence, and Mr. Henvey, in a singularly able judgment, has pointed out the gross improbabilities of both stories. It was admitted that the Inspector of Police had never even seen Piara Bhil until that day. Why, then, should he entertain such strong animosity against him as to set fire to houses in his village, especially in the presence of a number of men who might at any moment denounce him? Why, too, should he spare Piara Bhil's own house? Again, those of the witnesses for the prosecution who proved the order being given for the firing of the houses, unfortunately to their side, overdid their part, and got entangled in the important question of when and where the order was given. In the end Mr. Henvey decided that neither side had told the truth. Although the story of the defence was too improbable to be believed, it was not enough to prove the guilt of the prisoners, nor the truth of what the prosecution had said. In the end the appeal was granted, and all the accused set at liberty. The whole case reminds one of the story of the Judge who found himself constrained to sum up in these words to the jury:—"If you believe the evidence of the prosecution you will find the prisoner guilty; if, on the other hand, you believe the defendant, you will acquit him; but if, like myself, you believe neither, then you will have to consider your verdict."

Digitized by Google

POLICE INVESTIGATIONS.

(Pioneer.)

A man who is deemed fit by his superiors to be in independent charge of a police station, and to hold a position of responsibility, must be a man of some tact, intelligence, and discretion, and better acquainted with the affairs of the circle of which he is in charge than anybody else, and consequently best able to judge whether an inquiry is necessary or not, and if he does commit an error of judgment it can be rectified by those who supervise his work and action. Moreover, he is an officer on whom it has been necessary to confer enormous powers, and it seems somewhat ridiculous that he should be bound by any rule to waste his time and energies in making useless and objectless inquiries against his own discretion and the wishes of complainants, and to the detriment of other and more important investigations, success in which would act as a deterrent to the criminal classes. To make our meaning clear it is necessary to explain that under the Penal Code a house-breaking has been committed, if a hole large enough to admit a person's hand has been dug through, and under the rules an investigation must be made by a police officer, regardless of the features of the case and irrespective of the desire of the complainant to have an inquiry or of the discretion of the station officer whether an inquiry should or should not be made. Such cases are very numerous, and if to them be added all the house-breaking cases in which property of a trifling value is stolen, the number would probably be found to exceed one-third of the total number of offences reported, and especially in those districts where theft by burglary is a very common offence. . . . The reluctance of the people to aid the police is only too well known. There are several reasons for this, but perhaps the strongest amongst them will be found to be the unnecessary and unsolicited interference of the police. And if failure in these inquiries has given a momentum to the criminal it has likewise convinced the villager of the in utility of police action. Again these investigations are a source of extreme annoyance to those who have had a small hole dug through their house wall or who have even suffered the loss of a few articles of clothing or a few seers of grain. The inevitable report must be made, and will be followed by a harassing and useless inquiry. No tradesman or agriculturist who had suffered such a petty loss would be desirous of a police investigation, knowing full well that the interruption caused to his business will merely involve a further loss, and great inconvenience besides. It would be only reasonable, therefore, to respect the wishes of the complainant. The station officer is after all a mortal, though a badly paid one, and since circumstances have made him policeman, a policeman he must remain or starve. Therefore the rule of percentages compels him by fair means or foul to produce a good return and retain his grade. He is well aware that he is judged by figures and not by the measures of success obtained by him in dealing with the crime which mostly affects the welfare of the people in his circle, and he works accordingly. He cannot be judged by the latter test because he has no freedom of action, and if the rules in force have deprived him of this they have also provided him with a cloak under which he may reasonably hide his shortcomings. The remedy is simple—give him his freedom, make him responsible, and the cloak will disappear.

MAJOR CREIGHTON.

(Times of India.)

As our readers will have observed, the sentence passed by the court-martial at Secunderabad on Major Creighton, Paymaster 7th Hussars, is almost identical with that passed last year on the officer who was tried in this Presidency on charges somewhat similar. In both, a year's imprisonment, cashiering out of the Service, and a heavy fine—which is nothing but a form—are the essential parts of a sentence, heavy indeed, but almost inevitable. If fraudulent misappropriation is proved against an officer imprisonment follows as a matter of course, and, however much one may regret the ruin that overwhelms the culprit, it is impossible to avoid the conclusion that the severity is imperative. But there is one matter which the conclusion of the Creighton court-martial brings forcibly to mind. Captain Kreyer's case has not yet been disposed of, and that officer is still awaiting the decision of the Secretary of State for India. We need hardly go over the facts of Capt. Kreyer's case, which are tolerably well known. Suffice it to say that he was Adjutant of the 17th Bombay Infantry during the time Colonel Bulkley was in command; that he was home on furlough when the exposure in that regiment took place; that about a year ago he was ordered out from England under arrest; and that charges were twice framed against him with a view to bringing him to trial by court-martial, but were on both occasions abandoned. Thereafter, the whole case was referred home to the Secretary of State for India, on whose decision the retention or otherwise of Captain Kreyer in the Army depends. Now about this officer's guilt or innocence we pass no opinion whatever. The fact that he was not brought to trial seems all in his favour, since to frame charges against an officer, and then to abandon them before trial, would appear to show that the charges could not be substantiated. But even Captain Kreyer has been seriously to blame in the past; it must be owned that keeping him in suspense for such a long time is in itself a very severe punishment. Of course the mere fact that a case has to be referred home means a certain amount of delay; but in Captain Kreyer's case the strain appears to have been unduly prolonged. A curious feature in the business is, that while this officer's fate has been awaiting the decision of the Secretary of State, he has been gazetted as promoted from Lieutenant to Captain, and is thus designated in the "Army List." We can only express a hope once more that the matter will soon be decided one way or another, since to keep an officer in suspense for so many weary months is in itself about as severe a punishment as could be devised.

BENGAL.

(Oct. 9.)

THE Alliance Bank of Simla, one of the most prosperous in India, is extending its branches to Bengal. Mr. Langdon has arrived in Calcutta to open a branch there on the 14th inst. The premises taken for the bank are in the Old Exchange Buildings.

THE prospects of the Bengal Presidency Rifle Association this year seem to be excellent, as far as the local meetings are concerned, as a considerable increase in the number of competitions, both British and Native, is already declared.

THE statement that the Bengal North-Western Railway have obtained the working of the Tirhoot State Railway is said to be premature; but the Secretary of State has, it is understood, reopened communications with the company regarding the terms on which such an arrangement may be concluded.

THE construction of a proposed central road in Calcutta is hindered by one Jain temple and two Hindoo temples situated in the way of the road, as there is great opposition against the demolition of these temples. The Municipality has, however, not yet given in, but is considering over the matter.

THE Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal has started on his trip into the hills from Naini Tal. It was at one time probable that he might be called to Mussoorie by the illness of Colonel Blood; but Colonel Blood is doing so well that the chances of Sir Auckland Colvin being detained are now very small.

A RECENT rise of the price of quinine in the Lower Provinces has given rise to complaints which are as seriously and almost as widely made as if the rise had been in the price of rice or salt. The fact seems to confirm the statement that every third native of Bengal is a sufferer from malarious fever.

THE Economic Museum, Calcutta, has completed and despatched the first instalment of important Indian fibres required by the India Office for presentation to the Museums of the Royal Botanical Gardens at Kew and Edinburgh, and to the Chamber of Commerce at Dundee and Manchester.

MADRAS.

MR. JUSTICE MUTHUSWAMI AIYAR, in an able judgment in a Hindoo widow-remarriage case remarked:—"It must be remembered that the Hindoo law, which the Courts are bound to administer, is the law as received by the Hindoo community, and not as it stood in the Vedic or Smriti period of their history, and that no other conception of Hindoo law to be administered by the courts is either judicial or rational."

FOR some time past ill-feeling has existed between the Hindus and Mahomedans residing and trading in Godown-street, Black-town, Madras, in consequence of the erection of a mosque in the street. The Hindus have protested strongly against its erection, but the Mahomedans undertook not to interfere with Hindu processions passing along the mosque. Recently, however, the Mahomedans stopped a Hindu marriage procession and assaulted the Hindus; the result being a case in the Magistrate's court. For nearly a hundred years the Hindus of the neighbouring temple have passed down the street annually on Dasara day, Oct. 4. The Mahomedans that morning, through a solicitor, petitioned the police authorities that the Hindus might be directed to cease playing music on passing the mosque. They assured the police they had no intention of creating a disturbance. The police declined to interfere, as the procession had for many years passed undisturbed. The police tried to prevent a disturbance. The managers of the temple were willing to allow the procession to pass by another street instead, but a great majority of the Hindus refused to submit to the Mahomedan wishes. The procession therefore entered the street about ten o'clock at night, but hundreds of Mahomedans had assembled in the covered roofs and verandahs in the vicinity of the mosque, near which the Deputy Commissioner of Police was posted with fifty policemen armed with sticks. On the procession arriving within a hundred yards of the mosque, the Mahomedans simultaneously made a sudden and determined rush to get at the front of the procession. The police intervened and a fight ensued. The Mahomedans used sticks, clubs, stones, chilly-powder, chatties full of fire and other missiles, and for a short time drove the police back. The latter rallied and drove the Mahomedans into their mosque, and kept them there till the procession passed. The military were summoned, and are inforcement of police arrived. After the procession had passed, it was found that some Mahomedans were escaping over the walls, roofs, and the back of the mosque. Then the police burst the door of the mosque, entered and captured over 100 prisoners, making with those arrested before 157. The prisoners belong to all parts of the city. No deaths are reported, but several persons are severely injured. The police showed admirable pluck in the engagement.

There has been an abundant fall of rain throughout the Deccan, and in Bijapore (where a drought is annually dreaded) the rainfall has been considerably above the average. In Bijapore itself upwards of fourteen inches of rain fell during September, and in one day during that month two inches and thirty-four cents were registered. The ryots ought to be contented, and revenue officials should have no cause for anxiety.

The following is a summary of the Bombay Presidency season reports:—Rain during week good, and beneficial to crops and fodder throughout Deccan, Southern Mahratta Country, and Rutnagherry; moderate or slight in other districts of Presidency proper. More rain needed in one taluka of Khandeish, and parts of Gujerat, Nasik, Tanna, and Kolaba. Standing crops damaged by locusts almost throughout Sind, and in parts of Ahmedabad, Khandeish and Baroda. Cotton blighted in parts of Hyderabad, and bajri damaged by excessive rain in one taluka of Poona. Crops otherwise good, except in one taluka of Khandeish. Sowing of late crops retarded by excessive rain in parts of Ahmednugger and Dharwar, progressing in other districts. Fodder scarce in parts of Dharwar.

Lord and Lady Reay arrived at Agra on Saturday at noon, and were received by Mr. Alan Cadell, the Commissioner; Mr. Finlay, the magistrate; Colonels Saportas, Brough, and Stoddart, and others. The visitors inspected the Central Prison, and were much interested in the carpets being made by the Burmese prisoners, who, in the short time they have been here, have not only learnt how to weave, but likewise to be carpet-readers. Sir John Tyler and Dr. Brander, the Superintendent, showed Lord and Lady Reay round the prison. The day was concluded with a drive through the city and a visit to the Taj. Sunday was a quiet day for Lord Reay and Lady Reay; the former attended divine service, but the latter was slightly indisposed. His Excellency with Mr. Finlay, and, together with Lady Reay, started by the 1 P.M. train for Gwalior, where they spend the day.

It is said that marquees will be erected, and tents pitched for the holding of the Congress meeting, and accommodating the numerous guests who are expected from all parts of India. The committee also intend to rent a few bungalows in the neighbourhood for the use of their guests.

The service commenced at 7 A.M. with the chanting of psalms by the whole of the clergy, seated in two rows on either side of a catafalque erected in the centre of the chalice, draped in black, with the mitre and crozier of the deceased Archbishop placed on the top. The altars and church were also draped in black. After the chanting of the psalms there came the Pontificial Requiem High Mass by the Rev. Dr. Da Costa, Bishop of Damaun, assisted by Father Schmidt and Fonseca as deacons. At the end of the mass the Rev. Father J. Hamilton, S.J., preached an eloquent sermon, giving a brief history of the life of the deceased, characterising the many good traits in his character, prominent among which was his conscientious and strict regard for the rigid discharge of his duties. NORTH-WEST PROVINCES AND PUNJAB.

This week's crop report of the Punjab states that heavy damage to crops has been done by locusts in the Dera Ismail Khan district.

The Lahore paper says the Natives of Delhi are about to start a vernacular newspaper there, in which all the particulars of the Sepoy Mutiny of 1857 will be published in detail. The object of this new enterprise will be to explain the present and past relations of the Natives with the British in India. It is, however, dangerous ground for vernacular journalism, even after thirty years.

A proposal to re-establish a Wards' Institution at Lucknow has been favourably received by the Government of the North-West Provinces and Oudh. A grant of land has been made for the proposed building, which is to be known as the "Colvin Institute." The British Indian Association of the Provinces has made a generous grant of Rs. 60,000 towards the building fund.

The officer in charge of the Rawal Pindi Treasury has been authorised to advance to the officer commanding the station the sum of Rs. 400 on account of travelling expenses for Captain W. B. D. Fenton, Ordnance Department, who, it will be remembered, became insane while out hunting in Kashmir. The unfortunate officer is proceeding to the lunatic asylum, Colaba, en route home on one year's medical certificate.

THE consecration of the new Roman Catholic Church at Simla on Sunday, the 29th September, by the Bishops of Allahabad and Lahore drew an immense crowd of people to witness the ceremony. The Bishop of Allahabad, the Rev. Dr. Pesei, preached the sermon, in which he thanked all those who had contributed towards the erection of the church. Farmer's Mass was sung by a specially trained choir to organ and orchestral accompaniment.

THE Alliance Bank of Simla will probably double its capital, bringing the amount up to ten lakhs. The matter is not yet finally arranged, but it is believed that the proposal is to issue the new shares to present shareholders at a fifty per cent. premium, applying the premium to reserve, and only calling up half the amount at present.

AN adjourned meeting of the Egerton Mills was held at Simla, Oct. 8, at which the result of the Calcutta debenture-holders' meeting of the 5th inst. was read. The following were the terms proposed to the debenture-holders for accepting the offer of the Cawnpore Mills, that the interest be reduced to 5 or 6 per cent., and repayment of the debentures postponed for five years. The reply of the debenture-holders was considered unsatisfactory, as the above terms were not unconditionally accepted, though they were willing to continue negotiations. The meeting resolved that the directors should not oppose the Native creditors' petition to the Court at Gurdaspur, which was to come on hearing on the 14th inst. The directors have been empowered to continue the negotiations with the debenture-holders, as the liquidation proceedings can be stayed if a satisfactory arrangement is arrived at. In the event of liquidation there is every hope that the creditors will be paid in full, while the shareholders will probably receive little or nothing.

BURMA.

THE Rangoon Times Shwebo correspondent wires the suspension of Mr. Buchanan, the sub-divisional officer of that district. He and Lieutenant Thatcher, of the Hampshire Regiment, are charged with assaulting some villagers. One man, who is said to have beeh beaten by or with the knowledge of these officers, is reported to have died three days afterwards. An inquest was held, but it was not established that the assault was the cause of death, and it was stated that the man had gone about his ordinary avocations in the interval. The Chief Commissioner has directed a thorough inquiry by the district magistrate.

A LONG note is published by the Chief Commissioner of Burma on the progress made in the pacification of Upper Burma from April, 1887, to August, 1889. Commenting on this the Governor-General in Council at Simla is of opinion that the record of progress is in a high degree creditable to Sir Charles Crosthwaite's administration. His Excellency desires to take the opportunity of publicly expressing his appreciation of the ability, energy and consideration which the Chief Commissioner has brought to bear on one of the most difficult tasks which had fallen to the lot of any administrator in India in recent years, and his approbation of the unwearied attention which he devoted to every branch of the administration. His Excellency feels assured, now that the return of the peaceful inhabitants of the country to their daily pursuits has been rendered possible by the suppression or surrender of almost all the principal leaders of organised crime, the revenues of Upper Burma will rapidly develop. He has particularly noticed with much satisfaction the measures the Chief Commissioner has in contemplation for some reduction of the most serious burden on the revenues, namely, the cost of military police. While his Excellency welcomes any measure of economy, he has no wish to press any curtailment of the force available for the maintenance of order.

THE following in a complete list of the officers forming the Siam Boundary Commission:—Mr. Ney Elias, in charge of the Mission; Mr. J. G. Scott, Superintendent of the Shan States, First Assistant Commissioner; Mr. J. W. Arthur, Vice-Consul at Chunjmai, Second Assistant Commissioner; Major E. G. Barrow, officer in charge of escort, transport, &c.; Captain F. J. Pink, assistant to Major Barrow; Captain H. M. Jackson, R.E., in charge of the survey party: and Dr. J. K. Close, in medical charge. A forest officer on the Burma establishment may be attached later on if needed.

WE have been asked to state that from and after January 1, 1890, candidates elected as members of the East India United Club, 14, St. James's-square, will be allowed the option of paying either the present entrance fee of £31, and the annual subscription of £8 8s., or of paying £10 10s. annual fee without entrance fee.

TAKING MONEY FROM NATIVES.

It has long been a standing order of the Government of India that no officer of Government shall ask or accept pecuniary aid or subscriptions from Native Chiefs or officials of Native States in pursuance of public objects except with the previous sanction of Government. This ruling, however, has just recently been extended so as to include applications for or acceptance of assistance towards private or semi-public objects. We must say that we think this latter ruling rather a step in the wrong direction, for it will often forbid a public servant to do that which he is called upon to do by the usages of society. If the Native gentleman is not to give his money to semi-public social undertakings through the public servant, it is as much as to say he shall not give it at all; for we know of very few movements in India, whether private or public, which are not headed by public servants. Nearly all the stewards, committee-men, and hononary secretaries of our race meetings, gymkhanas, hunts, regattas, exhibitions and shows in India, are public servants who, by this ruling, are prohibited from accepting the usual subscriptions from Native Chiefs towards a semi-public amusement, recreation, or pleasure which the Native gentleman enjoys in common with the European. In fact, a public servant is debarred from selling to a Native chief a ticket of admission to an amateur performance given in aid of some deserving charitable object, or from receiving a donation towards a rifle meeting for the Native army, without going through the cumbersome formalities of obtaining the sanction of Government. On the other hand, the question is, will the Native Chiefs or officials care to move in society, and partake of its amusements and pleasures, without sharing its expenses? We think not, and it is treating them like children to suppose they will.—Civil and Military Gazette.

INCREASE IN THE CONSUMPTION OF INDIAN AND CEYLON TEAS.

It will be remembered that the Chancellor of the Exchequer, in introducing his Budget in April last, said that the revenue derived from tea, though large, was disappointing, and gave as the reason that Indian tea was, to a great extent, superseding China tea. This is clearly demonstrated by a consular report recently issued, which refers to the imports of India and Ceylon. From this it appears that while as lately as 1873 the imports of tea-growers in Ceylon amounted to no more than 23 lbs., by 1885 they had reached 3,750,000 lbs. Last year they rose to 20,500,000 lbs., and it is estimated that by the close of the present year they will have reached the astonishing total of 40,000,000 lbs. In the production of Indian tea the advance is no less remarkable, as shown by the statistics of the last twenty years. In 1868 the imports were, in round numbers, 8,000,000 lbs.; in 1878 they were 36,000,000 lbs.; and in 1888 they were 92,000,000 lbs. The estimate for 1889 is 105,000,000 lbs. This vast increase of British production is at the expense of the Chinese tea-grower, whose part in ministering to English consumption is a vanishing quantity. The above estimates appear likely to be fulfilled, as the first seven months of the present year the total imports of Assam and Indian tea amounted to 32,557,000 lbs., as compared with 30,922,000 lbs. in the same period last year, and the total imports of Ceylon tea were 19,136,000 lbs., against 10,881,000 lbs. last year.

CHARGES AGAINST A GOORKHA OFFICER.

At a general court-martial assembled at Dehra Dun on the 5th of August, Subedar Hurkissen Khuttre, of the 2nd Battalion 2nd Goorkha regiment, was arraigned on the following charges:—1st charge: Dishonestly misappropriating money, the property of Government, entrusted to his charge on the public account; in that, at Dehra Dun, on or about the 17th December, 1888, he dishonestly misappropriated to his own use the sum of Rs. 472-14-6 the property of Government, which had been entrusted to his charge on the public account for safe custody and deposit in the regimental treasure-chest. 2nd charge: Such disgraceful conduct as is mentioned in Indian Article of War 64, with intent to defraud; in that, at Dehra Dun, during the month of December, 1888, with intend to defraud, he dishonestly misappropriated to his own use the following sums which had been committed to his care for safe custody and deposit in the regimental treasure-chest, that is to say, Rs. 114-9-6 or thereabouts, the property of Captain Lewis Montgomery Murray Hall, 2nd Battalion 2nd Goorkha Regiment; Rs. 381-0-4 or thereabouts, the property of Lieutenant Bertram Strachey, 2nd Battalion 2nd Goorkha Regiment; Rs. 30-1-6 or thereabouts, of the Adjutants' fund, the property of the Adjutant, 2nd Battalion 2nd Goorkha Regiment. The Court found the prisoner, "Not Guilty" of all the charges. This judgment was d August 9th. The following revised finding is dated Aug. 28th

—"The Court having attentively considered the observations of the convening authority (which observations have been most carefully translated and explained to the Court and also discussed by them) respectfully adhere to their finding of "Not Guilty" of all the charges. The finding was "confirmed, but not approved," by the Commander-in-Chief in India, and Subedar Hurkissen Khuttre was ordered to be released from arrest.

THE TROOPS OF NATIVE STATES.

The ensuing cold weather will witness, it is believed, a rapid improvement in the troops which have been selected in the Native States to share in the defence of the North-West Frontier. It should be remembered that before the men can be armed with Snider rifles and drilled on the plan which obtains in the Native Army, it is necessary to equip them properly. to furnish them with serviceable uniforms and good accoutrements, to put them, in short, on the footing of real soldiers, and make them feel that they are meant for use and not for ornament. Hitherto the "armies" of the Native States have, with few exceptions, been scarcely trained at all, and the men in the ranks have been permitted to serve on to an age when they were absolutely useless. The difficulty about pensions was really at the root of this. The system in vogue in our own army could scarcely be applied to the thousands of men in nominal military employment under this or that Chief. The expenditure in maintaining these armies at the strength sanctioned by the Government of India was so great that a regular pension list was almost out of the question. The Sepoy was sure of his daily food at least, and he was content to live on in the ranks to the end of his days, instead of serving for that pension which is a certainty in the Indian Army. The reorganised troops, on the contrary, will always have to be kept in a high state of efficiency, regular recruitment in their case being absolutely necessary, as they may be called upon at any time to proceed on active service. One of the most important duties of the Inspecting Officers hereafter will be to see that the Sepoys in the picked regiments are of good physique, that the weak and sickly are weeded out, and that the term of service is confined within reasonable limits. The material that has now to be worked up is undoubtedly good, and there is plenty of it, so that at the outset the 20,000 troops provided by the feudatory States are likely to be good all round, but the difficulty will be to maintain the standard of excellence now fixed. It is a good sign that both Native officers and men are showing much interest and even enthusiasm in the work which they are called upon to do.

LADIES FOR HADES.

The Madras Mail has received the following ingenious letter from the Rev. C. H. Chard, the Chaplain of the Penal Settlement of Port Blair :—

"Would you allow me to draw attention to an advertisement in your columns calling for candidates for the posts of Middle School Mistress, and also of Upper Primary School Teacher, for the very interesting Subordinates School at Port Blair in the Andamans. Your readers may be pardoned if they know nothing of these lovely islands beyond the fact of their being the Indian Penal Settlement. Their ignorance is widely shared, and if we may judge from the exclamation of pleased surprise with which the new-comer invariably greets these 'Isles of the blest' imagination has pictured them quite otherwise even as a fitting abode for the âmes damnes under restraint here. Let me assure any possible candidates (as my six years' connection with Port Blair as Chaplain enables me to do with the authority of experience) that our 'lines are cast in pleasant places' here. While you are stewing in the plains of India, we are being fanned by cool sea breezes, and if we have no cold weather to boast of, neither have we any epidemics to dread. Living is not quite so cheap as in Madras, nor are servants, but compared with Burma and some parts of India both are cheapness itself, whilst an excellent co-operative store affords even a bon vivant all that he could desire! The only drawback is the difficulty of communication with dear Chinnapatnam. This, however, is soon to be remedied; in a month or two there is to be a monthly mail service between Madras and the Andamans, when we shall be within four days' reach of Madras. Allow me to assure any ladies who feel disposed to offer themselves for these posts, that the children here are the dearest little creatures imaginable, and that amongst the parents it would be entirely their own fault if they did not form during their stay in these beautiful islands the happiest friendships of their life. Will those who desire further particulars be good enough to communicate with the Rev. J. Black, Chaplain, Vepery."

The "dearest little creatures" referred to so affectionately by the Chaplain are the offspring of unhung murderers incorrigible burglars, and habitual offenders of sorts. Transportation to the Andamans carries with it a proud privilege for the Aryan, for it secures to him the opportunity, after the comparatively short endurance of what is called hard labour, of taking to himself a wife from among the female convicts irrespective of Lutchmee and pecanninies left behind in India. The place is, so far as Nature is concerned, a heaven on earth, "but only man is vile," and as the exotic population is composed of convicts and their guardians, and the indigenous population consists of diminutive folk who go about as nude as Adam and Eve before the fall, it is not too much to say that if there be a Hades on earth, "it is there! it is there!" But it is proverbial that there is no accounting for tastes, and our correspondent has not only lived some 2,550 days and nights in Port Blair, without blowing out his brains, cutting his throat, or imbibing laudanum, but positively revels in his surroundings, and invites ladies of culture also to cast in their lot in the "pleasant places" of the Andamans. Those ladies may count on merry gambols with the children aforesaid, and it will be their own fault if they do not yield to the exquisite influence of an atmosphere of crime, and form "the happiest friendships of their lives" with "lifers."

THE MAY FLOWER AND OTHER MAY FLOWERS.

Anglo-Indian readers will be as much interested as American ones in the following letter sent by Sir George Birdwood to the Daily Telegraph:—

"It is pain and grief to me to expose a picturesque and sentimental error—for there are, indeed, many things we know to be false, in which it is for our spiritual good to believe—yet, I am moved to correct the mistake regarding the May Flower, into which Sir Edwin Arnold has fallen in the fine peroration of the second of the two lectures delivered by him before the University of Harvard, and reported in this morning's Daily Telegraph, and this partly because the error, while interesting, is of no great humanising virtue, and partly because I am in a large measure responsible for it.

"Sir Edwin, addressing his distinguished audience, asks, 'Do you know that the May Flower, which brought your ancestors hither, went down in Indian waters off Masulipatam?' The suggestio falsi in this interrogation originated in the following manner:

"In 1878 I reported on the supplementary miscellaneous 'old records' of the India Office, and as whenever I put in my thumb I pulled out a plum, instead of contenting myself with a cut-and-dried official description of them for the mere purposes of classification, I put all the plums I found in them into my report, which, on account of its general interest, was published by Her Majesty's printers for general circulation. Among one of the biggest of these plums, as I then thought, was the following extract from the 'D.P. (damaged papers) bundle":—'May 6, 1659.—Account of goods laden at Gambroon on the May Flower, bound for Metchlipatam (i.e., Masulipatam).' On this extract I ask: 'Could this have been the same ship as the Pilgrim Fathers' May Flower?' On the report going out to India, it was there discovered that a company's ship of the name of May Flower had, about the same date, foundered in 'the Bay' (i.e., of Bengal), and on the supposition, based merely on my question that the two were identical numerous newspaper articles appeared connecting the foundered May Flower with the immortal ship of the Pilgrim Fathers. Again, the late Mr. Henry Stevens, of Vermont, of the publishing house of Henry Stevens and Son, London, an enthusiastically patriotic American—or United Statist, should I not rather write it?—became deeply interested in my extract and question about the company's May Flower, and being convinced that she was the same May Flower as that of the Pilgrim Fathers, determined to publish every document in the India Office, naming the sacro-sanct vessel. This resolution led to his publishing, as a commencement, the first volume of the Court minutes of the East India Company, extending over the years 1599 to 1603, simply because a ship called May Flower is constantly referred to in it. By the time that the volume was ready for publication I had begun to have serious misgivings of the identity of any of the May Flower's belonging to the Company with the May Flower, and in the introduction to Mr. Steven's volume relegated my reference to the subject to a foot note. Soon after its issue I was satisfied that there was no connection between them; and in reviewing 'The Dawn of British Trade to the East Indies'—as Mr. Stevens named his book—in the Athenæum for October 15, 1887, I remarked:—'Mr. Stevens was allured into his patriotic undertaking by the romantic fancy that the May Flower mentioned in this volume as one of the ships inspected for the company's "first voyage" to India was the veritable May Flower that carried the Pilgrim Fathers to America. "May Flower" was a common name for a ship in those days, and the one examined for the company in 1600, and the other possessed by the company in 1669, which is believed to have subsequently foundered in the Bay of Bengal, must both have been larger ships than the little craft of the Pilgrim Fathers. The May Flower of 1600 must, moreover, have ceased to exist in 1620, and that of 1620 long before 1659. Only ships built of Indian teak could have kept the sea from 1600 to 1659, like those used by the Phœnicians at Tylos, which Theophrastus tells us had continued sailing for 300 years."

A HYDERABAD paper is informed that Sir Asman Jah, K.C.I.E., is having erected a large hall at Ajmere near the tomb of a celebrated and much-venerated Mahomedan Saint at an expense of something like Rs. 30,000. Several thousands of pilgrims yearly resort to the shrine of the saint, and for these there is at present no place where they can meet. The Minister is also having built a monster iron cooking apparatus, sufficient to feed many hundreds of persons at one time, at a further cost of about Rs. 6,000.

LORD CONNEMARA landed at Calcutta on the 25th ult., after a pleasant voyage. He was received by Captain Currie on behalf of the Lieutenant-Governor, and a guard of honour of the 3rd Bengal N.I. met him at the landing ghat. He proceeded the same day to Darjeeling, where he was met by Sir Stewart Bayley at the station, and by a guard of honour of the Volunteers. He then rode, accompanied by some of the Mounted Infantry, to the Lieutenant-Governor's house, at the entrance to which was a guard of honour of British troops. Among those present to meet him were the Maharajah of Cooch Behar, General Auchinleck, and the Secretaries to the Government of Bengal. The Englishman says that Lord Connemara, on arrival in Calcutta, was looking none the worse for his recent experience of the plains in summer. The short sea trip from Madras must then have done wonders, for it was the general remark in Madras when he embarked that he looked anything but well. Lord Connemara is to spend a day with Mr. Justice Straight, at Allahabad, when on his way from Calcutta to Simla.

THE last news to hand of the Russian expedition to Tibet makes no mention of the party having been stopped by the Chinese, as was reported some time ago in the telegrams; but if any such opposition had been experienced it would not follow that the Russian officers should feel bound to make mention of it in reports sent home for publication. The letter is dated on the 7th July from Yarkand, which place the expedition had reached three days previously. Their route across Kashgaria is spoken of as one never previously followed by Europeans. The whole party had suffered greatly from the intense heat, which has evidently been something extraordinary this year all over Central Asia, and Colonel Paivtsoff talks of a retreat to the hills bordering the route to Kotan to enable animals and men to recover from its effects. On arrival at Kotan the Colonel undertakes to submit a report on the doings of the expedition after leaving Yarkand, but there is no allusion to any further advance into Tibetan territory.

LAST year Mr. Charles Rivett-Carnac, of the Accounts Department, was deputed to make inquiries into the system of accounts prevailing in the Benares and Behar Opium Agencies. After some months of laborious investigation he found in many respects totally different systems in vogue in the two Agencies. His recommendations for the introduction of a uniform system have met with the approval of the Government of India; and the Bengal Government, acting under instructions of the Government of India, have just appointed a Commission to make a Handbook of Accounts and Procedure, with a view to assimilate, so far as local circumstances allow, the practice of the two Agencies. The Commission will consist of two officers of the Opium Department, with the Member of the Board of Revenue as President. Mr. G. M. Gregory, of the Benares Agency and Mr John Christian, of the Patna Agency, are the Opium officers selected for this duty, with Mr. John Beames as their President. The Commission will begin its work after the Puja holidays.

THE Sunday mail question has, writes the Pioneer, for the first time brought the interests of India into direct collision with those of the great English colonies in Australasia, and we can well imagine that the Colonial Office, the Secretary of State for India, and the Postmaster-General in England relish but little the triangular duel into which they have been forced. The difficulty arose in the first place from the strong Sabbatarian feeling in Australia, a feeling which we in this country had certainly no knowledge of until it suddenly declared itself in connection with the present controversy. This point was rather overlooked by the speakers at the recent meeting in Bombay, but it is really the most important that has to be considered. Sir Charles Sargent was bold enough to say that it was not asking Australia too much to waive its objection to run trains on Sunday once a fortnight, but he apparently forgot that under the old contract the Governments of New South Wales and Victoria actually preferred to lose a day rather than sacrifice the Saturday half-holiday or the Sunday as a day of rest. No trains, we believe, are run on Sundays in Australia, and this alone proves how strong the Sabbatarian feeling is among the colonists. The most is sure to be made of this fact by the Colonial Office, and anything that Lord Cross may urge as to the feeling in Bombay will scarcely act as a counterpoise. As for the position of the Postmaster-General it is one which no one will envy him. He has already made every concession he can to India and Australia by arranging for the arrival of the mails in England as late in the week as possible, and has thereby caused discontent among the commercial firms in the great provincial towns; and now he has to decide whether it is possible to link the Australian and Indian mail services once a fortnight at Aden or Suez without interfering with the observance of Sunday in Sydney and Melbourne, or in Bombay. He may possibly regret that, in making the new Indian contract with the P. and O. Company, he did not listen to public opinion, and insist upon faster steamers being employed; but it is too late in the day now to change the terms of that agreement. Taken altogether, the difficulty seems about as awkward a one as could possibly have been devised, and we shall be curious to see how Parliament will deal with it if the matter is not settled before next February.

A MELANCHOLY accident befell a young officer, Lieutenant E. B. Farquharson, of the 1st Battalion East Surrey Regiment, somewhere during the night of September 26th. It seems that he and Captain Bayliss of the same regiment were returning together to Allahabad from leave to Darjeeling, and should have reached their destination by the 10.17 A.M. train on Friday. The latter woke up at four o'clock that morning and found his companion missing, and in spite of inquiries made nothing further was heard of Mr. Farquharson, till late in the day, when intimation was received that he had been picked up by a goods train on the line of railway near Beheea—so that he must have fallen out about half-past one—and taken to Arrah. No one except Mr. Farquharson could possibly clear away the mystery in which the incident is shrouded; and he, we are sorry to say, died on Sunday afternoon. The theory is that while in a semi-somnolent state he was jerked through one of the large windows in the bath-room compartment of his carriage; should this prove to be the case, nothing short of a miracle can have saved him from being cut to pieces. As it is, he received severe injuries to his head (producing concussion of the brain) and other parts of his body, while some of the fingers of his right hand were so terribly mangled as to necessitate amputation. Mr. Farquharson was to have just succeeded to the Adjutancy of his regiment.

THE Russians are said to be not only proceeding with their railway from Charjui along the left bank of the Oxus to Kerki, but to be contemplating the building of an entirely new line in a different direction. This is to run from Samarkand due southwards to Sherabad, and thence to one or other of the ferries on the Oxus north of Balkh. It would pass through Bokhara territory only, but would give a point d'appui whence Afghan Turkistan could be threatened very effectively. From Samarkand to Sherabad is less than two hundred miles, while from that village to the river is about twenty-six miles. Mazar-i-Sharif, which the Amir Abdur Rahman is making a cantonment of some importance, lies thirty miles south of the Oxus, so it will be within easy striking distance of the railway terminus. We cannot say if this Samarkand-Sherabad line has been actually commenced, but its strategic importance is so great that the Russians are not likely to delay very long over its construction. It would enable a force drawn from Samarkand and Tashkend to move down into the Oxus Valley in two or three days, and the passage of the river would present no great difficulties, particularly if a second force were co-operating from the direction of Kerki. The Trans-Caspian Railway has been so rapidly built by General Annenkoff that we should not be surprised if within a year this extension from Samarkand is completed. The country to be traversed is mountainous in parts, but not sufficiently difficult to check the enterprise of European engineers.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

MONDAY, OCTOBER 28, 1889.

HILL CORRESPONDENTS.

The "silly season" on the hills of India is over for the present year, and the occupation of those "gentlemen" (and ladies) "of the Press" who act as "our own correspondents" on the delectable mountains is—for an interval—at an end. We feel very grateful for this, and a similar feeling ought to be prevalent amongst all Anglo-Indian readers here who, when the Overland Mail comes in, are in the habit of trying to discover, in the "Summaries" prepared by our contemporaries at the Presidencies and Allahabad for home consumption, some more solid information about India, its progress and its peoples, than that which week after week during the summer is sent to England from the seats of Governments on the hills. Our good friends who, with scissors and paste pot, cater in Indian sub-editorial sanctums for our edification in this country, work, we feel certain, with the best and kindest intentions towards us, and have no doubt in their own minds that in sending us what has been so pleasing to themselves—their hill correspondents' letters—they are giving us delight also. It is easy to understand how the hard worked man of press or cutcherry, labouring through weary hours of heat in the plains, finds the long details of how his friends on the hills are spending their hours pleasant and sustaining mental food; and it is right and proper no doubt that the editor of his particular journal should continue to supply him with as much of the article as his digestion will stand. If one cannot get to the mountain the best thing to do is to get the mountain brought to one's self, and this is what, no doubt, our own correspondents on the hills endeavour to do for the benefit of the unfortunate toilers in the plains. These latter may be influenced by envy, hatred, and jealousy more than by amiable feelings in reading how their fellows are enjoying themselves in all manner of delights in high altitudes, but they eagerly read the accounts, and therefore the mountain correspondents are a necessity. And the sojourners on the mountains are themselves made more happy by reading of their own gay doings—of the balls, picnics, flower shows, tennis matches, and other methods which they devise whereby to kill the time—which must be killed, somehow, on mountain as on plain. But when the wants and wishes of both sides—those "above" and those "below"—are thus provided for, why is it thought necessary in "Overland Summaries" to send the tales of pleasure in their entirety to England? Does any reader in England care for such news here? Can even Bayswater delight in stale Gup—that word which in India signifies the gossip and scandals which are characteristics of the hills as eternal as themselves? If any say "yes," then have we offended, in perhaps too hastily expressing our delight that the day of the hill correspondent is for a little time no more. But in justification of ourselves we would have it remembered that, whereas the home reader who does not care to read the mountain literature, may at his own will skip it or pass it by, no such sweet privilege is ours. A stern journalistic sense of duty compels us to go through the many columns, in order to find, if possible, something serious, profitable, or of good report to justify that annual exodus from work and worry in the plains which the Governments in India—one and all—declare to be necessary to their successful carrying out of British rule there. But what do we find? Anglo-Indian papers, supposed to be "Overland Summaries" of Indian intelligence for English readers, but the chief information being the fast life and frivolities of the hill stations, to tell which to us no less than dozens of long and close columns of type are given! Lest we should be thought guilty of exaggeration, we reprinted a sample of this hill correspondence last week, which was all taken up with an account of amateur theatricals at Simla, where we are told of one of the lady performers: "The folds of her nightcap are as irresistible as the manner in which she sings, and the shower of bouquets and the treble encore with which she is greeted proves conclusively that a Simla audience can, after all, enjoy a hearty laugh." Here is a verse of a song, composed and sung by an A.D.C., which was received with "shrieks of laughter":—

> Calcutta papers still remark the Exodus is wrong,
> It may be so, but yet we are going particularly strong,
> They swear we never work at all, and tho' it is grotesque,
> In fact, official life up here is nothing but burlesque.

After this song we are informed that "an amusing scene followed, which prepared the audience for the topical duet"—of which here followeth a specimen:—

Some people say that Simla folk are up to curious games,
Do you think so?
No, I'm certain they're mistaken.
But there's Mrs. ——?
No, you really mustn't mention names,
Don't you think so?
No, you might be quite mistaken!
Still there's Mrs. What-ye-call-em flirts with Mr. So and So
While he is grilling in the regions down below.
But if any one should hint at it or say I told you so,
You can tell them—
What?
They must be quite mistaken!

We learn from the mountain scribe that "a Simla audience, as all actors who have ever succeeded or failed on the local boards, is a truly critical and severe one," but on this occasion their "taste was bit," and the efforts of the performers was "thoroughly successful." It is, however, trying to one's temper to read, after wading through three long columns of the above kind of stuff, that the writer "regrets he has not sufficient time or space to describe at length the performance of each actor."

This was the last straw on the editorial camel, and we succumbed; but we are recovering at the reflection that, until next hot weather at least, there will be no more amateur mountain theatricals to describe. The pen of the hill correspondent will be at rest—for a time.

MILITARY INTELLIGENCE.

THE Commander-in-Chief left Simla on the 1st Oct. on his tour to the hill cantonments in the neighbourhood, and halted at Kukkur Hathi for the night. On the 2nd he reached Subathu, inspected the Wiltshire Regiment and visited the barracks, hospitals, and regimental institutes, Lady Roberts also visiting the hospitals and married quarters. In the afternoon there were regimental sports and games, and Lady Roberts distributed toys to the soldiers' children, who are occasionally given a treat of this kind. On the 3rd Kasauli was reached, the Sanawar Asylum being visited on the way. The party put up at the "Home" at Kasauli, which is a bright and comfortable house. On the morning of the 4th the depôt was inspected, and in the afternoon a march was made to Dhurmpore. On the 5th the Royal Scots Fusiliers were inspected at Dagshai, and the headquarters of the 2nd Queen's at Solon. After dinner his Excellency and Lady Roberts left for Simla, arriving at midnight. Colonel Murray, A.A.G., and Major Cowan, A.D.C., were the staff officers of the party. The troops at all the stations were found in excellent health and condition, and preparations had already begun for the march down to the plains.

THERE will be a vacancy in the ranks of the Brigadiers at the Muridki Camp of Exercise, as Colonel Hammond, Commandant of the 5th Punjab Cavalry, who was to have had one of the brigades, proceeds home shortly, on medical certificate.

THE rumour that the 17th Lancers are to change places with the 5th Lancers at Mhow in December is unfounded. The 5th Lancers, as all along arranged, relieve the 8th Hussars at Meerut, who proceed to England. The 5th will probably not be sorry to leave their first Indian station, where they have suffered so heavily from typhoid.

MAJOR COWAN, Aide-de- Camp to the Commander-in-Chief, writes to the Pioneer to correct a mistake in the report of his Excellency's speech at the Simla Rifle Meeting, which, as it is of some consequence to the sense of the passage in which it occurs, requires correction. "There are occasions," said Sir Frederick Roberts, "when the most stubborn valour must perforce succumb to the superior shooting of an otherwise inferior enemy; but there is no occasion when a courageous and well-disciplined force can help its energies being stimulated and its morale raised by the consciousness of its possessing a superior technical education—that is to say, its being able to put more bullets into a specified object in a shorter time than its adversary." The unfortunate omission of the pregnant no made his Excellency's meaning rather obscure in the Pioneer's report.

GENERAL LUCK, Inspector-General of Cavalry, has reported that the lancer regiments were more proficient in the use of their weapon than those regiments armed only with the sword, few of which go in as a whole for what is known as nezabazi. In noticing this the Inspector-General said that every encouragement was offered to the sowar to perfect himself in the use of his carbine, but Government left it to the liberality of officers to encourage him to practise with the principal weapons, the lance or sword. The new prizes now to be competed for should undoubtedly cause the Native cavalry soldier to become a better swordsman or lancer, according to the weapon with which he is armed.

CAPTAIN H. M. JONES, V.C., has in all probability taken Simla en route to consult the Viceroy regarding India's relations with Siam before taking up his appointment. Captain Jones is a retired military officer, who won the V.C. in the Crimea, and who has since served in the consular and diplomatic capacities in various parts of the world. It may be hoped he will go to Siam thoroughly in touch with the views of the Government of India, and that the settlement of the present frontier difficulties will be facilitated by the knowledge and experience which Captain Jones brings with him. He will have no easy task, as just now things are not in the most satisfactory state, and require early adjustment.

THE supply of maps of the surrounding country to all fortifications in India, for use in ascertaining the ranges of the guns mounted therein, has been ordered. The map record office, Survey of India Department, Calcutta, will supply Bengal; but in Madras and Bombay the maps will be obtained under the orders of Government. In cases where maps of the surrounding country are not available for issue, officers in charge of fort armaments will have to apply to the local revenue officers for the information required.

CAPTIAN MOBERLEY, Adjutant of the Royal Artillery at Bombay, has been placed under arrest in connection with the military accounts of Colaba, and will be tried by a court-martial for embezzlement.

LIEUT.-COLONEL SHORTLAND, commanding the Royal Artillery, who has taken ninety days' privilege leave to England, has been directed to return in order to assist in the investigation.

THE SIMLA VOLUNTEERS.

The annual inspection of the 2nd Punjab Volunteers Rifles took place on Oct. 5, Brigadier-General Galbraith, C.B., commanding the Sirhind District, being the inspecting officer. The corps number 314 officers and men, and of these 223 were present, only 36 being absent without leave. The volunteers assembled near the Public Works Offices, and were marched down to Annandale by Lieutenant-Colonel Walker, commanding. They were there formed up in line, and General Galbraith, accompanied by Captain Buckland, District Staff Officer, and Captain Eardley-Wilmot, D.A.A.G. for Musketry, was received on arrival with a general salute. The corps marched past first in column, and then in quarter-column, afterwards passing in double-time. Lieutenant-Colonel Walker then put them through some battalion movements, and the Major and a few other officers, at the General's request, also showed their knowledge of drill. The movements were well executed, considering what little practice the men have in battalion drill. One company then took up a defensive position and the remainder attacked across the open, flanking parties working well on either hand. The sham action was conducted with much spirit. A squad of ten men, chosen at haphazard from the rank, than fired volleys at 800 yards. The shooting was good—42·50 per cent. of hits being scored at half-size volley firing target. General Galbraith afterwards addressed the corps, and expressed himself well pleased with their smart appearance and the manner in which they had gone through their drill. Volunteers, he said, had a good many difficulties to contend with, and they therefore deserved all the more credit for the sacrifices they made in discharging their duties. He dwelt upon the importance of attaining efficiency in musketry, in which Volunteers should always excel. The drill of the corps was much better than he had expected, and the men marched vigorously and well together. Referring to Lieut.-Colonel Walker's approaching departure to England, he said he was sure they would all share with him the desire to see their commanding officer back among them next year. The parade then broke up, the Volunteers sitting down to an al fresco lunch provided on the ground.

FEEBLENESS.

TO THE EDITOR.

Sir,—At length we have received a trustworthy account of the Rohtuk riots on the 7th of last month.

I solicit your attention to page 405 of the Allahabad Pioneer Mail of the 2nd inst.

The first thing we learn is that the well-intentioned measures of a former Viceroy may endanger the existence of millions of property belonging to Natives and Englishmen; the attempt to Riponise India, to govern it as Yorkshire is governed, has wholly failed.

"Neither Native magistrates nor members of the Municipal Committee were of any assistance either in reporting on the general state of affairs, or in attempting to restore the entente cordiale which had previously existed between Hindus and Mohamedans."

The next thing to be taken to heart is the fact that the never satisfied ambition of Secretaries and other Officials at Simla to absorb all the patronage of the Indian Empire, leads to uncertainty, imbecility, and feebleness in governing.

Had Major Rennick, the District Officer, been invested with full powers, no riot would, I think, have taken place; the assault "on the 7th September was made almost entirely by Jats from villages, who are, as a rule, ignorant, but well disposed."

The instigators were mainly burneahs (shopkeepers), and if Major Rennick had been empowered to summon them to attend on him, the rascals would have been quaking in or out of their shoes.

Kindly write an article on this subject, by which you may save many lives and much property.—Your obedient servant,

October 22nd. T.

Mr. Caine's cultivation of tobacco in Madras has been so successful that the Madras Government is importing some tobacco seed from Sumatra and British North Borneo for a trial.

COORG SAUCE.

The Universal Appetiser,

PRICE ONE SHILLING.

This delicious Sauce is prepared from the receipt of a Nobleman, whose perfect knowledge of the culinary art has obtained for him the nom de plume of the "Modern Lucullus."

The name of this celebrated Sauce—

THE UNIVERSAL APPETISER—

Has been given to it because, in addition to its remarkable flavouring qualities, it possesses the singular property of

CREATING OR RESTORING THE APPETITE,

In fact, it practically realises the French saying —"L'appétit vient en mangeant."

Since the introduction of THE UNIVERSAL APPETISER it has been said, both in Society and at the Clubs, how rarely is the mauvais quart d'heure noticed, every one being so much interested in discussing and enquiring about the new Sauce—

THE UNIVERSAL APPETISER.

SOLE PROPRIETOR—

THE

AND

EVERY SATURDAY. PRICE SIXPENCE.

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" has acquired a reputation for early and exclusive intelligence as to Appointments and other service News, for the high character of its articles, the independent course of its staff of writers, and for its earnest support of all measures for the good of the Services. Articles on specially interesting subjects appear from week to week written for the most part by officers of rank and experience, or by men of note in literature who have made the Naval and Military affairs of the country their special study. A series of Illustrated Articles is appearing weekly on Regimental Badges and History. Illustrations with descriptions are also given of new Service Inventions.

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" freely opens its correspondence columns to all grades in the Services. By this means an opportunity for interchange of opinion is afforded, such as is offered by no other Service Journal. Its ordinary weekly issue contains fully one-fourth more matter than the other Service Journals, even with their frequent "supplements."

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" circulates largely throughout India and the Colonies. It is supplied direct to the Army and Marine bureaux of the French, Russian, and other Governments, and it is read extensively by Officers of Foreign Services, especially of the German, French, and American Armies, who desire to acquire a true impression of facts and public opinion in England regarding Military affairs.

LIGHT versus DARKNESS.

"SHAKESPEARE, the Greatest Genius who has ever yet lived," taught the Divineness of Forgiveness, of Perpetual Mercy, of Constant Patience, of Endless Peace, of Perpetual Gentleness. If you can show me one who knew things better than this man, show him ! ! I know him not ! ! If he had appeared as a Divine, they would have Burned him; as a Politician, they would have Beheaded him; but God made him a Player.

"He taught that kindness is nobler than Revenge ! !"—The Rev. GEORGE DAWSON, M.A.

"Earthly power doth then show likest God's
When mercy seasons justice,
And that same prayer doth teach us all to render
The Deeds of Mercy."—Shakespeare.

JEOPARDY OF LIFE, THE GREAT DANGER OF DELAY.

You can change the Trickling Stream, but not the Raging Torrent.

WHAT EVERYBODY SHOULD READ.—How important it is to have at hand some simple, effective, and palatable remedy, such as ENO'S "FRUIT SALT," to check disease at the onset ! ! ! With little trouble you can change the course of the trickling mountain stream, but not the rolling river. It will defy all your tiny efforts. I feel I cannot sufficiently impress this important information upon everybody. Let ENO'S "FRUIT SALT" be your companion; under any circumstances its use is beneficial, and never can do harm. When out of sorts, Restless, Sleepless, yet unable to say why, then your whole body is out of order, but you do not know where it may end; it is a real necessity to have a simple remedy at hand. The Pilot can so steer and direct as to bring the ship into safety, but he cannot quell the raging storm. The common idea when not feeling well is: "I will wait and see; perhaps I shall be better to-morrow;" whereas, had a supply of ENO'S "FRUIT SALT" been at hand, and use made of it at the onset, all calamitous results might have been avoided. What dashes to the earth so many hopes, breaks so many sweet alliances, blasts so many auspicious enterprises, as untimely Death ?

"I used my 'FRUIT SALT' freely in my last severe attack of Fever, and I have every reason to say I believe it saved my life."—J. C. ENO.

HEADACHE AND DISORDERED STOMACH.—"After suffering for nearly two and a half years from severe Headache and Disordered Stomach, and after trying almost everything, and spending much money without finding any benefit, I was recommended by a friend to try your 'FRUIT SALT,' and before I had finished one bottle I found it doing me a great deal of good, and now I am restored to my usual health; and others I know that have tried it have not enjoyed such good health for years.—Yours most truly,

"ROBERT HUMPHREYS, Post Office, Barrasford."

SUPERIOR TO ALL OTHER SALINES.—"Dear Sir,—Having been in the habit of taking your 'FRUIT SALT' for many years, I think it only right to tell you that I consider it a most invaluable medicine, and far superior to all other saline mixtures I have ever tried. I am never without a bottle of it in the house, as I find it possesses three most desirable qualities—namely, it is pleasant to the taste, promptly efficacious, and leaves no unpleasant after-effects. I do not wish my name to appear, but apart from the publication of that you are welcome to make use of this testimonial if it is of service.

"A DEVONSHIRE LADY.—Jan. 25, 1889."

The Secret of Success.—Sterling Honesty of Purpose. Without it Life is a Sham!—"A new invention is brought before the public, and commands success. A score of abominable imitations are immediately introduced by the unscrupulous, who, in copying the original closely enough to deceive the public, and yet not so exactly as to infringe upon legal rights, exercise an ingenuity that, employed in an original channel, could not fail to secure reputation and profit."—ADAMS.

CAUTION.—Examine each Bottle, and see that the Capsule is marked ENO'S "FRUIT SALT." Without it you have been imposed on by a worthless imitation.

SOLD BY ALL CHEMISTS. PREPARED ONLY AT

ENO'S "FRUIT SALT" WORKS, POMEROY STREET, NEW CROSS ROAD, LONDON, S.E. (BY J. ENO'S PATENT.)

NATURE RULES ALL THINGS.

In every form of weakness use Scalded Milk.

ENO'S "VEGETABLE MOTO." occasionally a desirable adjunct to ENO'S "FRUIT SALT," as a simple and Natural Laxative, Stomachic, Blood, Brain, Nerve, Bile, or Liver Tonic; or, in other words, when taken as directed, their action is as simple as a tomato, whole meal bread or porridge (with scalded milk); you cannot overstate their great value in causing a natural, slow, and gentle action of the Liver; by that means you keep the blood pure and prevent disease. In advanced Life they are everything you could wish. Read Practical Hints on Constipation, Indigestion, Liver Diseases, Impure Blood, Sleeplessness, Nervous Headache, Treatment of Gout and Rheumatism, how to Prevent Consumption, Jaundice, and other disastrous diseases by Rules for Health and Longevity, &c., in a pamphlet given with each Bottle of ENO'S "VEGETABLE MOTO." They can be used for any length of time without fear or harm."

DR. SPENCER'S ASTHMA CURE.

MR. D. FITZPATRICK, of Drumcree, Killucan, Westmeath, Ireland, writes:—"Thank God the two bottles of Dr. Spencer's Asthma Cure got from you cured me of the Asthma. I am over sixty years of age, and for the last twenty-five years I have suffered as much from Asthma (I believe) as any other Asthmatic could suffer, often for nights without ever lying on a bed, but I thank the good God I can now sleep as comfortable as I could wish for. I only wish every poor Asthmatic sufferer would give your cure a trial, for it is a great boon."

The public are hereby notified that the above remedy is prepared from a recently improved formula of Dr. Spencer (which has nothing to do with any other formula) and is sold, under his name, by us, who are the sole proprietors, and in no way connected with any other person or firm. We will send our Pamphlet "Asthma, its Treatment and Cure" (Third edition) by E. Edwin Spencer, M.A., M.D., &c., post free, on application

OPINIONS.

The Calcutta Review for October reached us a day or two ago, and a glance at its contents shows that the number more than sustains the reputation which this old and favourite publication is again achieving. The Review is rapidly regaining the position which it . . . . there is no fear of the Indian Review, or the Asiatic Quarterly rivalling it in public favour.—Statesman, October 1886.

. . . . The best service which I ever rendered in India, or, indeed, for India, was the establishment, single-handed, of the Calcutta Review, which has done far more for Indian literature than anything I have written under my own name.—J. W. KAYE, Athenæum Club, June 28, 1872.

The Calcutta Review has given us valuable articles on the army. Some from the pen of Sir Henry Lawrence, who wrote with the spirit of prophesy of the coming storm of which he was one of the noblest victims.—Address of the C.-in-C. at the U.S. Inst. of India

. . . . The Calcutta Review has not only throughout its career reflected the highest honour on its public-spirited promoters and its well-known distinguished contributors, but has done much to help forward the reconstruction of our system of governing India.—Westminster Review.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

[By Overland Mail.]

The Overland Mail brings us letters and advices from Bombay to the 18th Oct.; from Allahabad and Madras to the 16th Oct.; and from Calcutta to the 16th Oct.

At the meeting of the Legislative Council at Simla on Oct. 10th General Chesney moved that the Cantonment Bill be passed as amended. Mr. Scoble explained that the rules for demarcating cantonments would be the same as hitherto, and by requiring the concurrence of the local authorities and the Supreme Government in defining cantonment limits, every reasonable safeguard had been provided. Wherever troops were located cantonment rules would, as far as possible, follow municipal rules. Cantonment rules might also be extended to neighbouring localities with the consent of the local authorities. Mr. Scoble then introduced the Bill to prevent the disclosure of official documents and information. The Bill, he said, had been passed at the last session of Parliament, and was applicable to the whole of Her Majesty's dominions; but it was desirable it should be placed on the Indian Statute Book with certain slight modifications, which were technically necessary. The Bill was passed at the meeting of Council on Oct. 17th.

The Mamlatdars' Indemnity Bill was also passed. The opportunity was taken on the occasion to give further expression to the views of the Government of India upon the mamlatdar question in its last strange phases.

The Central Provinces Land Revenue and Tenancy Bills will be passed before the end of the Simla session. The Municipal and Village Sanitation Acts, which are not urgent measures, will be left over until the Legislative Council reassembles in Calcutta in the first week in December.

In regard to the despatch of the Secretary of State on the subject of the Report of the Public Service Commission, the Government of India have now to consider how the recommendations of the Commission can be carried out within the restrictions imposed by Lord Cross. Local Governments will have to be consulted on the various points in discussion, so that no immediate action is possible. The Secretary of State has pronounced in favour of raising the age limits of candidates for the Indian Civil Service. Twenty-five will be the age up to which Civilians in the future can come out to India.

The question of appointing permanent Railway Commissioners for India under the new Railway Act will probably be reconsidered when the Bill comes before the Select Committee in Calcutta.

Quite a series of resolutions are being issued by the Government of India in the Public Works Department giving effect to the recommendations of Mr. Macdonald's Committee.

Mr. Robert Crosthwaite has been laid up with fever at Simla, and was unable to attend the meeting of the Legislative Council last Thursday. He has now quite recovered, and work on the Central Provinces Bills is progressing.

Colonel G. F. Pretyman, R.A., has been nominated for the command of the Agra District.

Colonel Gerard, of the Central India Horse, has been appointed to command the brigade of the Muridki Camp, left vacant by Colonel Hammond having to go home on sick leave.

The tenure of the Military Secretaryship to the Resident at Hyderabad by Major Gilchrist has been extended to the 1st November of next year.

Colonel Kenneth Mackenzie, Judicial Commissioner of the Hyderabad Assigned Districts, is likely to join the East African Company for a term of two or three years, if his services can be spared by the Government of India.

Captain A. J. W. Allen, A.D.C. to Major-General Sir John Hudson, acts for Major Ridgeway in the Quartermaster-General's Department until the arrival of Lieut.-Colonel Elles.

No change is likely to take place in the Managership of the Oudh and Rohilkhand Railway, the statement that Major Brackenbury shortly succeeds Major Sargeaunt being based on pure rumour.

Major Bruce, 19th Bengal Lancers, has been deputed to Persia to buy mules for the Government. He is now at Simla receiving his final instructions.

After a minority of thirteen years Maharaja Rajindra Singh, of Patiala, a young man of eighteen, has assumed the government of his State. A durbar was held on the morning of the 10th October, at which the official communication from the Punjab Government conferring the powers of a ruling chief was read.

General Amir Ahmad, the Agent of the Amir of Afghanistan with the Government of India, died at Simla on Oct. 8th from dropsy. His body has been taken down to Kalka by his son, for interment at Sirhind. The deceased General was a man between fifty and sixty years of age, was held in much esteem by the Amir and the Government of India, and had filled his important post for the last five or six years with marked success. The Viceroy has addressed a letter of condolence to the family of the deceased.

On the night of the 11th October Lieut. A. M. A. Harris, Royal Engineers, Lieut. Rooke, 5th Bombay Cavalry, and six sowars pursued a Pathan, who had stolen a mule from the lines at Chaman. Lieut. Harris got up to the thief, fired at him, but missed, and was then shot dead. Lieut. Rooke next came up to the murderer, fired, and also missed, and the Pathan fired and wounded Lieut. Rooke in the neck. Some of the sowars then cut down and captured the ruffian, bringing him into camp. Lieut. Harris was buried on the 13th. Lieut. Owen relieves Lieut. Rooke, whose wound is progressing satisfactorily.

Tantia Bill, the famous Central Provinces outlaw, was sentenced on the 7th October, by the Sessions Court ot Jubbulpore, to be transported for life for dacoity and mutilation.

A Madrassi on Mr. Gladstone.—A well-known citizen of Madras, writing to the Madras Mail from London, says:—"One of the most enjoyable days I have spent since I returned home was in the House of Commons. I was fortunately present during one of the debates on the Budget, and heard all the great guns except Hartington and Churchill. Both were present, but did not speak. Gladstone was on his feet several times. His vitality and energy, both physical and mental, are really wonderful; but, in my opinion, he looks his age. His voice, too, is the voice of the octogenarian. What struck me about him more than anything was the absence of that calm and dignified repose which one would expect to see in a man occupying his distinguished position. His movements are spasmodic, and his attitudes frequently grotesque. He jumps from his seat, with arms wildly extended and coat tails flying, at intervals of five minutes; he shoots suddenly along the bench, and whispers excitedly to a colleague; he fidgets perpetually, and is constantly dodging about and getting entangled amongst his neighbours' legs; and he rushes into debate, looking very like an angry cockatoo, about twenty times an hour. Contrast all this with Dizzy's statuesque attitude, maintained for hours; his quiet and self-contained manner, his thoughtful countenance, and reticent habits; and it is not difficult to understand why, when he did speak, how much more effectual was his intervention in debate, and how much greater weight attached to his utterances than is the case with Gladstone."

NOTES.

THERE is little news of interest from India to-day, either by wire or post. Preparations are being loyally made in all directions to give a hearty welcome to Prince Albert Victor, who is expected to land at Bombay next Saturday, which day has been proclaimed a public holiday throughout the Presidency. The Nizam proposes to spend two lacs of rupees on the ceremonial festivities at Hyderabad. It is vain to exclaim against this as an example of Oriental extravagance which will be copied by other princes of India. Money spent on támashas is not altogether money wasted —employment on such occasions is given to a great many people, the poor and needy are fed, and delight is given to all. Besides, on the 9th of November the City of London will be doing a little tomfoolery and extravagance also—so preaching economy to Native princes as some of our Radical friends are at present doing is at the moment a little out of place.

THE agitation against the Mamlatdars' Indemnity Act is reported to be spreading, and it is said that an influential section of the Brahmins wishes to carry the agitation to England, and raise the subject in Parliament. But who will undertake to represent the friends of the corrupt officials? The Bombay Government has certainly managed to get the Supreme Government and the Secretary of State for India into an awkward quandary, and the difficulty of getting out of it is no small one. Lord Lansdowne showed this in his speech at the Legislative Council at Simla on the 17th ult., when Mr. Scoble moved the passing of the Bill.

HIS EXCELLENCY THE VICEROY said that the Government had never represented the measure itself as more than most hopeful. The settlement of the question was full of difficulty, and rendered it still less easy of solution by the fact that the Government of India was not called upon to intervene till the eleventh hour. All that they claimed was that the solution that had been proposed was, on the whole, the most reasonable one of which circumstances admitted, and the most just in regard to the various interests affected.

IF he criticised the criticisms made on the Government he should be inclined to say that most of them were made entirely with reference to the interests of one of the parties concerned, and that the interests of all the rest appeared to be almost ignored. The Government of India had not only to uphold the reputation of the Bombay Government, but also owed a duty to the people of this country, whose interests were largely involved in the maintenance of the purity of the public service. Those who contended that the conduct of which the dismissed officials had been guilty did not unfit them for the discharge of important judicial functions were striking a serious blow at the standard of public morality in India.

THIS is sensible enough, but it will not satisfy the Mamlatdars and their friends. It is difficulty to say what will satisfy them, but surely the following from the Times of India must be a canard:—"Under date of 7th October our Simla correspondent writes:—'I am quite right about the Mamlatdars. Not only are they to get full pay till pension time, but the pay is to be raised as they go along, just as if they were in the service and were rising from one grade to another. It remains to be seen whether Lord Cross will allow this.' Our Simla correspondent is always well posted; but this piece of news is very astonishing all the same." Very astonishing indeed!

LORD DUFFERIN did well to point out in his speech on Wednesday night, which we reproduce elsewhere, the present prosperity of India, and the brilliant commercial future that ought to await her; but we fear that, so far as the British investor is concerned, he was speaking to deaf ears. The wildest of "wild cat" schemes will be greedily taken up by shareholders provided that the locality be some out-of-the-way place, of which they know nothing, and which is difficult to get at; but India is shunned as a field for the speculator's coin. Bubble companies promoted in the Transvaal take readily. Our American cousins can always get rid of local "rubbish" in London, but sound, safe, and most promising Indian investments are passed by and neglected. This cannot surely be for ever; it has gone on long enough as it is, but we cling to the hope that before long we shall find an Indian "boom" on the Stock Exchange.

A GOVERNMENT resolution, reviewing the working of the Indian Companies Act, states that there were 910 joint-stock companies at the close of 1887, with nominal capitals amounting to 3,025 lakhs of rupees, the actual amount paid up being 2,233 lakhs. At the close of 1888 there were only 895 companies with actual capitals amounting to 2,299 lakhs. The increased capitals are due chiefly to the cotton mills.

SOME information for the use of the advocates of temperance is furnished in official papers just issued. The amount of liquor imported last year into India was more than double what it was in 1884, and the manufacture of ales in India is more than double the quantity imported. This is a somewhat startling statement, but made as it is on the strength of Government blue-books there is no disputing it. The imported liquor alone was little less than two and a-half million gallons. But Government is apparently pleased to think that the development in the last ten years is due to the importation of very light ales, foreign and English, "which people may drink without serious apprehension of the consequences." The quantity manufactured was about the same as the quantity imported.

A CURIOUS question has arisen in connection with the promotion of surgeons-major in the Indian Medical Service of the administrative rank of brigade-surgeon and of brigade-surgeons to that of deputy surgeon-general, says a contemporary. Under an old rule which had been in force for nearly a century they claimed the right to refuse promotion, the reason of this being that some of them had to vacate lucrative posts on being given a step in rank. The Government of India, after fully considering the question, have passed orders under which such officers must accept promotion in their turn, and the matter has been referred to the Secretary of State for final approval.

THE Editor of the Bombay Gazette and the Editor of Truth appear to differ as to the correctness of their information concerning the movements of Royal personages. Here is what the former says:—"Truth is not omniscient, though it has acquired the useful knack of writing as if it knew everything. In the number to hand by Monday's mail Mr. Labourchere thus contradicts us:—'There is no truth whatever in the statement, which has been going round the papers, that Princess Beatrice and Prince Henry of Battenberg were to have gone to India this winter, "but at the last hour it was decided to pospone the trip." There was nor more idea of Princess Beatrice visiting India than of her starting on a trip to Patagonia.' As a matter of fact the trip was fully decided upon. The Princess Beatrice and Prince Henry of Battenberg were to have come out in the cold weather, and the pleasure of welcoming them was eagerly looked forward to in high circles of Poona. But a telegram arrived which stated that the trip had been unavoidably postponed. We stated the fact the day the telegram was received in Poona. We never magined that the Princess Beatrice and Prince Henry of Battenberg contemplated a visit to Patagonia." The Bombay editor appears to be angry. This ought to please his truthful rival here.

IN August 2,308 emigrants left Calcutta for British and Foreign Colonies. Of these 677 left for Surinam, 454 for Mauritius, 635 for Trinidad, and 542 for Demerara.

(Times Correspondents.)

INDIA.

Calcutta, Nov. 3.

The Viceroy has had a busy week. He arrived at Peshawur on Monday; the Native city was gaily decorated with triumphal arches, flags, and shawls. The Municipality presented an address, contrasting the present peace and security with the condition of life in the past. They expressed their gratitude for British rule and their profound loyalty to the Queen, and requested that these sentiments might be conveyed to Her Majesty. The Viceroy, in the course of his reply, said he was keenly regardful of the duty of defending the "marches," implied in his title of Marquis, and would take special care to convey to the Queen their loyal sentiment. Later he inspected the mission schools, where 350 boys paraded. Passages from Shakespeare were recited by some Afghan boys. The Viceroy praised their excellent rendering of the passages. In the evening his Excellency attended a ball at the club.

On Thursday morning the Viceroy, accompanied by the Lieutenant-Governor of the Punjab and various members of his Staff, left to inspect the Khyber Pass. He breakfasted at Ali Masjid, thence proceeding up the Pass. The Viceroy inspected the Khyber Rifles at Jamrud, and expressed pleasure at seeing the men who had distinguished themselves in the Black Mountain campaign. Various tribal chiefs were presented. The Viceroy then rode to Pizzah, whence he could see a magnificent panorama of mountain scenery, including the Sufed Koh and the ranges of Kafiristan. The hills on either side from Jamrud to Pizzah, a distance of twenty-two miles, were lined at intervals by the Khyber levies. The road was in excellent order. At Ali Masjid Lady Lansdowne photographed several picturesque groups of various tribal chiefs and their retainers. Late in the afternoon the party returned to Peshawur. On the following morning there was a grand military parade of 6,000 troops. After the parade the Viceroy distributed orders of merit to two officers and four privates of the Khyber Rifles for distinguished service in the Black Mountain expedition.

In the course of his speech the Viceroy said that when the Government decided to send the expedition the Khyber Rifles expressed a strong desire to take part in it, and these volunteers subsequently exhibited conspicuous gallantry. In having these decorations conferred upon them, not only the individual soldiers, but the whole regiment were complimented. He was especially pleased to have the opportunity of inspecting the battalion on parade, of observing their soldierlike bearing, and of personally conferring the orders.

The Viceroy arrived at Attock on Friday.

A serious railway accident occurred at Hatras on Monday. A pointsman neglected to lock the points, with the result that an engine and brake-van and a carriage filled with women and children went off the rails. Eighteen persons were killed, and twenty-four women and children were seriously injured.

Dhuleep Singh's recent manifesto, in which he invited the Native communities of India, and in a special degree the Sikhs, to rise up, to revolt against the Queen's authority, and to contribute funds for the prosecution of civil war, has been answered in a most able and spirited manner by the Sikh community at Gujranwala. The enthusiastically loyal tone of this remarkable document tends to throw considerable light upon the special reasons which induced the leaders of the Congress agitation to abandon their previous intentions to hold a Native congress at Lahore. The writers state that Dhuleep's letter has been carefully examined and weighed, and that the whole of the Sikhs are compelled to view the letter with the utmost disgust, hatred, and contempt. The writers add:—

"We do not in the least degree sympathise with you or respect the letter. It is evident that through your misconduct you have displeased the benignant Government. We are true friends of the English Government, and are perfectly assured of its kindness, justice, peacefulness, generosity, and integrity. Your claims are the subject of universal ridicule." The letter then proceeds to draw a comparison of the misgovernment and tyranny of the past with the innumerable benefits of English administration:—

"The British Government is unequalled for justice among all earthly Governments. The British always reward those who are loyal. In 1857 we remained stanch. We have accompanied them to Malta, Egypt, Cabul, and Burma, giving ample proofs of our bravery and loyalty. In return we have received various rewards, titles, lands, promotion, medals, and pensions. The taxation is reasonable and just, and is spent alone for our benefit. On the other hand, what claim have you? No Native chief regards you or your letters. You are held in no estimation by the Native chiefs of India. If you return to India you will be grievously disappointed and put to open shame. We tell you with sincere heart we are loyal to the British and will fight against you. We have not yet forgotten your ancestors' tyrannical rule. The history of the Sikh Empire lies open; every one can read it and compare it with British administration. You have voluntarily turned your back upon the favours of the British Government. We advise you to relinquish your mad ideas and to return and sue for forgiveness. If you reject this advice, at all events abstain from disgracing our nationality by sending mischievous letters of this character."

The Tirupati Temple case is still proceeding. The case for the prosecution is nearly concluded. The court is densely crowded every day.

The Bombay memorialists have been successful, and the Sunday mail day has been abandoned.

The Duke of Connaught recently distributed prizes to the students of the Gokaldas Tejpal Schools. In the course of his speech his Royal Highness said he congratulated the authorities on being able to dispense with Government aid. Very few Indian educational institutions were independent of Government assistance. The present exception reflected considerable credit upon the sagacity and providence of the generous founder.

An important Medical Commission for the investigation of the cardiac effects of chloroform have begun experiments at Hyderabad. Dr. Brunton, representing the Lancet, has arrived, and is the guest of the Resident. Dr. Bonford represents the Government of India.

Prince Albert Victor is expected in Bombay on the 9th. A general holiday has been proclaimed in Bombay. The Admiral in his flagship arrives on the 7th, and will give a Royal salute on the arrival of the Prince, who will be met on landing by the Duke of Connaught and Lord Reay. A public meeting has been held at Poonah to appoint a reception committee and collect subscriptions to celebrate the Prince's visit. It was resolved to have a general illumination, and liberal subscriptions were collected. The India Steam Navigation Company have placed a steamer at Prince Albert Victor's disposal for the passage from Madras to Rangoon, and subsequently to Calcutta.

LORD LANSDOWNE'S TOUR.

Calcutta, Sunday.

The Viceroy last week visited the Rohat and Khyber passes, and reviewed six thousand troops at Peshawur. His Excellency then travelled along the Indus to Attock. This week he visits the Gomal Pass and Quetta.

THE EXPEDITION AGAINST THE CHINS.

The Lushai and Syloo chiefs refuse to give up their captives, and threaten to attack Fort Lungleh. The Tashon Chins are sending in their captives, but the others are holding out.

THE RAILWAY ACCIDENT NEAR AGRA.

Eighteen deaths have resulted from the Hathras accident up to date, and fourteen women and children are still in hospital. The pointsman is in custody, and an inquiry is being held.

The friends of the late Captain Russell, R.A., of the Commander-in-Chief's staff, having expressed a wish to join in forming a Memorial Fund with a view to the erection of a tablet either in marble, or brass, to his memory, Colonel A. G. Hutchins, at Ootacamund, will be happy to receive subscriptions in aid of the undertaking. It is suggested that as a large number of subscribers may be expected to come forward, the subscription be limited to Rs. 15. As soon as some idea can be formed of the amount of the subscriptions, a committee of subscribers will be formed for the purpose of selecting a fitting memorial, and carrying out all details connected therewith.

JUDICIAL DIFFICULTIES IN INDIA.

(Pioneer.)

An immense amount of crime goes unpunished owing to the ineradicable tendency of the Native complainant to overlay even a good case with ornamental evidence. This weakness on his part affords an easy loophole to a Judge or Magistrate who may be inclined to shirk trouble or responsibility. It is so easy, and so safe, and sounds so well to record that "palpable perjury such as this vitiates the whole case for the prosecution," or that "where so much is false it is impossible to say that anything is true." But no man who is not prepared to take the responsibility of sifting truth from falsehood and acting upon the result is fit to be a Judge in any country in the world, and least of all in India. The District Magistrate in these provinces is already far more heavily handicapped in his struggle against lawlessness than the non-regulation Deputy Commissioner; for while the latter can award any sentence not exceeding transportation or imprisonment for seven years, the former can only, like any other full-power Magistrate, inflict imprisonment for two years and fine of Rs. 1,000. The non-regulation officer is thus in an obviously stronger position than his confrère in the older Provinces, and if the status of the latter is to be modified at all, it should be modified in the non-regulation direction, and not in that advocated by the Congress. A weak executive, deprived of magisterial powers, would doubtless suit the criminal classes admirably, and also the great brotherhood of vakils whose business and incomes depend on the prevalence of crime and litigation, and the multiplication of appeals. But the population of India does not as yet consist entirely of criminals and lawyers, and with all other classes the divorce of magisterial from executive powers would be most unpopular, and for the general interests of the country most portentous. Weak administration, especially among semi-civilised peoples, is always maladministration. When Burke was appealed to to aid in strengthening the Government, he replied that he would prefer to make it wise and honest. Let us by all means lay to heart Burke's dictum, and make our Government as wise and as honest as we may. But it can never be either the one or the other unless it is also strong, a terror to evil doers and a protection to them that do well.

DR. PORTER.

(Bombay Gazette.)

The selection of Dr. Porter to fill the new See was not of his own seeking. For the soldier of the Society of Jesus to be called away from the ranks and compelled to take his seat on the episcopal chair is precisely the one misfortune which he is taught to guard against and to dread. It is his duty to put the temptation far from him, and to avoid being led into the way of it. But if the command come from the Pope, obedience is his duty, and he must obey. To him the customary Nolo Episcopari is the expression of something like abhorrence of a dreaded honour, which will take the soldier from the battlefield and put him in the cabinet. When it became necessary to make an Archbishop upon the creation of the new Roman Catholic hierarchy in Western India two eminent men were successively sounded by the Propaganda as to their willingness to accept the high office. One of these was Father Kerr, some time chaplain to Lord Ripon when Viceroy. Father Kerr had been an officer in the Royal Navy before his conversion to Catholicity, so that the honour proposed to be conferred upon him might have been supposed to be peculiarly tempting, for it is not every day that an officer who walks the quarter deck is made an Archbishop. But he sent in medical certificates to establish the fact that his health would not stand the Bombay climate. The same course was taken by the other ecclesiastic to whom the same proposal was made. Therefore the Chapter in Bombay was directed to forward to Rome the names of three fathers from amongst whom his Holiness would choose the Archbishop. Amongst the names submitted was that of Dr. George Porter, whose reputation was known to his brethren in Bombay. Dr. Porter being then over sixty, would have been glad to plead his age in bar of his appointment, for he had dreaded the effect of the climate upon his health at that time of life. His Holiness, Leo XIII., who did not himself shrink from a still greater burthen, imposed upon him in advanced life with impaired health, benignantly smiled and said: "Two have declined, and that is sufficient!"

THE NATIVE STATES' TROOPS.

(Civil and Military Gazette.)

The scheme for utilising portions of the armies and other military resources of the Native States in India in the defence of the empire is now completely initiated, and the immediate control has been placed in the hands of Major H. Mellis, Bombay Staff Corps, with the official designation of "Chief Inspecting Officer of Native States' Troops." Subordinate to Major Mellis there is to be a small staff of officers who will carry out on the spot the arrangements for improving the armed forces of the States, raising reserves of transports, &c. These officers will be designated "Inspecting officers," and they will instruct and supervise, but never command, the troops of Native States, nor reside permanently in any single State. No approach to the old system of contingents is to be permitted—the selected bodies being recruited and officered as far as possible from the States concerned, and the control of the forces remaining wholly in the hands of their own Chiefs. Of course we cannot expect to see very grand results just at present; but, in the course of the next three or four years, it is not unlikely that we shall be able to witness the unique spectacle of Imperial and Native States' troops brigaded together at our camps of exercise. We believe that the present arrangements, however, are subject to revision at the end of the next year; and, in the event of the movement not expanding to the proportions anticipated, it is probable that the Government of India will be unable to see its way to continue an establishment of inspecting officers. Still, we have not much fear of this occurring, for, as we have said before, the scheme is a good one, and is, moreover, based on the voluntary offers of military aid already received from the majority of the Native States.

THE JUTE TRADE.

(Englishman.)

The members of the Jute Manufacturers' Association are to be congratulated on the fact that their discretion, if not disunion, has led them to postpone for a time the serious considerations of the proposal to raised minimum selling rates. We say "disunion" advisedly, for it is an open secret that in one quarter at least there is evinced a strong disinclination to pursue the road along which the more eager spirits of the Association have lately been hurrying. It is not necessary to investigate here the cause of the most recent manifestation of restiveness; we are content to note with satisfaction that it has secured a much-needed space for breathing and reflection for those who were being dragged along at a pace which allowed little time for either. In any case the proposal to raise "paper" rates considerably, accompanied as it was, we understand, by the suggestion that rates for "open" ports should be fixed from week to week, would have sufficed to startle into a re-examination of their position all whose apprehension of the laws which regulate supply and demand had not been dulled by the "demoralising influence" of extreme prosperity. The facility with which prices have, during the past three years, been kept at a highly profitable level has, no doubt, had much to do with persuading those responsible for the latest development of the situation that they can be so maintained indefinitely, without disadvantage to the industry itself, or to the many branches of Indian trade directly or indirectly connected with it. From this view—so unsound, and, in its present application, so dangerous—we have from time to time dissented, in the interests of all concerned.

THE PUBLIC DEBT OF INDIA

(Indian Daily News.)

Another decade nearly has passed since we last set out the public debt of India and its annual progress from 1857-8—or the period when the Imperial Government of England took over the administration of the British possessions in India from the East India Company. The large accretions of fresh debt yearly since then, with the growing interest charges on the Indian revenues, might well attract a more deeply-seated interest amongst the people of England than has hitherto been the case. The fast-growing charges on account of interest have now attained proportions which may well give rise to serious misgivings as to future financial prospects and the welfare of over 250 millions of people. Such misgivings, however, apparently find no place in the political considerations of those who administer the affairs of the empire. Comparisons are still often drawn between the volume of the national debt, the revenues and the fiscal burdens of the people of England and similar relations in this country. We have urged before, and repeat, that the cases are not on economic parallel—as the wealth and condition of the inhabitants of the two countries bear no relative proportion. The labour capital value of the two countries is on an entirely different base, as well as all those economic elements of production—minerals and manufactures—which have rendered England the wealthiest nation of the world. A percentage of individual taxation in England, which may be safely levied from the people without absolutely sapping their productive forces, would be ruinous to the inhabitants of India at this time. The numerical difference in the population of the two countries does not in any way tend to compensate for this, as the absolutely poor or untaxable classes in India are infinitely more numerous than ever has been, or can be, the case in England.

(Pioneer.)

The improvement in the Khyber water-supply, which the Punjab Government has sanctioned, will serve still further to strengthen the friendly relations between the tribes in the Pass and our Political Officers. In times of drought the limited amount of land which is under cultivation between Jamrud and Landi Khanna becomes absolutely sterile for the time being, as there are no means of irrigating it. The people have no reserves of food-grain upon which to fall back, for all over Afghanistan it is the custom to grow only crops sufficient to meet annual wants and, as our troops discovered in 1878-80, even the most fertile districts do not boast of granaries. The Pass Afridis have to lay out comparative large sums of money in purchasing food supplies at Peshawur when their own crops fail, and they will accordingly be grateful for even a small increase in their water-supply even though but a few villages may be affected by it. Hereafter, when our influence has extended to the valleys about the Khyber, more extensive improvements may be carried out, when engineering skill is exerted to utilise the perennial streams which are known to exist. The good effects which will follow measures of this kind are likely to be permanent, and the Afridi clans may gradually be won over in a body to recognise that the Indian Government is not a hostile power, though it has great military resources at its command. The tribesmen have already come to see that it is to their immediate advantage to have their country under the sure protection of British officials, as thereby they are safe from molestation at the hands of their old rulers, the Afghans, and they would, we believe, accept willingly enough a further development of our frontier policy. This would be in the thorough opening out of their hills and valleys by means of alternative roads and a line of railway, projects for which have been under consideration for some time past, though no scheme has been finally matured. It is satisfactory to know that more attention is being paid to the Khyber line of advance into Afghanistan by the military authorities, and with the tribesmen in their present contented frame of mind there should be no difficulty in making the northern section of the scientific frontier as secure as that in the Kandahar direction. We have a good military road even now in existence to the borders of the Ameer's territory at Landi Khanda, a fortified post has been built on Landi Kotal, the water-supply along the route is being looked after, and hereafter we may see the railway winding through the hills just as it does in the Hurnai and Bolan gorges.

EVILS OF THE "DHAI" SYSTEM.

(Englishman.)

Infanticide in India has long been supposed to be a thing of the past. Do not the pupils of our Indian schools learn in their histories how this practice, along with that of suttee, was abolished under the beneficent administration of Lord William Bentinck; and do we not complacently regard its extinction as one of the landmarks in the progress of this country towards Western civilization and enlightenment? It is true that now and again, as in the case of suttee, sporadic instances of the crime may occur, and temporarily rouse in us feelings of horror and questions as to the whereabouts of the police. But we soon quiet down again in the conviction that the phenomenon, as a regular custom of the country, has ceased to exist. It will, therefore, perhaps surprise our readers to hear that this is not the case; and that a form of infanticide (for we can call it by no other name) does still survive and flourish in India under the very eye of our highly benevolent and paternal Government. We allude to the continual and extensive killing off of Native infants that prevails in all parts of the country, as a consequence of their mothers being employed as wet-nurses by the European community. This evil has existed among us, almost unchallenged, for years, and it has gone on increasing with the growth of the European population of India, till we believe the time has come to speak out upon the subject in the name of our common humanity, and to call the attention of the Government of this country to what we cannot help regarding as a serious blot on its administration.

For it is a notorious fact, of which proof could be multiplied if proofs were needed, that, in the large majority of instances, the engagement of a Native woman as wet-nurse to a European child involves the speedy death of her own infant, who falls a victim to the other's need. In a few cases, perhaps, this is inevitable, but, as a rule, the sacrifice is quite an unnecessary one, and is brought about through the criminal carelessness, or worse than carelessness, of the child's relatives. Usually the father, especially if the infant is a girl, prefers that it should not survive, since the cost of its proper nursing is so much deducted from the gains which accrue from the employment of the mother. He therefore neglects it, handing it over to the care of some woman of his acquaintance, probably with the understanding that the sooner it is got out of the way the better; and so the poor little creature quickly pines away, and in a week's time the news comes that it is dead. Often, of course, the great mortality among these children is the result of ignorance as well as neglect; but the fact remains that, in the large majority of instances, the employment of a Native woman as a dhai is the death-warrant of her own child. This state of things has, in fact, become so common all over India that the death of the Native baby is looked upon almost as a matter of course by all parties concerned, and dismissed with a passing sigh. One is fain to cry with Othello, "Oh, the pity of it, the pity of it, Iago!" Is there, then, no remedy for this evil? Are hundreds of innocent children to be unnecessarily sacrificed in this way, year by year, "and nothing said?" What are our missionary bodies, so often the leaders in the cause of philanthropy, doing in this matter? Will they, too, pass by on the other side?

Public opinion in India has hitherto been silent on this subject, partly because little is generally known about it, and partly because few have imagined how widespread is the condition of things that we have described. That something ought to be done, few, we think, will deny; and this is eminently a matter in which Government may be appealed to to interfere, since its intervention would be on behalf of those who are notoriously unable to help themselves. What is required is a short Act providing for the registration of all Native wet-nurses, and for the supervision of their infants (with a view to their proper nourishment) by the nearest Civil Surgeon; such supervision being exercised either directly by that officer himself or indirectly through his subordinates. Some such plan is, we believe, already in existence in the Agra district, where is to be found a considerable colony of Native dhais under the superintendence of the Civil Surgeon of the station, who receives a fee from those who engage their services, and who sees that proper provision is made for their infants. Here, consequently, much less mortality occurs among them, though the machinery employed is, as far as we are aware, of an entirely private and unofficial character. But this is a quite exceptional state of things, and in, we believe, all other Indian stations a very different system, or rather no system at all, prevails. Take Darjiling, for instance. There, whenever a dhai is required, the malli at the local Sanitarium is the purveyor of the article, and has any number of suitable or unsuitable hill women within call in the bazaar and its neighbourhood. The whole arrangement, such as it is, is in his hands; little or nothing is known as to the antecedents of the women themselves; and as regards the fate of their deserted offspring, that is nobody's business. "They perish, and no man layeth it to heart."

OFFICERS OF THE PUBLIC WORKS DEPARTMENT.

(Englishman.)

Officers of the Public Works Department, whose interests are bound up in the fifty-five years' rule, have some cause for alarm at the latest procedure of the Government of India respecting the Secretaryship of the Public Works Department. A despatch, it is said, has been sent home recommending that, with a view of securing greater continuity in the administration of the Department, the holder of this appointment shall remain in office for five years. Now, if it is necessary for the secretary to the Government of India to remain in office for five years what is to be said about Secretaries to the Local Governments and Administrations? Surely continuity of administration is just as necessary in Lahore and Allahabad as it is in Simla and Calcutta, and the application of the principle to all the Secretariats would involve practically an extension of service to a majority of the officers affected by the fifty-five years' rule. No doubt it will be urged that the Heads of the Administrations are responsible for the continuity of their Public Works policy, but in this view the existence of the Public Works member would seem to have been overlooked when the despatch above referred was decided on. The present Public Works Secretary was appointed in April, 1887, and consequently his five years' tenure of the post will expire in April, 1892, while Sir Charles Elliott, the Public Works Member, assumed office on the 6th of January, 1888, and will leave the Council early in 1893. If, therefore, Colonel Pemberton remains for five years the two officers will retire within a few months of one another, and there will be a new member of Council and a new Secretary, and any hope of continuity of policy may be considered at an an end. The present proposed extension of service is particularly inopportune. Sir Charles Elliott may be confidently trusted to carry out his own policy, and if a new Secretary were at once appointed he would be much more likely to advocate a continuance of the Hon. Member's programme with which he would be so thoroughly familiar than a stranger who has been associated with him for a few months only. We are not finding fault with the desire of Government to ensure a continuous policy; in fact, we should be glad to see more stress laid on this principle in Government undertakings, especially in the management of the State Railways. In the case of the North-Western Railway, Colonel Conway Gordon was Manager or Director for about a year and a-half only. Colonel Wallace, his successor, has held the appointment for two and a-half years; and now, we hear, it is proposed that he should succeed Colonel Gordon as Director-General of Railways, and that Colonel Sargeaunt, who took over the Oudh and Rohilkund Railway so recently as January last, should act in place of Colonel Wallace. A general game of post of this description would not be thought of except in undertakings managed by the State, and it would, we think, be a distinct advantage if rules were made to ensure continuity in the management of these undertakings. In the case, however, of the Public Works Secretaryship, the effect of an extension of time to the present incumbent would be exactly the opposite of that set forth as the reason for giving it. What really seems to be wanted is the immediate appointment of a new Secretary sufficiently young to hold office for five years without extension beyond the usual age; he would give up his own office in the middle of the term of office of the next Public Works Member, and there would thus be some prospect of securing a continuity of policy.

BENGAL.

(Oct. 16.)

In Calcutta there will be held a Provincial Social Congress for the Lower Provinces after the next Provincial Political Congress has concluded its sittings.

It is said to have been settled that the outstill system will be abolished in the lower provinces before the official year closes. The loss to the revenue by the measure will be more than a crore and a quarter. It is to recoup this loss that the Bengal Government has decided on imposing an educational cess, and some other minor taxes.

The magistrate of Howrah has granted the application of Captain Hearsey for summonses against Mr. Chesney, the editor, and Mr. Dare, the manager, of the Allahabad Pioneer for libel. The decision involves the attendance of both the defendants, as Captain Hearsey is disinclined to again drop the case against Mr. Dare.

The wife of Kazi Syed Reza Hossein, Khan Bahadoor, of Patna, has offered to execute two wakf deeds with a view to promote the education of Mahomedan young men and women in Behar. By the first of these she proposes to assign an estate yielding an annual nett income of Rs. 900, to be appropriated for the scholastic training of Mahomedan boys, Bharis by birth, wherever they choose to study, leaving it entirely to the discretion of the trustee or trustees appointed to settle with regard to the circumstances of each student the amount to be awarded to him. By the second wakf the founder desires to assign an estate yielding an annual rental of Rs. 250 for appropriation towards the education of Mahomedan girls of Behar. The Lieutenant-Governor has accepted the offer, and tendered his thanks to Musumat Qasiman, wife of Kazi Syed Reza Hossein, Khan Bahadoor, for her public spirit and liberality.

MADRAS.

Dr. Edward Sargent, Suffragan Bishop of Tinnevelly, died at Palamcottah on Thursday night. He had been for some time past growing weak from old age, and on Sunday manifest signs of the end were at hand. Dr. Sargent's death, though long expected, produced a shock throughout the entire Christian community of Tinnevelly. The Church Missionary Society has sustained a great loss by his death. He arrived in Madras fifty-four years ago as lay agent, was ordained forty-seven years ago, and was consecrated Bishop twelve years ago at Calcutta Cathedral. He was loved and respected by all communities. His Jubilee was celebrated four years ago at Palamcottah amid much enthusiasm by pastors, catechists, schoolmasters, and congregations of the Church Missionary Society in Tinnevelly. The Bishop was over eighty years of age. The Rev. John Barton was stated lately to be coming to India in the cold season to relieve Dr. Sargent of some of his duties, and he will probably be the late Bishop's successor. Mr. Barton was the unpaid secretary to the Society in Madras several years ago.

The Madras Preventive Service.—The Preventive Service of the Madras Harbour Trust Board, which now consists of twenty preventive officers, and the work of which is gradually becoming excessive, owing to the increased trade of the port, is to be reorganised, the condition and prospects of the men being improved, and the working of the department in its principal features assimilated with those of the preventive services at Bombay, Kurrachee, and Rangoon. Particulars of the working at those ports have been received by the secretary for the chairman of the Harbour Trust Board, and the matter is to be discussed specially at a meeting of the Trustees. One of the objects is to be the transfer of the Preventive Service now under the Harbour Trust to the Customs Department, as in other ports.

There was a loss of Rs. 49,832 in the working of the Presidency Public Works Workshops in the year 1888-89. The value of the work done was Rs. 117,630 (being Rs. 32,076 less than in 1887-88), made up as follows:—Rs. 82,210 for the Public Works Department, Rs. 31,114 for other Government Departments, and Rs. 4,305 for private parties. The work done for the Public Works Department in 1888-89 was Rs. 2,898 more than in 1887-88, or a little more than 3½ per cent.; and the Acting Joint Secretary to Government, P. W. D., regards this a "satisfactory increase in the work done for the Department, for whose benefit the shops are chiefly maintained." He is easily pleased, for the value of the work for other Government Departments showed a decline in the year of above 53 per cent. The block, machinery, and plant of the workshops was departmentally valued at Rs. 204,235 on April 1, 1888. An allowance of 3 per cent. for depreciation of block, and of 4 per cent. for depreciation of machinery and plant was made, and it was calculated that on the 1st April, 1889, the capital stood at Rs. 198,246. The Government usually borrows at the rate of 4 per cent. per annum, and in order to inform itself as to its success, or otherwise, in competing with private workshops in the supply of its wants, it very properly debits its own workshops with the cost to itself of the money invested. This charge for interest contributes, therefore, to the admitted loss on the year's transactions of Rs. 49,832, which is at the rate of about 25 per cent.! This assumes that the departmental valuation of the plant is accurate. But it is possible that that valuation would not be endorsed by an impartial valuer, and if he were to set down the value at considerably less than two lakhs, the loss on the year's working would be increased proportionately. From the point of view of private enterprise, the Presidency Workshops do not seem to justify their existence. The talent for figures possessed by the Senior Member of Council might be profitably directed to the question of the desirability of carrying on the workships any longer at a heavy loss to the State.

MILITARY INTELLIGENCE.

In connection with the Commander-in-Chief's tour the Quartermaster-General and Military Secretary will join his Excellency at Peshawar on Oct. 29th, and the Adjutant-General at Quetta on Nov, 16th.

It is notified in General Orders that leave may be sanctioned to officers of British and Native cavalry regiments who can be spared from their duties to visit the cavalry camp at Muridki, provided the State is put to no expense.

The Army Mobilisation Committee have now under consideration the question of providing a full supply of medical officers whenever mobilisation may be ordered. It may be found necessary to draw upon those in civil employ, who form the only reserve of surgeons in India.

Some selected regiments from the reorganised cavalry of the Native States will take part in the march-past at the Cavalry Camp of Exercise at Muridki before Prince Albert Victor. The assault-of-arms at the Camp will be on a very large scale; cavalry regiments from every part of India are invited to send representatives.

A curious question has arisen in connection with the promotion of surgeons-major in the Indian Medical Service, to the administrative rank of brigade-surgeon, and of brigade-surgeons to that of deputy surgeons-general. Under an old rule, which had been in force for nearly a century, they claimed the right to refuse promotion, the reason of this being that some of them had to vacate lucrative posts on being given a step in rank. The Government of India, after fully considering the question, have passed orders under which such officers must accept promotion in their turn, and the matter has been referred to the Secretary of State for final approval.

An army circular has been issued giving effect to the changes in the Military Accounts Department, recommended, it will be remembered, by the authorities on the suggestion of the Finance Committee, and sanctioned by the Secretary of State last spring. The changes will have effect from the 11th September. The departmental salaries, as now consolidated, are:—Accountant-General, Rs. 2,500 per mensem; Controller, Rs. 2,200; Military Accountants: 1st Class, Rs. 1,650; 2nd, Rs. 1,400; 3rd, Rs. 1,200; and 4th, Rs. 1,000; Assistant Military Accountants: 1st Class, Rs. 750; 2nd, Rs. 600; and 3rd, Rs. 500. House-rent also will be drawn by all officers below Controllers when stationed at Calcutta, Madras and Bombay. Officers in the Department on September 11th drawing salaries in excess of the new scale will continue to draw them until promoted to a higher grade.

When the question arose of taking the soldier's ball ammunition from him with a view to preventing suicide and murder, the Indian Press gave unanimous support to the military authorities in the orders which were passed. The latest returns show that the best results have followed, the diminution in crime having been most remarkable. The reduction in 1887-88 over 1886-87 was as follows:—Suicide, 17; murder, 16; attempt at murder, 4; attempt at suicide, 10; total 47 cases. Again in the current year the reduction has been 25. We have thus a total reduction of 72 cases in two years. To put the figures in another way, there were 110 cases under the four heads in 1886-87, 63 in the following, and only 38 in the year ended September 30th last. In 1886-87 there were 13 murders committed in the Bombay Presidency, 11 of these being by one Sepoy, who afterwards committed suicide. Out of the 38 cases in the year just closed, 25 were suicides, four of these occurring in the Oudh division and six in the Bombay Presidency. There were only seven murders, of which two were committed at Quetta. This striking decrease is a matter for hearty congratulation, more particularly as no case has been reported in which the men were placed in a position of danger by being deprived of their ball-ammunition. Under the arrangements which now obtain, the cartridges can be issued rapidly in case of emergency; but this is seldom likely to arise in any of our Indian cantonments, even those on the frontier.

LORD DUFFERIN ON INDIA.

His Excellency the Marquis of Dufferin and Ava, K.P., G.C.B., was entertained on Wednesday evening at a sumptuous banquet, in the Whitehall Rooms of the Hôtel Métropole, by the London Chamber of Commerce, Sir John Lubbock, Bart., M.P., F.R.S., D.C.L., LL.D. (President of the Chamber), occupied the chair, and amongst those present, besides the distinguished guest, were Field-Marshal Lord Napier of Magdala, Sir Fitzjames Stephens, Lord Hobhouse, Sir M. E. Grant-Duff, Sir John Gorst, M.P. (Under-Secretary of State for India), Sir James Fergusson, M.P. (Under-Secretary for Foreign Affairs), Lord Denman, Sir G. Baden-Powell, M.P., Sir John Pender, Sir James Anderson, Sir A. Rivers-Thompson, General Sir Donald Stewart, Sir Henry Doulton, Sir R. H. Davies (Vice-President of the India Council), Mr. Roger Eykyn, Mr. Thomas Archer (Agent-General for Queensland), General T. E. Gordon, Sir C. Clifford, Sir R. Rawson, Sir A. Dent, Mr. David Howard, Mr. H. E. Boulton, Mr. J. McFerran, Mr. K. B. Murray, Mr. C. E. Musgrave, Mr. Frank Debenham, and the Rev. A. H. Dunn. The company numbered about 200.

After the loyal toasts had been honoured, Sir M. E. Grant-Duff proposed "The Army, Navy Reserve, and Colonial Forces."

Lord Napier of Magdala, in replying, bore emphatic testimony to the value of the Native Army of India.

The Chairman, in proposing "The Health of the Marquis of Dufferin and Ava," remarked: Few men have served their country more effectively or in more various capacities—(cheers). As long ago as the year 1860 he was appointed by Lord Palmerston, then Prime Minister, as British Commissioner to Syria, and he even then showed that happy combination of tact, charm and wisdom for which he is so remarkable—(cheers). The difficulties of the case were great, but the solution he proposed has worked admirably, and Syria has ever since been one of the least disturbed provinces of the Turkish Empire—(cheers). In 1864 he was Under-Secretary for India, in 1866 Under-Secretary for War, and in 1868 Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster. In 1372 he was nominated Governor-General of Canada—(cheers)—in 1879 Ambassador to Russia—(cheers)—in 1881 Plenipotentiary at Constantinople; in 1882 he was sent on a special mission to Egypt; in 1884 he was appointed Viceroy of India—(loud cheers)—and last December Ambassador to Italy—(cheers). Lord Dufferin has won the confidence and the admiration of many races of men—not only of his English, Scotch, and Irish fellow-countrymen, but of French, Canadians, German, Scandinavian, and Icelandic Canadians, American Indians, Druses and Turks, Hindoos and the other hundred races who make up our Indian Empire—(cheers). He has governed Protestants and Catholics, Mohammedans and Hindoos, followers of Moses, Manu, and Mohammed, of Buddha and of Zoroaster, of almost all the great sacred books—of the Koran, the Vedas, and the Zend-Avesta, as well as of the Bible—and he has been equally successful in dealing with them all—(cheers). We know the responsibilities and difficulties of the great posts he has occupied with honour to himself and benefit to his country—(cheers). He would not wish us to celebrate his visit here by burning down a street, as happened in one Canadian city—(laughter). In another they received him under a series of arches, illustrating the various products of the province, beginning with a prosaic arch of cheeses, and culminating in an arch, or rather, as he described it, a celestial rainbow of lovely young ladies—(cheers and laughter). We cannot emulate the picturesque ceremonies of the Sioux, or the semi-barbaric magnificence of Oriental Courts, but I am sure that he would nowhere receive a welcome more warm or cordial than in the City of London—(cheers). I give you the health of Lord Dufferin. Long may we retain the advantage of tact, his wisdom, and his experience; and long may he live to enjoy what we know he so greatly values, the gratitude and goodwill of his fellow-countrymen in all parts of the Empire —(loud cheers).

The Marquis of DUFFERIN, who was most enthusiastically received, having expressed his personal acknowledgments, went on to say: Although it would be certainly ungracious upon my part if I did not recognise the friendly personal element in the welcome you have accorded to me, I am pleased to think that a wider and more important consideration has brought together this great and influential assembly, and that is a wise and a wide appreciation upon the part of the great promoters of trade and industry by whom I am surrounded of the enormous benefits conferred upon the people of England by their commercial connection with India, and, as a consequence of the supreme necessity of maintaining to all time dominant and unimpaired our ascendency and dominion over our Eastern possessions—(loud cheers). I am well aware that at a convivial meeting like the present it is extremely doubtful whether any allusion to such dry things as statistics or figures should be permitted; but as for four years so large a portion of my attention was devoted to promoting the commercial advantage of her Majesty's Indian fellow-subjects I am sure I shall be forgiven if I take this opportunity at all events of drawing your attention to one very remarkable fact, viz., that the volume of trade of Great Britain with India exceeds the volume of trade between Great Britain and any other country in the world except one, and that is the United States of America, amounting to no less a figure than £64,000,000—(cheers). Again, if we turn our attention solely to the export trade we find that that also holds the same relations to our trade with other countries as did the total volume of trade to which I have alluded—viz., £34,000,000, whereas with France it only amounts to £24,000,000 and with Germany £27,000,000, so that our Indian trade amounts to one-tenth of our whole trade with all the nations of the earth —(cheers). Now that this very satisfactory condition of affairs —a condition of affairs which is mutually advantageous both to India and England—is the result of the stable condition of our political connection with India, may be illustrated by a reference to the trade of Great Britain with another great Oriental country whose population exceeds that of India by many millions. I allude to China, for whereas, as I have already stated our trade with India amounts to £64,000,000, our trade with China only reaches the figure of £17,000,000—(cheers). Again, it is to be remembered that India acts as a most opportune and fortunate reserve whenever any of our usual traders are unable to supply us with those exports upon which the prosperity of our trade, and I may say the welfare of our people, so intimately depend—(cheers). For instance, in the years 1884-85, when Russia was no longer able to export to Great Britain those large supplies of corn upon which we were so dependent, India sent us as many as 600,000 tons of wheat—(cheers). Again, during the cotton famine the increase of raw material jumped up from 1,750,000 in 1860 to 5,500,000 in 1866—(cheers). That India is a good customer to Lancashire is a matter sufficiently well known. At the same time, I am certain that no one who has at heart the interests of the two countries can ever be doing amiss if he takes every opportunity of bringing such facts as these within the purview of public opinion in England—(cheers). Thus in 1888 Lancashire took £21,250,000 for cotton goods, and out of £72,000,000 worth of total exports China only took £6,500,000, Germany £2,500,000, and the United States £2,500,000. Again, in regard to hardware, machinery, and metal, out of £36,000,000 exports to all countries, India took £5,500,000, France £3,000,000, Russia, £1,750,000, and China only £750,000. I am sure, therefore, that I am not guilty of any exaggeration if I say that, in my opinion, were anything to derange or to weaken or interfere with the political relations which now prevail between England and our great East Indian possessions there is scarcely a cottage in Great Britain or Ireland—at all events, there is not a household in the manufacturing districts of the United Kingdom —which would not be made bitterly to feel the consequences of so intolerable a calamity—(loud cheers). Lord Dufferin went on to point out that the time had arrived when private enterprise might advantageously step in to supplement the efforts of the Government to supply India with railway accommodation proportionate to her powers of production and to the needs of her population. He believed, too, that a very considerable opportunity for the expansion of our trade was being prepared for us in Burma—(cheers)—and that, at no very distant date, our chief means of communication with China would be through either the north or east of Burma—(cheers). Alluding to the supersession of the Maharajah of Cashmere, his Excellency said that the course which had been pursued had long been foreseen to be inevitable, and it involved no departure from the general principle of the Indian Government to maintain unimpaired the sovereign rights of the feudatory princes—(cheers). In conclusion, his Excellency acknowledged his obligations to those who had been his colleagues in the administration of the Indian Empire, as well as to the whole body of the Indian Civil Service—(cheers).

Other toasts were spoken to by Mr. David Howard, Lord Hobhouse, Sir James Fergusson, M.P., Sir John Gorst, M.P., Sir R. H. Davies, Sir A. Rivers Thompson, Sir John Pender, and Mr. R. Stewart.

THE OFFICIAL SECRETS ACT, 1889.

The Gazette of India contains the full text of the English Act prohibiting the publication of official secrets without authority—a measure which was introduced on the 10th Oct. into the Supreme Legislative Council. The explanation that it aims only at preventing the communication of plans, models, and similar information to a foreign Government is not altogether borne out, because the Act has another object as well. It is of general application, as may be seen from the following section:—

2. (1) Where a person by means of his holding or having held an office under Her Majesty the Queen has lawfully or unlawfully either obtained possession of or control over any document, sketch, plan, or model, or acquired any information, and at any time corruptly or contrary to his official duty communicates or attempts to communicate that document, sketch, plan, model, or information to any person to whom the same ought not, in the interest of the State, or otherwise in the public interest, to be communicated at that time, he shall be guilty of a breach of official trust.

(2) A person guilty of a breach of official trust shall—

(a) If the communication was made or attempted to be made to a foreign State, be guilty of felony, and on conviction be liable at the discretion of the court to penal servitude for life, or for any term not less than five years, or to imprisonment for any term not exceeding two years, with or without hard labour; and

(b) In any other case be guilty of a misdemeanour, and on conviction be liable to imprisonment, with or without hard labour, for a term not exceeding one year or to a fine, or to both imprisonment and a fine.

Nor is punishment to be meted out only to the actual offender; if it be proved that a newspaper editor applies to a contributor holding an official position for information which is considered an official secret, the journalist also incurs punishment. Thus:—

(3) Any person who incites or counsels, or attempts to procure, another person to commit an offence under this Act, shall be guilty of a misdemeanour, and on conviction be liable to the same punishment as if he had committed the offence.

IT is not Colonel G. T. Pretyman, A.A.G. for Artillery in India, to whom Colonel Tomline left his large fortune; the lucky man is Captain E. G. Pretyman, R.A., who has sent in his papers within a week of hearing of his good fortune.

LORD AND LADY REAY arrived at Gwalior on the 7th October, and were met on the platform by the Resident, Major Barr. After taking tea, the visitors, accompanied by the Resident, drove to see the famous fort, and thence returned to the guest house newly built near the railway station. In the afternoon Lord and Lady Reay inspected the State elephants, which were bedecked with large gold and silver ornaments, and caparisoned with richly-embroidered trappings. The elephants were photographed at the desire of Lord and Lady Reay. At three o'clock his Highness the Maharajah, accompanied by his Excellency Bapu Sahib Jadho, paid a visit to the distinguished guests. It was a private one; and at five o'clock the Governor of Bombay and party drove to the Jaiyinderbhoowan garden, and then proceeded to the Jayiyiblas Palace to pay a return visit to the Mararajah. On alighting from their carriage the visitors were received by the President of the Council of Regency, who conducted them to the Durbar Hall where the Maharajah received them. The Maharajah asked Major Barr to beg Lord and Lady Reay to have their portraits taken; and Lord Reay appeared much pleased at the request. Whereupon his highness himself, assisted by Dr. Crofts, took the photographs he wanted. Lord and Lady Reay were then conducted again to the Durbar Hall, where the members of the State Council were introduced by the Resident to the Governor. The President, on behalf of the Maharajah and the Maharani-Regent, made a short speech, in which he expressed the pleasure felt at the visit to Gwalior, and after a brief and cordial conversation the Maharajah gave attar and pan to Lord and Lady Reay. The latter subsequently paid a visit to her Highness the Maharani Sahiba, and then the visitors took leave and proceeded to the railway station to catch the mail train for Bombay.

THE NORTHBROOK INDIAN CLUB.

WE publish to-day in our columns a reprint of a letter which has appeared in the Home News, drawing attention to the sorry plight into which the Northbrook Club has been allowed to drift. As regards the merits of the case, from a censorious point of view, we do not intend to take part in the fray. The writer hints, in language which can scarce leave a doubt as to its purport, that the fault lies at the door of a high functionary, not unknown within the portals of the India Office. It may be as alleged, that the Club is "the plaything of the Political A.D.C. to the Secretary of State for India." Possibly, too, the charge is well founded, that "it came, from a very early period in its history, to be regarded as an appendage to the India Office." We know not, nor are we concerned to inquire how this may truly be. One fact remains undisputed and indisputable—it is a "much-forsaken Club."

Why is this? The reason is not far to seek. The main idea with which the Club was originally founded was that it should form a link of fellowship between Natives on a visit to this country and Anglo-Indians, including in the term not only such persons as might chance to be connected with the East, but the wider number of those who take an intelligent interest in the affairs of the Indian Empire. Now we challenge criticism when we assert that not a single step has been taken in this direction. Natives come to England, visit the Club, sit in mute and solemn silence in one corner of the room, while the European portion of the community comforts the inner man at an opposite table. Occasionally a Native, who has the good fortune to be acquainted with some Anglo-Indian visitor, finds a means of breaking down the barrier between East and West, and gains an introduction to the sacred precinct reserved by prescription for the English-speaking members of the Club.

Upstairs matters are no better. Desolation and dreariness reign supreme, without an effort to enliven the dull melancholy, the miserable sadness of an abode which has nothing to attract and much to repel. If to the inherent sadness of this scene be added the absence of cleanliness and the presence of dirt, the want of smartness and the existence of slovenliness, it may well be supposed that a visitor to this region of solitude may listen to his own footfall undisturbed by a single rival to share the gloom of the Northbrook Indian Club. What a scene for Dickens, who, had he been alive at the present time, need not have crossed the waters to draw a picture of a dreary waste!

Now as to the remedy. On all sides there is evidence as to the lack of headship and control. Everyone connected with the place appears to do as seemeth good in his own eyes. Cannot—indeed, must not—this laissez faire policy have an end? If the Club is to become worthy of support the first step is to brush away the cobwebs of indifference, and in place thereof to substitute an intelligent and intelligible system of control. Who is to do this, or how it is to be done, is not within our province to suggest; but that some step of this nature is absolutely indispensable cannot be denied. And if so be that Miss Manning's Association will take charge of the Northbrook Indian Club, as "Amicorum Inops" evidently wishes, so be it; but assuredly she will not be wanting in benevolence if she consents to take over this heritage of "dreariness and dirt."

With these remarks we commend to the notice of Lord Northbrook a matter which, if not taken in hand at once, and with vigour, may presently grow into little less than a public scandal.

THE NORTHBROOK CLUB.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE "HOME NEWS."

SIR,—Surely the time has come for the Anglo-Indian Press to speak out on the subject of the miserable condition of the Northbrook Club. The Club is well worth maintaining in efficiency, for it has a useful and beneficent purpose to fulfil; and, under good management, would, I am satisfied, realise all the hopes and intentions of its founders. But under its present direction it has sunk to such a state of discomfort, not to say absolute squalor, that but few of its members now regularly visit it; while the resignations from its never too numerous list are beginning to look ominous of the absolute extinction of the Club as a common ground of meeting between Native Indians and Anglo-Indians. Thanks to the endowment of the Northbrook Indian Society by his Highness the Thakore of Bhownugger, the Club can never become extinct; but it would really be far better to close the Club than keep it open in its present neglected and desolated condition. There are many minor causes for its unpopularity. Owing to some inexplicable want of tact in its manipulation, it came from a very early period in its history to be regarded as an appendage to the India Office. Nothing could be more absurd, but the suspicion roused has long proved detrimental to the interests of the Club among Native Indians visiting London. It has been similarly injured among Anglo-Indians by the statement from time to time repeated in the Native Indian Press that the Club provided them with a cheaper luncheon than they could get elsewhere. The Anglo-Indians who joined the Club did so for sheer sociability's sake, and not for the luncheons it provided, which they could get far better cooked and served, and cheaper either at the Oriental and East India United Service Clubs, or for that at any respectable restaurant. The Club, which is not a political, but altogether a social Club, has also suffered from the uncompromising political spirit shown by it on such occasions as when it refused to give a complimentary dinner to a distinguished Presidential governor, bearing one of the most honoured names in Indian history, on which he has himself shed additional lustre; and again when it was proposed to entertain an eminent English statesman when on the eve of assuming the Viceroyalty of the Indian Empire. But chief among the minor causes of the repulsion everywhere felt to the Club has been the lack of guiding head ever since Mr. R. D. Sethna resigned the secretaryship. Under the most delicate and difficult circumstances, arising out of the absurd dual control of the Club by Sir Seymour Fitzgerald and the Indian Secretary, Mr. Sethna, thanks to his intelligence, tact, and independence of character, managed to administer the Club with the most conspicuous success, financial and social. But he has had no successor, and since he left for Bombay the Club has sunk from one depth to another yet lower of nerveless imbecility, dreariness, and dirt, until now no alternative remains but to mend it, or end it!

The remedy, indeed, is not far to find, and applied with honesty would at once prove effectual. The Club grew out of Miss Manning's National Indian Association, and really is of Miss Manning's maternity. In an evil hour, however, the determination was arrived at to put it on an independent footing; and it was prematurely cut off from its parental stem, and set up to take root and flourish of itself. A foster-father for it had to be created in the Northbrook Indian Society, which from that moment unfortunately took up an attitude of rivalry towards the National Indian Association, and began competing with it, especially in the guardianship of the sons of native Indian gentlemen being educated in England. This is the constitutional weakness in the Northbrook Indian Society and its Club, which is the latent source of all the difficulties in which the latter is now placed. A club was wanted, but not another Indian Society; and had the Club been definitely placed under the control of the National Indian Association by this time, instead of being moribund, it would have been a triumphant success; as would also have been the Association's scheme of guardianship but for the open competition and underground antagonism of the Northbrook Indian Society; in which, while injuring a rival, the latter has not in the least benefited itself. Miss Manning's Association was always more popular than the Northbrook Society. It was not only the first in the field, but is a more earnest body, and far more trusted by the people of India. Many also resented the ingratitude with which it was treated by some of the leading spirits of the Northbrook Society, and this feeling still, and as a matter of natural justice, operates to the detriment of the Society, and particularly of the Club. If the Club was Miss Manning's, it would overflow with native members; but, as the plaything of the Political A.D.C. to the Secretary of State for India, it has never really prospered in point of membership, and would long since have become bankrupt and ceased to exist but for the Bhownugger endowment. The obvious remedy, therefore, is to at once amalgamate the Northbrook Indian Club with Miss Manning's National Indian Association. Those acquainted with the circumstances of the case have long seen that this must be done if the Club is to be saved. Then at once the Club would lose the stigma attaching to it of being an engine of India Office espionage, and its management would fall into practical, in place of dilettante, hands. It would become the headquarters of Miss Manning's Association, and the centre of all the domestic life of the Hindus, Mohammedans, and Parsees resident in London; and Anglo-Indians would always be sure of finding there the intercourse with native Indians they seek in joining such a Club. A complete transformation of the Club would follow; and from being a sham, a delusion, and a snare, it would become a reality and a living link of the most beneficent influence between India and England. The National Indian Association on its side also, freed from all opposition, would be able to greatly extend its operations in the guardianship of Native Indian youth in this country, the good results of which would be far more widely reaching and abiding than even those of the resuscitated Club. The one thing to do, therefore—and it is everything—to drag the Northbrook Club out of the ruts of the Slough of Despond into which it has been allowed to sink, is to amalgamate the Northbrook Indian Society with Miss Manning's National Indian Association; and we hope nothing will be allowed to stand in the way of this consummation. Some jealousy may possibly be anticipated from those who lay a claim to the paternity of the Club. But those who have from the beginning been behind the scenes know that the Club never had a true paternity, its initiation having been a case of simple parthenogenesis, and it was Miss Manning's own creation and hers only. Subsequently much was done for it by others, and with the best intentions, no doubt, however ill-advisedly; but these persons can never be regarded as anything more than the self-constituted foster-fathers of this—in its present condition—much forsaken Club.

GENERAL C. HAMILTON, C.B., Retired List, Bengal Infantry, died at 19, Sussex-gardens, W., on the 27th ult., aged 88. He joined the Indian Army January 27th, 1818; became lieutenant, August 1st, 1818; captain, October 9th, 1826; major, November 26th, 1836; lieut.-colonel, January 19th, 1843; colonel, July 14th, 1853; major-general, November 28th, 1854; lieut.-general, January 30th, 1868; and general, May 16th, 1872. He served in the Gwalior Campaign of 1843-44, and was present at the battle of Maharajpore (bronze star and C.B.); served through the Sutlej Campaign of 1845-46, and was present at the battle of Aloodkee and Ferozeshah (medal with clasp); also with the expedition to Kote Kangra.

MAJOR-GENERAL SIR GEORGE HUTT, K.C.B., died at his residence, Appley Towers, Isle of Wight, on the 27th ult. Sir George Hutt was a distinguished officer of the old Indian Artillery. He served throughout the Scinde-Afghan Campaigns, 1839-44, and the battery which he commanded at the battles of Meeanee and Hyderabad materially contributed, by the excellence of its fire, to the winning of those brilliant victories. On the field of Meeanee Sir Charles Napier promised him the C.B., which was subsequently awarded to him. Sir George Hutt afterwards held the command of artillery in the Persian War in 1857, and later rendered good service to Sir Bartle Frere, the commissioner in Scinde, during the period of the Indian Mutiny. He anticipated the action of the mutinous regiments at Kurrachee by rushing down with his guns to the parade-ground, so that when the mutineers came out they found Colonel Hutt and his guns in front of their barracks with the muzzles of the guns pointed at them half-an-hour before the time appointed for the rising. Sir Bartle Frere frequently expressed his thanks to him, saying that his action had been invaluable in the preventing of bloodshed. The Bombay Government also testified to his services with their thanks on his retirement from the Bombay Army in 1858. In 1865 he was appointed registrar and secretary to the Commissioners of Chelsea Hospital, a post which he held until 1886, when, as a reward for his long and meritorious services, he was promoted to a K.C.B. He was born in 1809, and was the youngest son of Mr. Richards Hutt, of Appley, Isle of Wight, and a brother of the late Right Hon. Sir William Hutt, K.C.B., M.P.

COLONEL W. MATHIAS, lately in command of the 3rd Royal Lancashire Militia, and formerly lieutenant-colonel 62nd Regiment, died on the 24th ult., at his residence, the Lodge, Addlestone, Surrey, aged 80. He was the last son of the late Mr. James Vincent Mathias, of Stanhoe Hall, Norfolk, and served in the Sutlej Campaign of 1845-46 (medal with clasp). He also commanded a strong detachment of British troops at the affair of Buddiwal, and was in command at the battle of Aliwal, where he had charge of the howitzers, being named in despatches and made a brevet-major for his services. Later, Colonel Mathias commanded the Grenadier Company of the 62nd Regiment at the battle of Sobraon, where he was wounded. He retired from the Army in June, 1854, subsequently serving in and commanding the 3rd Royal Lancashire Militia.

COLONEL J. W. J. OUSELEY, Bengal Retired List, died at 10, Inverness-terrace, W., on the 29th ult., aged 90 years. The deceased was formerly Professor of Arabic and Persian at Haileybury College.

GENERAL AMIR AHMAD, the Amir's Envoy in India, whose death at Simla is reported, was one of the soldiers of fortune common in Afghan history. He came of a family which migrated from Bajour to Kabul, and entered the artillery under Dost Mahomed between thirty and forty years ago. He rose to the rank of Colonel, and was posted to Afghan-Turkistan, where Afzul Khan was Governor. Here he made the acquaintance of Abdur Rahman, son of Afzul Khan, and obtained some influence over him. As the latter's father, however, considered this was not altogether desirable, he sent Amir Ahmad to Kabul, where he was reduced to the rank of Captain in the artillery. In the stormy days which followed upon the death of the Dost, he took sides first with Azim Khan, and afterwards with Afzul and Abdur Rahman, and was consequently dismissed from the service when Shere Ali rose to power. He remained in obscurity until Abdur Rahman appeared on the scene in 1880, when he at once joined the new Amir. He and his brother Abu Ahmad were then put in charge of the Kabul gun factories, and Amir Ahmad was eventually sent to India as Envoy. He was a man of quiet, retiring habits, courteous in manner, and cautious in disposition. On arrival in Simla he could, we believe, claim as his playmate in 1838-40 Colonel William Trevor, V.C., who as a child was among the captives taken by Akhbar Khan when the disastrous retirement from Kabul was ordered.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE

IS THE GREAT SPECIFIC FOR CHOLERA, DYSENTERY.

COUGHS, COLDS, ASTHMA, BRONCHITIS.

DIARRHŒA, DYSENTERY. GENERAL BOARD of HEALTH, London, REPORT that it ACTS as a CHARM, one dose generally sufficient. Dr. GIBBON, Army Medical Staff, Calcutta, states: "2 DOSES COMPLETELY CURED ME of DIARRHŒA." From SYMES & Co., Pharmaceutical Chemists, Simla. Jan. 5, 1880. To J. T. DAVENPORT, London.

DEAR SIR,—We congratulate you upon the widespread reputation this justly-esteemed medicine has earned for itself all over the East. As a remedy of general utility, we much question whether a better is imported, and we shall be glad to hear of its finding a place in every Anglo-Indian home. The other brands, we are happy to say, are now relegated to the native bazaars, and, judging from their sale, we fancy their sojourn there will be but evanescent. We could multiply instances ad infinitum of the extraordinary efficacy of DR. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE in Diarrhœa and Dysentery, Spasms, Cramps, Neuralgia, the Vomiting of Pregnancy, and as a general sedative, that have occurred under our personal observation during many years. In Choleraic Diarrhœa, and even in the more terrible forms of Cholera itself, we have witnessed its surprisingly controlling power.

We have never used any other form of this medicine than Collis Browne's, from a firm conviction that it is decidedly the best, and also from a sense of duty we owe to the profession and the public, as we are of opinion that the substitution of any other than Collis Browne's is a deliberate breach of faith on the part of the chemist to prescriber and patient alike.—We are, Sir, faithfully yours, SYMES & CO., Members of the Pharm. Society of Great Britain, Hls Excellency the Viceroy's Chemists.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE is the TRUE PALLIATIVE in NEURALGIA, GOUT, CANCER, TOOTHACHE, RHEUMATISM.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE is a liquid medicine which assuages PAIN of EVERY KIND, affords a calm, refreshing sleep WITHOUT HEADACHE, and INVIGORATES the nervous system when exhausted.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE rapidly cuts short all attacks of EPILEPSY, SPASMS, COLIC, PALPITATION, HYSTERIA.

IMPORTANT CAUTION.—The IMMENSE SALE of this REMEDY has given rise to many UNSCRUPULOUS IMITATIONS. Be careful to observe Trade Mark. Of all Chemists. 1s. 1½d., 2s. 9d., and 4s. 6d.

COORG SAUCE.

The Universal Appetiser,

PRICE ONE SHILLING.

This delicious Sauce is prepared from the receipt of a Nobleman, whose perfect knowledge of the culinary art has obtained for him the nom de plume of the "Modern Lucullus."

The name of this celebrated Sauce—

THE UNIVERSAL APPETISER—

Has been given to it because, in addition to its remarkable flavouring qualities, it possesses the singular property of

CREATING OR RESTORING THE APPETITE,

In fact, it practically realises the French saying —"L'appétit vient en mangeant."

Since the introduction of THE UNIVERSAL APPETISER it has been said, both in Society and at the Clubs, how rarely is the mauvais quart d'heure noticed, every one being so much interested in discussing and enquiring about the new Sauce—

THE UNIVERSAL APPETISER.

THE BROAD ARROW AND NAVAL AND MILITARY GAZETTE

EVERY SATURDAY. PRICE SIXPENCE.

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" has acquired a reputation for early and exclusive intelligence as to Appointments and other service News, for the high character of its articles, the independent course of its staff of writers, and for its earnest support of all measures for the good of the Services. Articles on specially interesting subjects appear from week to week written for the most part by officers of rank and experience, or by men of note in literature who have made the Naval and Military affairs of the country their special study. A series of Illustrated Articles is appearing weekly on Regimental Badges and History. Illustrations with descriptions are also given of new Service Inventions.

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" freely opens its correspondence columns to all grades in the Services. By this means an opportunity for interchange of opinion is afforded, such as is offered by no other Service Journal. Its ordinary weekly issue contains fully one-fourth more matter than the other Service Journals, even with their frequent "supplements."

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" circulates largely throughout India and the Colonies. It is supplied direct to the Army and Marine bureaux of the French, Russian, and other Governments, and it is read extensively by Officers of Foreign Services, especially of the German, French, and American Armies, who desire to acquire a true impression of facts and public opinion in England regarding Military affairs.

LIGHT versus DARKNESS.

"SHAKESPEARE, the Greatest Genius who has ever yet lived," taught the Divineness of Forgiveness, of Perpetual Mercy, of Constant Patience, of Endless Peace, of Perpetual Gentleness. If you can show me one who knew things better than this man, show him!! I know him not!! If he had appeared as a Divine, they would have Burned him; as a Politician, they would have Beheaded him; but God made him a Player.

"He taught that kindness is nobler than Revenge!!"—The Rev. GEORGE DAWSON, M.A.

"Earthly power doth then show likest God's
When mercy seasons justice,
And that same prayer doth teach us all to render
The Deeds of Mercy."—Shakespeare.

JEOPARDY OF LIFE, THE GREAT DANGER OF DELAY.

You can change the Trickling Stream, but not the Raging Torrent.

WHAT EVERYBODY SHOULD READ.—How important it is to have at hand some simple, effective, and palatable remedy, such as ENO'S "FRUIT SALT," to check disease at the onset!!! With little trouble you can change the course of the trickling mountain stream, but not the rolling river. It will defy all your tiny efforts. I feel I cannot sufficiently impress this important information upon everybody. Let ENO'S "FRUIT SALT" be your companion; under any circumstances its use is beneficial, and never can do harm. When out of sorts, Restless, Sleepless, yet unable to say why, then your whole body is out of order, but you do not know where it may end; it is a real necessity to have a simple remedy at hand. The Pilot can so steer and direct as to bring the ship into safety, but he cannot quell the raging storm. The common idea when not feeling well is: "I will wait and see; perhaps I shall be better to-morrow;" whereas, had a supply of ENO'S "FRUIT SALT" been at hand, and use made of it at the onset, all calamitous results might have been avoided. What dashes to the earth so many hopes, breaks so many sweet alliances, blasts so many auspicious enterprises, as untimely Death?

HEADACHE AND DISORDERED STOMACH.—"After suffering nearly two and a half years from severe Headache and Disordered Stomach, and after trying almost everything, and spending much money without finding any benefit, I was recommended to try your 'FRUIT SALT,' and before I had finished one bottle I found it doing me a great deal of good, and now I am restored to my usual health; and others I know that have tried it have not enjoyed such good health for years.—Yours truly, "ROBERT HUMPHREYS, Post Office, Barrasford."

SUPERIOR TO ALL OTHER SALINES.—"Dear Sir,—Having been in the habit of taking your 'FRUIT SALT' for many years, I think it only right to tell you I consider it a most invaluable medicine, and far superior to all other saline mixtures I have ever tried. I am never without it, as I find it possesses three most desirable qualities—pleasant to the taste, promptly efficacious, and leaves no unpleasant after-effects. I do not wish my name to appear, but you are welcome to make use of this testimonial if it is of service.

The Secret of Success.—Sterling Honesty of Purpose. Without it Life is a Sham!—"A new invention is brought before the public, and commands success. A score of abominable imitations are immediately introduced by the unscrupulous, who, in copying the original closely enough to deceive the public, and yet not so exactly as to infringe upon legal rights, exercise an ingenuity that, employed in an original channel, could not fail to secure reputation and profit."—ADAMS.

"I used my 'FRUIT SALT' freely in my last severe attack of Fever, and I have every reason to say I believe it saved my life."—J. C. ENO.

SOLD BY ALL CHEMISTS. PREPARED ONLY AT

ENO'S "FRUIT SALT" WORKS, POMEROY STREET, NEW CROSS ROAD, LONDON, S.E. (BY J. ENO'S PATENT.)

NATURE RULES ALL THINGS.

In every form of weakness use Scalded Milk.

ENO'S "VEGETABLE MOTO," occasionally a desirable adjunct to ENO'S "FRUIT SALT," as a simple and Natural Laxative, Stomachic, Blood, Brain, Nerve, Bile, or Liver Tonic; or, in other words, when taken as directed, their action is as simple as a tomato, whole meal bread or porridge (with scalded milk); you cannot overstate their great value in causing a natural, slow, and gentle action of the Liver; by that means you keep the blood pure and prevent disease. In advanced Life they are everything you could wish. Read Practical Hints on Constipation, Indigestion, Liver Diseases, Impure Blood, Sleeplessness, Nervous Headache, Treatment of Gout and Rheumatism, how to Prevent Consumption, Jaundice, and other disastrous diseases by Rules for Health and Longevity, &c., in a pamphlet given with each Bottle of ENO'S "VEGETABLE MOTO." They can be used for any length of time without fear or harm."

DR. SPENCER'S ASTHMA CURE.

MR. D. FITZPATRICK, of Drumcree, Killucan, Westmeath, Ireland, writes:—"Thank God the two bottles of Dr. Spencer's Asthma Cure got from you cured me of the Asthma. I am over sixty years of age, and for the last twenty-five years I have suffered as much from Asthma (I believe) as any other Asthmatic could suffer, often for nights without ever lying on a bed, but I thank the good God I can now sleep as comfortable as I could wish for. I only wish every poor Asthmatic sufferer would give your cure a trial, for it is a great boon."

The public are hereby notified that the above remedy is prepared from a recently improved formula of Dr. Spencer (which has nothing to do with any other formula) and is sold, under his name, by us, who are the sole prorietors, and in no way connected with any other person or firm. We will send our Pamphlet "Asthma, its Treatment and Cure" (Third edition) by E. Edwin Spencer, M.A., M.D., &c., post free, on application he Calcutta Review for October reached us a day or two ago, and a glance at its contents shows that the number more than sustains the reputation which this old and favourite publication is again achieving. The Review is rapidly regaining the position which it . . . . there is no fear of the Indian Review, or the Asiatic Quarterly rivalling it in public favour.—Statesman, October 1886.

. . . . The best service which I ever rendered in India, or, indeed, for India, was the establishment, single-handed, of the Calcutta Review, which has done far more for Indian literature than anything I have written under my own name —J. W. KAYE, Athenæum Club, une 25, 1872.

The Calcutta Review has given us valuable articles on the army. Some from the pen of Sir Henry Lawrence, who wrote with the spirit of prophesy, of the coming storm of which he was one of the noblest victims.—Address of the C.-in-C. at the U.S. Inst. of India

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

MONDAY, NOVEMBER 11, 1889.

General Intelligence.

[By Overland Mail.]

The Overland Mail brings us letters and advices from Bombay to the 25th Oct.; from Allahabad and Madras to the 23rd Oct.; and from Calcutta to the 23rd Oct.

The Mamlatdars' Indemnity Bill and the Official Secrets Bill were passed at the meeting of the Legislative Council held on Oct. 17th. The Viceroy made some strong remarks on the necessity for the latter measure with reference to the recent publication of an official paper relating to Kashmir "in a garbled and truncated form."

The Simla Legislative session was to close on Thursday, Oct. 24th. General Chesney, as Senior Member of Council, will preside in the absence of the Viceroy.

The Select Committee on the Indian Railway Bill begins work at Calcutta in December. The measure will probably be passed early in March.

The meeting of the Executive Council on Oct. 17th occupied members till 4 P.M. Several questions of military importance were considered, among others being the mobilisation plans and the special defences. The outlay upon the former will be larger than at first arranged for, but this will be met by curtailing the expenditure this year upon special defences.

The discharged Bombay Mamlatdars will be pensioned off on reaching the age of fifty-five, and their pensions will then be calculated on their present pay, as that is the utmost emolument they can ever attain under Government.

A committee, consisting of the Judge Advocate-General, Captain Temple, and an officer of the Quartermaster-General's Department will shortly assemble to frame the necessary rules and regulations under the new Cantonment Act.

It is notified in the Gazette of Oct 19th that in the forthcoming competition for the Indian Civil Service, which takes place in June next, the regulations as to age will be unaltered, that is to say, the examination will be confined to candidates between the ages of nineteen and seventeen.

The Secretary of State has intimated, in reply to the despatch of the Government of India regarding the tenure of the Secretaryship of the Public Works Department, that the fifty-five years' rule must be enforced except in cases where there are very special circumstances which would justify its being set aside. The Secretary of State has granted one year's extension in the Public Works Secretaryship to Colonel Pemberton, whose case was represented as a special one by the Viceroy.

The question of reverting to the old arrangement under which the Indo-European Telegraph line was managed separately from the Indian Telegraphs will come up for consideration shortly. The work is too heavy for the Telegraph Department, which has not been increased in strength to meet the extra strain.

The Local Governments will be asked to send in their replies to the queries about the excise administration as quickly as possible, with a view to the whole question being disposed of by the end of the year.

The Viceroy and Lady Lansdowne left Simla on Oct. 22nd on their cold weather tour. Lord Lansdowne will hold a big durbar at Quetta, the first held there by any Viceroy, as the one that was to have been held by Lord Dufferin in the autumn of 1887 was put off owing to cholera. The Khan of Kelat, the Jam of Lus Beyla, and all the important chiefs and Maliks in the Biluchistan Agency will be present.

Arrangements have now been made under which Prince Albert Victor will leave Madras for Rangoon on December 16th. His Royal Highness will arrive at Calcutta on the 3rd or 3th of January.

The Nizam has expressed a desire that no expense or trouble should be spared in order to give Prince Albert Victor a fitting reception in Hyderabad. An expenditure of two lakhs has accordingly been sanctioned for the two day's festivities.

The Duke and Duchess of Connaught will pay a visit to Calcutta in January as the guests of the Viceroy.

Lord Connemara visited the Khojak Pass on Oct. 19th, accompanied by Sir Robert Sandeman, and returned to Quetta in the afternoon.

The Commander-in-Chief, accompanied by Captain Holland, Aide-de-Camp, left Simla for Bombay on Oct. 21st.

Sir George Greaves will succeed the Duke of Connaught next spring as Commander-in-Chief of the Bombay Army. Some two months ago there was a general impression in military circles that Sir Evelyn Wood was to be the man; but this idea has evaporated, and if there is anyone now in the running except Sir George Greaves it is General Martin Dillon.

Sir Steuart Bayley was to leave Darjeeling on Nov. 1st for a short tour in Sikkim before returning to Calcutta.

Major-General Æneas Perkins is to succeed Sir Charles Gough at Lucknow, and will take up the command on April 1st.

The Director-General of Indian Telegraphs will probably attend the International Telegraph Conference in Paris next spring.

Mr. H. Barnes, officiating Under-Secretary in the Foreign Office, joins the Viceroy at Umballa. Mr. Cunningham arrived at Simla on October 20th to take over charge from Sir H. M. Durand.

Mr. Ney Elias, the head of the Anglo-Siam Commission, has left Simla en route to Rangoon, where his colleagues rendezvous about Nov. 15th. It is not known as yet where the Siamese officials will join them.

Colonel Ben Williams has been invalided on medical certificate to England, but is too ill to move at present from Mussoorie.

Colonel Saward will succeed Colonel Prettyman as Assistant Adjutant-General for Artillery at Army Headquarters.

On Mr. Adams leaving Sitapur for the Benares Commissionership Mr. M. L. Ferrar will move into his place from Fyzabad, leaving the latter Commissionership open for Colonel Fendall Currie. Mr. J. White, Collector of Benares, is about to move to another district—probably Banda. The vacancy may go to Mr. Twigg, who is at present officiating as Commissioner in Benares. Among the districts already allotted to returning officers are Mirzapur, which falls to Mr. W. Crook, and Jaunpur to Mr. W. Holmes.

It is practically settled that Dr. W. A. Thomson, Surgeon-General of Her Majesty's Forces in India, will be granted a two years' extension of office. Dr. Thomson was only appointed to the post in February last, and thus he would have had to vacate it after one year's tenure only.

Mr. G. B. Scott, of the Survey Department, who has lately been employed on a survey of the Wards Estates in

Digitized by Google

Bengal, has been placed in charge of the new Cadastral Survey of Upper Burma.

THE Meingoon Prince effected his escape from Pondicherry in disguise by the French steamer Tibre on the 12th October and is on his way to Saigon, Cochin-China. Although under the surveillance of the French police and the English Consular Agent, nothing was known of the fact until the return of the Tibre.

LIEUT. ROOKE, who was wounded in the pursuit of a marauding Afghan at Chaman, has had the bullet extracted from his neck, and is progressing favourably.

NOTES.

H.R.H. PRINCE ALBERT VICTOR has met, as anticipated, with a most enthusiastic welcome in India. The steamer Oceana, which carried him to Bombay, arrived there at 8 A.M. on Saturday last, after a very fast passage of four days and eight hours from Aden. The account of the landing, of the addresses, and of the festivities will be found in the telegraphic summary in another column. The Prince will have much to endure in the way of dinners, receptions, and balls, but he has no doubt inherited his father's powers of endurance, and he is young; but it is satisfactory to learn that he will not have to undergo the terrible boredom of receiving addresses from all the Municipal and other "bodies" in India.

ACCORDING to the Times correspondent, he made a very pretty speech in reply to the address of welcome presented to him at Bombay, making some graceful allusions to the reception which that city had previously given to the Prince of Wales; and the Daily News correspondent telegraphs that, after attending Divine Service at Kirkee yesterday morning, he held an informal reception in the afternoon of the leading Natives, with whom he conversed generally about the state of the country and "other matters."

WHAT can be the object of Italian banditti in planning a seizure of the Indian mails? An account from Turin states that such an attack was so planned lately, and gives the following details:—"The police received notice of the affair, and carabineers were immediately despatched to a point between Bardonnoche and Salbertrand. Policemen and carabineers also entered the mail train before it left Turin, and all was thus made ready to give the robbers a warm reception. Near Rosta the engine-driver beheld a 'danger' signal and stopped. Shortly afterwards a band of men, with muskets in their hands, who had been displaying the sham 'danger' lights, jumped out of a copse and approached the train. The leader of the band, however, had evidently seen some of the carabineers, for he whistled, and the brigands all disappeared speedily. The country around Rosta and Avigliana was scoured by the carabineers without success." This is circumstantial enough in details, but then all is not fact sometimes which comes from Turin. Italy the beautiful is not always the truthful. The Indian mails carry, of course, many Bank bills and Home remittances, but these would be difficult plunder to dispose of by banditti. The object, too, could hardly have been to obtain possession of the letters of the National Congress to Mr. Bradlaugh, detailing India's latest grievance. The thing is a mystery, and perhaps a —well, let us say—non e vero

THE Pioneer gives vent to a real Indian grievance. It declares that, so far as the North-West Provinces are concerned, there is almost an absolute stoppage of privilege leave to Civilians working in the plains. Those whose pleasant lot is cast in Naini Tal obtain leave without difficulty, but for officers in the plains the stereotyped reply to applications for the privilege leave they had earned has been that "no leave can be granted except furlough or medical certificate."

THE same journal says:—"The gradation list of Covenanted Civil Servants attached to the North-Western Provinces and Oudh has just been published, corrected up to the 1st of October, 1889. There are 198 Covenanted Civilians on the lists, exclusive of Native Civilians appointed in India. Dividing them into quinquennial groups from the year 1856 to the year 1885 we find 171 men distributed as follows:—I.—1856-60, 15; II.—1861-65, 38; III.—1866-70, 26; IV.—1871-75, 39; V.—1876-80, 28; VI.—1881-85, 25. The marked diminution in numbers as we proceed from the higher to the lower groups is contrary to rule, precedent, and common sense. The only parallel we know of was the condition of the Madras Staff Corps a few years ago, with its troops of colonels standing above a thin sprinkling of captains and subalterns. The normal rate of recruitment for a service of the strength above given should be not less than 14 per annum, and at this rate the numbers in Group VI., making good allowance for death vacancies and invaliding, should be over 60, while it is only 25, and the numbers in Group V. should be not less than 40 instead of 28."

THE Statesman learns there is every probability of a gold mining company being floated in Calcutta at an early date. Mr. C. T. Berrill, the railway engineer, is the discoverer of the auriferous tract, and it was on the strength of his representations a short time ago that a number of gentlemen in Calcutta determined to provide the necessary money for securing the ground and for having it properly examined. The task of reporting upon the property was undertaken by Mr. T. Bosworth Smith, late mineralogist to the Government of Madras, who now, after a careful investigation, states that the indications of gold are superior to those which have led to profitable mining in the Kolar gold-fields in Mysore. The property is situated in a small valley called Sonai Pet (literally "belly of gold") in Chota Nagpur, a district which, according to Dr. Ball, an authority on the geology and mineralogy of India, is known to be gold-bearing. The surface and mining rights over some fifteen or twenty square miles of land have been secured on a fifty years' lease. Messrs. F. W. Heilgers and Co., of Calcutta, who are themselves believed to be the largest subscribers, have accepted the secretaryship, and will pioneer the new company.

A "CORNER" in tea is threatened in the Kangra Valley if the following, which is going the round of the Indian Press, be true:—"A certain well known financier in the Punjab is expected in Kangra to endeavour to get all the gardens in the valley to join together and sell him their entire crops for a period of ten years at a fixed price. His object is to start a large company in London, who would have in this way the monopoly of this valley's tea. The contract is to be for cash down on delivery at Palampore. No doubt a good many will be inclined to join if the price offered is fair."

NATIVE piece-goods merchants in Cawnpore now appear to bear a general grudge against things Continental, particularly in regard to the imitation turkey-red dye which so lately brought some of them to grief. Since the prosecution under the Merchandise Marks Act in August last, they have somehow got hold of the idea that the object of the Act is to prohibit the import of all German goods, and they feel it unsafe to meddle with fabrics dyed locally with foreign dyes. The trade in Cawnpore-dyed fabrics still flourishes, only it has passed into the hands of petty retail men and dyers who are willing to take any risk. All such imitation turkey-red materials, however, now bear a properly descriptive label, and so long as buyers are satisfied it is difficult to see how the agents of home dyers are to bring back the trade they have lost by the introduction of German anilines into the Indian bazaars.

MAJOR-GENERAL E. F. CHAPMAN should ask to be saved rom some of his friends on the "Society" journals, who are advocating his claims to further employment by the War Office, in consequence of his having to vacate his artillery command at Aldershot on account of promotion. A military contemporary, better informed, points out what is well-known to the army in India, that General Chapman up to date has had a very fair share of the good things of the Service. In thirty-one years of military life he has had eighteen of almost uninterrupted Staff employment and emoluments. When he resigned the Quartermaster-Generalship of India he was accommodated by the Authorities at home with a purely British command at Aldershot—a favour seldom bestowed on an Indian officer. He has, therefore, as our contemporary says, "scored already very largely."

And we think that the Service generally will agree with the remarks which follow:—"If now, in course of promotion in the old Bengal cadre, he has obtained his general's rank, it is, strictly speaking, wholly ridiculous to expect the Home Government to provide for him further. Either he should look for an appointment in India, or, if his health will not permit him to take that, he should appeal to the India Office for employment at home. But, beyond that, General Chapman's immediate appointment to a billet at home can hardly be a matter demanding very urgent advocacy."

Sir Lepel Griffin a Benedict! What a flutter such an announcement would have caused in the dove-cots of Capua a few years ago! But now in Simla, amongst those who made the mountain beautiful, and of whom he sang,—

Au revoir to the ladies—farewell to them—never!
Who are most of them pretty, and all of them good;
Whose modest example and saintly endeavour
Should win us to virtue if anything could, his name has become, perhaps, only a pleasant memory of the past. But "sweet will be" still "the memory of the dream," and there will be many friends in India to-day to join with friends here in wishing him and his bride, as we do, all the blessings that the years can bring.

LATEST INTELLIGENCE.

INDIA.

Calcutta, Nov. 10.

The Oceana, with Prince Albert Victor on board, arrived at Bombay at eight o'clock yesterday morning. The town was taken by surprise, as the arrival had not been expected till the afternoon. The Duke of Connaught and Lord Reay went on board immediately, and, on landing, an address of welcome to the Prince was presented by the Municipality.

In the course of his reply, Prince Albert Victor said the memory was still fresh in his mind of the enthusiastic reception formerly accorded to his father, and now on landing at that beautiful city he at once felt that he came not among strangers, but among those whom he was entitled to regard already as friends. He felt assured that the Empress would highly appreciate the loyalty displayed towards herself and the kindly greetings offered to him. The Prince, accompanied by his uncle, then left for Poonah by special train. Preparations are being made throughout India to celebrate in a fitting manner the Prince's tour. At Poona yesterday and to-day were devoted to official receptions. On Tuesday there will be a grand military parade and State ball, and on Wednesday a torchlight tatto. On Thursday his Royal Highness leaves for Hyderabad. A public meeting has been convened in Madras for Tuesday to appoint a reception committee, and to collect subscriptions. Lord Connemara gives a State reception on the 19th inst., and a State ball on the 21st. The Madras Club ball has been abandoned. The Prince leaves Madras on the 22nd for Mysore. After visiting Seringapatam and other historic battlefields, he will attend keddah operations, which have been prepared on an unprecedented scale for capturing a large drove of wild elephants. Then he will visit Bangalore, Madura, Tinnevelly, and Travancore, where he stays several days shooting big game. He proceeds thence to Trichinopoly, where he stays four days, and then returns to Madras, where he embarks for Burma. He will spend Christmas at Mandalay. During his six days' stay in Calcutta his Royal Highness will be entertained at three balls. The Bengal Club also gives a dinner in his honour.

The Prince's arrangements have been so unsettled, and so frequently changed that it has been found difficult to fix in advance a definite programme for public receptions en route. There has, therefore, been little or no opportunity hitherto for any demonstration of active enthusiasm.

The Viceroy and General Roberts are still on their frontier tour. They left Attock on the 1st and proceeded to sail down the Indus in a flotilla consisting of Native flat-bottomed boats, fitted up with thatch houses and gaily decorated with flags. They successfully navigated some rather dangerous rapids, anchored below Khusalgarh, and arrived next evening at Kalabagh, a hill city, which was illuminated in honour of the Viceroy. They arrived in Kafirkot on the 5th. Lady Lansdowne then returned to Lahore. Next day the Viceroy, after visiting some interesting scenery, rode to Lakki. On Saturday he started for Pezu. He visits the Gomul Pass on Tuesday.

The special purpose of the Viceroy's sail down the Indus was to consider the suggested proposals for the construction of a third bridge over the Indus.

A small force of Tibetans having established an outpost on the Garwhal frontier, in order to levy transit duty on traders crossing the Nieti Pass, a detachment of the 3rd Goorkhas has been despatched to destroy the outpost.

A recent Government resolution relaxes the existing rules prohibiting British officers from visiting territories beyond the border. This close border system has worked very prejudicially in regard to collecting accurate information and obtaining correct surveys of trans-border States and tribes. This was especially marked in the last Black Mountain campaign, and might under less favourable circumstances have led to serious disaster. Local precautions will still be enforced by granting permits only to specially-selected officers, to avoid all possibility of creating border complications. This new departure adopts the policy of a minimum risk compatible with the maximum advantage of supplying the Intelligence Department as far as possible with complete detailed frontier information. In many respects this is greatly defective at present, chiefly owing to the stringent restrictions hitherto enforced.

The chief priest, or mohunt, of the Tirupati Temple, has been committed for trial, charged with breach of trust and criminal misappropriation.

Tantia Bheel's appeal has been admitted.

One of the Bombay municipalities has been dissolved by the Government in consequence of the indifference shown by the inhabitants in municipal affairs.
